WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION

WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION is the world's No.1 independent guide to buying and owning hi-fi and home cinema. We have one aim – to help you buy the best kit for your cash so you can get more from music and movies

This month's hot news

TEMPTED BY A DVD player for under £100? It's difficult not to be, especially as we've seen them on sale for just £29.99. But what do you get for such little cash? Are these sleek-looking budget players worth buying, or are they better as doorstops?

As this month's Supertest reveals, even the most basic models are a step up from your VCR. But you get what you pay for, and many of the cheaper units are compromised, especially in the face of a winner which you can get for around £80.

Which got us thinking: how little can you get away with spending on a decent home cinema system? The answer, we reckon, is around £750 – much less with some judicious shopping. Even our recommended £899 system can be yours for less than £750 if you hunt hard enough. Credit cards at the ready? Check out page 62 for three systems that offer serious entertainment value.

Picture perfect Panasonic

Panasonic TX-32PD30
32 in Nicam stereo TV

FOR
The best TV picture quality you can buy; well equipped, too

AGAINST
Er...nope, you got us

VERDICT
A truly glorious TV; if you've got the cash, buy one tomorrow

AS WE SAID in our recent Awards issue, we didn't get the Panasonic TX-32PD30 in time for consideration in our 2003 gongs. Shame, because this cracking set would have walked away with the top honours: it's that good.

Simply put, the Panasonic has the best picture we've seen on any TV. It's part of the company's new Acuity range, a picture-optimised, well-equipped 32in design that is ideal for the home cinema enthusiast (for why, see panel). It's an apt name: in the visual sense, acuity is a measure of the resolution of the eye, and the TX-32PD30's ability to resolve fine details is its trump card. It works by expanding the number of pixels per line of screen information to a whopping 2300, more than double the number of a conventional set. This combines with specialist picture processing designed to increase the number of horizontal screen lines from the standard 625 (as is sent by the UK broadcast TV system, PAL) up to 833. More lines and more pixels means more resolution, or detail, per square centimetre of screen.

But wait, there's more. The all new Quintrix SR picture tube (SR standing for Super Resolution) has black-tinted front glass to enhance the black level, and so boost contrast. A revised shadow mask allows the electron beam (basically, the bit that knits the picture on the screen) to pass through more effectively, which increases brightness. Improvements to the focus of the beam itself enhance both contrast and detail, while further tweaks to the electron gun (which generates the beam) are aimed at enhancing sharpness into the corners of the screen.

All this performance and it's a bit of a looker too; what more do you want?

> "Simply put, the Panasonic has the best picture we've seen on any TV"

And it doesn't even stop there. Panasonic has topped things off with a raft of digital processing modes aimed at icing an already very tasty televisual cake. Picture content is constantly analyzed in 'real time' by a 10-bit processor, which uses motion detection to reduce 'smearing' in rapid image sequences, while a digital comb filter aims to cut down 'noise' between areas of black and white screen information. We've commented before that in some sets, the end result of all this digital processing can be less than beneficial, but in the Panasonic's case, it all works superbly well; once you've set the TV up, you'll rarely find the need to reach for the remote to tweak things any further.

Enough already. You know that we love this TV; you know that it has a brilliant picture. Let's talk examples. Check out the tester's favourite, a high-quality animation like Disney's Treasure Planet. The blues of the 'space' backgrounds are simply astonishing, leaping from the screen with a consistency and intensity of colour that astounds: there's no trace of visible noise, no trace of shimmer, and the computer-generated 'ships' appear remarkably three-dimensional in the foreground.

But animation always looks good, you cry. Fair enough. Let's move on to, say, The Fifth Element. Cue vivid colours, remarkable black depth, beautifully drawn edges and curves: it's just gorgeous, end of story.

The sound? In truth, no more than fair, but then 'mere' stereo sound seems somehow beneath so majestic a picture. You ought – no, must – use this TV as part of a proper home cinema system. Picture quality this good deserves nothing less.

Inputs for virtually every system requirement

PANASONIC HAS THOUGHT long and hard about the socket provision on the TX-32PD30, and in home cinema terms, we've very little to complain about.

You get four Scart sockets, two of which offer compatibility with RGB video, so you can easily connect in a DVD player and digital TV set-top-box. But if you can, we'd urge you to use (or buy) a DVD player with component video output sockets, and preferably the ability to provide PAL and NTSC progressive scan video. The Panasonic will cope with both signals readily, and it makes a terrific difference to your DVD picture quality.

Any gripes? Just one. If you don't have an external surround system, but want to use component video connections for your DVD player, you'll need to use a Scart cable to send stereo sound from your player into the TV, because oddly it doesn't have phono audio inputs.

DVD PLAYER

Pioneer DV-565A £250 ★★★★★ Sept 2003

This terrific universal player will spin SACD and DVD-Audio discs to a high standard, and has component video connections to provide optimum picture quality when linked into the Panasonic. It will generate progressive scan video, but only with NTSC DVD discs.

SPEAKER PACKAGE

KEF KHT 2005.2 £800 ★★★★★ Aug 2003

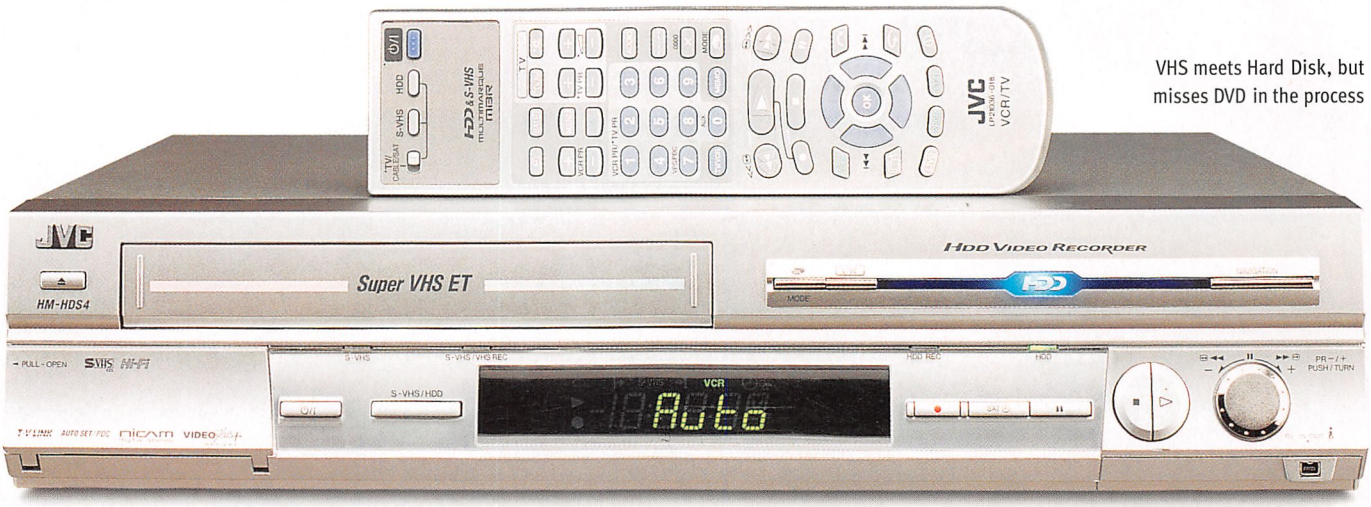
There's no more appealing compact speaker package than this. The excellent KEFs provide terrific surround performance thanks to revised drive units that offer clean, crisp treble and an incisive, detailed midrange. The bass is potent, too.

AV RECEIVER

Pioneer VSX-D812S £330

★★★★★ Oct 2003

An absolute steal of a budget receiver. It works best in 6.1 form, so budget for an extra £100 to buy one more KEF 'egg', to be used as the centre-rear speaker in a full 6.1-channel surround set-up.



VHS meets Hard Disk, but misses DVD in the process

JVC introduces old to new

JVC HM-HDS4
80 Gb HDD/VCR
£700

FOR
Excellent replay from VHS and HDD; 80 hours HDD recording; easy to use

AGAINST
No DVD player or recorder; price; suitability

VERDICT
A good choice if you must have a VCR, but a DVD/HDD combo is a better choice

TECHNICALLY SPEAKING

Recording formats	HDD, S-VHS, S-VHS-ET, VHS
Max recording time	80 hours HDD, 8 hours VHS
Input/Output	scart in/out, phono video in, phono video out, S-video in,s-video out, DV in/out (4-pin.IEEE 1394), S-video
VHS Deck	S-VHS/VHS PAL standard
Dimensions (hxwxd)	98x435x357mm
Weight	5.3kg

IS VHS REPLAY essential to you? If you answer 'yes' then the JVC HM-HDS4 could be the machine for you. Otherwise we reckon you should consider a DVD/Hard Disk recorder instead.

This JVC combines VHS – the format that just won't die – with a hard-disk drive – the format that looks set to inherit the time-shift recording throne. It's an upgrade of the HM-HDS1 and offers improved recording capacity. The 80GB hard-disk drive (HDD) translates to up to 80 hours recording time, though best quality is via SP mode, which allows a more modest 20 hours of recording using a bit rate of 8.6Mbps.

> "VHS – the format that won't die – is combined with HDD, the format set to inherit its crown"

The beauty of the JVC's HDD, in addition to the recording space, is its flexibility. For example, you can record a TV show while watching the playback of another already-recorded programme at the same time. In other words you can watch a recorded episode of Eastenders, and at the same record an episode of Coronation Street. It's also possible to record to the HDD while watching a videotape.

The Live Memory feature means even less chance of you missing your fave programme. The HDD constantly caches the broadcast you are watching to the hard drive and allows you to pause a live TV show and then resume watching from the point you left. You can also view the recording at 1.5 times the normal speed to catch up to the real-time broadcast schedule (or simply to avoid Denis Norden's 'jokes' during It'll Be Alright On The Night).

The VHS duties rely on a Super DA-4 head system and features include BEST (Biconditional Equalised Signal Tracking) picture system, NTSC playback and a choice of SP or LP recording. BEST assesses the condition of the tape and the video heads and automatically makes adjustments to optimise the picture quality. SP offers the best quality replay, but we expect most users to stick to HDD for most recordings and reserve VHS for archive (or old tape/memory-lane) purposes.

The DV input/output is a big attraction for MiniDV video camera users, as it allows the transfer of footage – in its native form – on to hard disk. This approach means you avoid the quality loss usually associated with digital compression. You can then edit multiple MiniDV cassettes and archive to S-VHS or back to the camera.

All in, this machine is to your first VCR what a Ford StreetKa is to a Model-T Ford: much simpler to drive and far slicker round the edges. Replay in VHS and particularly in S-VHS is up there with the best machines we have seen, but – and this is a big but – the picture never challenges DVD replay. The same goes for sound reproduction – you get Nicam stereo but it's no match for the full 5.1 surround sound experience from a DVD video disc.

LEADING RIVALS

Toshiba RD-XS30SB
£699 ★★★★★ Awards 2003
No VCR, but award-winning HDD/DVD-recorder a performance bargain

Panasonic DMR-E50
£400 ★★★★★ Awards 2003
DVD recording only, but good value with excellent performance

We can't fault replay from the HDD though. In its shortest (SP) mode it is remarkably similar to the original TV programme and ideal for recording off-air.

Usability also gets top marks. Initial set up is simple, while the on screen display is clear and the built-in Help function works well. The remote is initially tricky (too many fiddly, small buttons for our liking) but after a while you get the hang of it.

The JVC HM-HDS4 delivers all it promises but our main problem's the price. It may be available for under £600 if you shop around , but £150 buys an excellent VCR, and the rest of your cash can go towards a DVD/Hard Disk recorder. That way you get the superior performance of DVD, HDD recording flexibility, plus a machine for your VHS tape collection.

FORMATS EXPLAINED

Super VHS ET

VHS vs S-VHS vs DVD

There's no doubt S-VHS offers superior performance over VHS, and that's down to the respective resolution figures. The original format provides 250 horizontal lines but S-VHS offers 400. The more lines the better the picture. But for optimum results you need S-VHS video tape with a higher quality magnetic coating than basic versions, enabling the storage of extra information in the same space.

However, the king of horizontal resolution is DVD video, which offers 575 lines, and consequently looks better than S-VHS. It also offers digital audio over S-VHS's analogue efforts so you get better sound, too. This helps explain why DVD is one of the fastest selling home entertainment products of all time.

TEAC combo sounds a treat

TEAC Legacy 600
Micro system

FOR
Fine detail and musicality; very attractive package

AGAINST
Slight sibilance on radio; overall presentation a little warm

VERDICT
A very accomplished system, and a viable alternative to Denon's all-conquering D-M31, which just edges it on style and balance

IN THE RECENT WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION Awards the D-M31 again took top honours, reinforcing Denon's dominance of the micro-system market. But there are alternatives, and this TEAC package, the entry-level model in the company's Legacy series, is one of the very best.

Like the Denon, the TEAC can be bought as a CD receiver for use with your own speakers for £250, or – as here – complete with the matching two-way LS-600U speakers for £330. Yes, these speakers lack the style and pedigree of the Mission-made Denon SC-M51s, but they do the job well enough with the TEAC receiver.

The CR-L600 CD receiver delivers 30W per channel, and includes an FM RDS/AM tuner with 30 presets on each band and automatic tuning, tone and balance controls, an auxiliary line-in and two tape loops, and an optical digital output to feed CD-R/RW or MiniDisc decks. Facilities extend to a sleep timer and a dimmer for the display, and there's also a range of pseudo-surround effects which are probably best avoided. The remote control may not have the style of the rest of the system, but it's certainly comprehensive.

The balance of this system is warm and generous, and while it lacks a little of the detail and sheer exuberance of the Denon, some will prefer its slightly lush, smooth sound. Yes, there's a little sibilance with spoken word radio, but in general terms the TEAC sounds big and involving, as adept when powering out mainstream chart rock and pop music as it is with a large-scale classical work. The kind of levels it can deliver cleanly will be more than sufficient for all but the largest rooms, and while the sound hasn't quite the presence and sense of space the D-M31 can deliver with a concert-hall classical recording, there's good scale and weight provided the speakers are used relatively close to a rear wall. Vocals are clear and attractive, and instruments have realistic timbre, even if their finer nuances tend to be glossed over.

Yes, comparisons with the Denon are inevitable, but the TEAC is far from being an underdog.

Treble trouble not a lot of bother for SB1s

NHT SB1
Speakers
£299
★★★★½

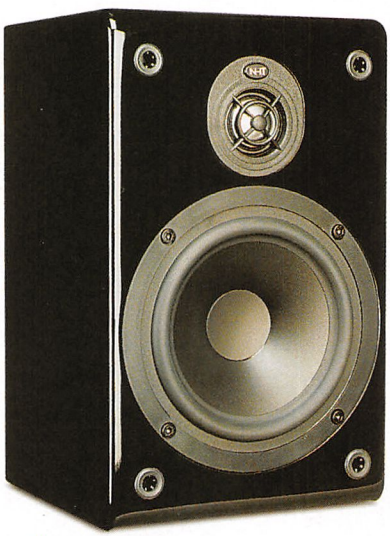
FOR
Timing; good levels of detail; tight, musical bass; finish; compact

AGAINST
Cabinet size limits ultimate bass depth; treble occasionally lacks finesse

VERDICT
Lovely-looking monitor offers a neat solution if you are looking for discreet, yet quality sound

NOW HEAR THIS. Yes, that really is what NHT stands for and it's a bold command for such a little speaker. Fortunately the SB1 has the sonic character to justify its maker's name, but first let's optimise its excitable personality.

Freespace is not the ideal location: to find the perfect spot, place the cabinet flush with the wall and, little by little, move it away. We gained best results at around 15cm distance, but you should experiment to find your set-up's sweet spot. Closer to the wall the speaker gains bass weight but loses definition.



Place NHT's SB1s 15cm from the wall for best results

The SB1's agoraphobia is good news for those searching for a discreet speaker. Available in a gorgeous black or white high-gloss finish, the 17cm-deep cabinet is inconspicuous, and wall mounted – where it should sound better than most rivals – it will go almost unnoticed.

Once you've positioned your SB1s you should give them a good warm-up. This smoothes off – but does not entirely diminish – the occasionally brash treble: spinning Mary J Bilge's Love & Life set made higher frequencies stand out. Not a critical problem, but avoid partnering these speakers with bright-sounding electronics.

Otherwise the perky little SB1 is a great listen. Timing is up there with the best at this price and tunes leap along with verve and vitality. With the exception of the slightly forward treble, the aluminium dome tweeter and polypropylene driver integrate well and detail levels are above average – the NHT digs out vocal nuances with proficiency. Bass weight is respectable for the size of speaker and the SB1 keeps a firm grip on lower frequencies. Not even deep hip-hop presents a problem.

It loses a star because of the lack of treble refinement, but overall this is a great, discreet speaker. It sounds fun in stereo guise and should perform well as part of a home cinema set-up, where a subwoofer would add depth to its already tight bass.

Fusion is a great multi-tasker

Tube Technology Fusion CD64
CD player
£1980

FOR
A fluid and unforced presentation, excellent finish, versatility

AGAINST
Add £150 for a decent mains lead

VERDICT
A terrific machine that deserves serious consideration

WE'VE REVIEWED THREE generations of Tube Technology's Fusion CD player and this one is clearly the best. A good thing too, as prices have risen considerably: the last version cost £1350, so the CD64 has to go some to justify itself.

Tube Technology calls the Fusion a tri-mode CD player. That's just a fancy way of saying that this player can function as an integrated machine, transport and stand-alone digital-to-analogue converter. The latter means that owners can plug-in digital sources such as MD and DAB to take advantage of the Fusion's upmarket circuitry. There are BNC and optical digital inputs and outputs, and the Fusion's DAC can be synchronised to an external transport.

That DAC makes the CD64 special: instead of the standard-issue Burr Browns, this player uses Field Programmable Gate Arrays (FPGA) for number crunching. These chips are programmed with a custom set of instructions that enable them to be used in different roles; the Fusion uses three as digital receiver, DAC and digital filter.

The CD64 delivers sound with an unforced fluidity that makes most rivals sound mechanical. There's plenty of detail, making it easy to follow individual instruments in a complex piece like The General's Daughter's soundtrack. Dynamics are expressive, though when used with the standard mains lead the player lacks a bit of punch. Spend another £150 on Tube Technology's bespoke cable and any doubts vanish.

We like this CD player a lot: it looks distinctive and sounds lovely. Make sure you buy that tailor-made lead, though.

Elac Cinema 0.5 ESP
5.1 speaker package
£300

FOR
Much of the quality of the Cinema One at £100 less; neat design

AGAINST
Can be a little light in the bass by the standards of bigger packages

VERDICT
A sensible exercise in cost cutting, the Elac is lucid, involving and highly competitive at its budget price

A YEAR AGO we enjoyed the Cinema One 5.1-channel system from German company Elac, noting that it provided an attractive sound from what are very tiny speakers – they stand just under 12cm tall – and a matching subwoofer. And this new package, undercutting the Cinema One by £100, uses the same speakers, although the terminals are springclips now, not binding posts. That means they're best used with thinner cable, although the superior terminals are retained on the centre speaker.

The subwoofer has been changed, too, as part of a cost-cutting exercise: the model here uses a 17.5cm driver and a 45W internal amp in place of the 20cm/55W unit in the more expensive system. But the building options are the same: here we're testing a 5.1-channel system, but the Cinema 0.5 ESP can also be bought as 6.1 and 7.1 packages at £350 and £400. Wall-brackets are provided, floorstands are £45.

Elac doesn't make its satellites work too hard: their bass rolls off at 100Hz, leaving all the low stuff to the subwoofer, which can only be used with a line input from a suitable AV receiver or processor. And while the attractive and involving presentation we noted in the Cinema One system is still there in the upper frequencies, there are times in movies such as the Lord of the Rings series that the subwoofer seems to be working a bit too hard for comfort.

But for all that, the Elac Cinema 0.5 ESP is a good speaker package for the money. Just don't expect too much of it, and you won't be disappointed.

Heavenly home cinema

Parasound Halo C2 and A52
Multichannel processor and power amplifier
£5200
★★★★½

FOR
Remarkably flexible, beautifully made and terrific to listen to

AGAINST
Very little, save that you only get five amp channels as standard

VERDICT
Pricey but excellent kit with fine sound and huge appeal

AT THE PINNACLE of multichannel home cinema, the two-box processor and power amplifier combination rules, and it's a niche of the market dominated by some of surround audio's most respected names.

To which we should now add the name of Parasound. With its Halo range, this American company has attempted to shift itself upmarket, and as we said in our August review of the £8500 C1 and A51 combination, it's been successful. The Halo C2 and A52 pairing is simply an attempt to broaden the range's appeal down to more attainable price levels, although five grand is still a lot of cash by anyone's standards.

> "Whatever your action movie poison, the Halos deliver a muscular, cinematic sound"

However, examine the Halo pairing in detail, and you'll find much to justify the outlay. The £3500 C2 processor dispenses with the gorgeous (and costly) LCD screen that adorns its pricier sibling, but otherwise, it's a very similar bit of kit: there's much the same extensive socket fit, comprehensive decoding/processing capability and impressive configuration flexibility.

That's the brain side of things; the brawn is dealt with by the £1700 A52 five channel power amp, which you can read more about in our panel.

So, let's talk sound. Naturally, it's powerful, composed, and utterly unruffled by dynamic peaks; that's the whole point of the exercise, after all. Whatever your action movie poison, the Halos deliver a full, muscular and truly cinematic sound that's always involving, if a little 'warmer' than some European ears might be used to. However, what surprises, and impresses, is the sheer detail the combination can dredge from your soundtracks. The sound can be astonishingly 'real' at times – Ian Holm's voice in The Fifth Element sounds almost uncanny.

You'll note that the Halo pairing costs much the same as Arcam's AV8 and P7. Which one is better? Hard to say; it's an issue of preference, not performance, like comparing Glenfiddich to Glenmorangie. The only issue we can find fault with is that Arcam gives you seven channels of amplification for your money, while Halo only musters five. Otherwise, consider this Parasound pairing a must-hear.

BenQ very much for this mini marvel

BenQ Joybee 120
Digital audio player/recorder £95

FOR
Superb performance and features for its small size and price; easy to use

AGAINST
PC only

VERDICT
BenQ's affordable, desirable Joybee 120 is the best ultra-portable MP3 player we've tested to date

ANOTHER MONTH, ANOTHER firm enters the increasingly crowded MP3 player market. But BenQ – an offshoot of Asian computing giant Acer – makes a cracking start by squeezing in with the smallest digital device we've tested.

The Joybee 120 weighs a piddling 24g and measures a mere 5.7x3.8x1.2cm. It comes in sweet-wrapper shades of green and orange, or a simple silver finish. That tiny shiny case houses 128MB of memory – enough for two hours of MP3 or WMA tunes at a decent compression rate – plus an FM radio and a microphone: the BenQ can also be used as a voice recorder, and record its radio reception, too. It also works as a data transfer device – though as with its digital music functionality, this applies to PC users only – and its rechargeable battery runs for up to 16 hours per charge.

The Joybee is simple to use: connect it to a PC's USB port via the cable supplied and it registers as a removable hard disk. It comes with a suite of music recording, editing and transfer software, but it's also easy to drag-and-drop pre-recorded/downloaded files directly into the disk's folders.

Bigger than actual size: Joybee's 120 is a pocket marvel

File transfer is fairly zippy – it supports USB 1.1 – and tracks are easily navigated via the Joybee's intuitive menus.

It's not just features BenQ's crammed in a lot of: the Joybee sounds much better than its size would suggest. There's a warmth and general listenability to its delivery that other ultraportables lack, and even the headphones aren't too ropey – though you'll be better off upgrading to our Award-winning Sennheiser PX100s. FM radio performance is less convincing, but it'd be fine for catching up with the news.

BenQ's Joybee 120 can't match bigger digital devices like the iPod for capacity or sound quality, but it's the best ultra-portable player we've heard – or seen.

FOR
Affordable; safe styling; nice colours and detail

Lacklustre sound; only average picture

VERDICT
Sharp's 32-JF73H is an affordable but ultimately average set that failed to either incite or excite us

THIS IS ONE of Sharp's last 'standard' TV sets – the company has just announced it's leaving the market to spend more time with its LCD and plasma families.

So, has it saved the best until last? Not in terms of looks: the sober silver styling – featuring side-positioned speakers that broaden the 32-JF73H's widescreen appeal – is safe but doesn't stand out in the company of all-too similar TV sets.

Connections include three Scarts with a standard set of AV outputs. And while the on-screen menus won't win any prizes for presentation, they're easy to use through colour-coded buttons from the unremarkable remote.

Performance plusses include well-balanced, natural colours that effectively capture the variety of shades that form the picturesque landscape in The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers without confusion or blocking. There's a fair level of detail, too.

The JF73H lacks the definition that separate the best sets from the rest. Images look sedated by comparison: the Sharp is missing the superior contrast levels that create another dimension to images. Sonically, there are more drawbacks, with a detectable level of sibilance present even at low levels. And at high volumes low frequencies have a habit of dropping off while the sound is harsh at the top end.

The 32-JF73H is an acceptable, affordable set, but Sharp has left the CRT TV market with a whimper not a bang.

Cyberhome's £50 DVD belter

Cyberhome CH 400

FOR
Compact styling; affordable; reasonable performance

AGAINST
Performance limitations you'd expect at this price

VERDICT
Best £50 DVD player we've seen: ideal for use as a second player

WE'RE NOT SHORT of budget DVD players this month and here's one more that snuck in a little too late to be included in our 12-player Supertest (see p36).

The first thing that strikes you about the Cyberhome 400 is its compact size, and at only £50 there's a price tag in proportion. So is it the ideal option as a secondary player for a small room?

Given the price, the quality of both build and performance says it is. The safe silver styling is neatly finished and uncluttered by the usual over-design that often afflicts cut-price products, while the smooth mechanism is clunk free.

The equally diminutive remote may be overcrowded, but it's surprisingly easy to use and even comes with glow-in-the-dark keys. The remote only works with tiny CR2025 calculator batteries, though.

As you might expect, there are few connections: a single RGB Scart, standard AV outputs and a coaxial digital output for increased audio potential. And the set up is just as basic, with a limited selection of standard video and audio adjustments – including a range of ineffectual sound effect presets – that are straightforward and simple to follow.

As well as offering a cut-price DVD solution, the CH 400 is also compatible with CD, VCD and MP3 encoded discs. Obviously at this budget level, corners have been cut that affect the level of performance, but even in comparison with some more expensive budget models this little player makes a big impression. Unlike many of its rivals, the CH 400 produces images that are well balanced, natural and relatively free of the dreaded digital noise. On the downside, edges are universally soft, especially in scenes with a lot of detail. But as far as watching a film from bed or giving your kids their own player is concerned, this Cyberhome is a more than acceptable solution – especially considering the modest cost.

The price plays a big part in our rating of the CH 400. In pure performance terms we'd advise spending a little more on a class leading £100 player like Toshiba's SD 330E. But as a secondary player this Cyberhome model represents great value for money, with a picture that easily outperforms its peers at the same price.

Home cinema in a box? Jamo be there

Jamo DVR50/ A325PDD
Home cinema in a box
£699

FOR
Style and performance: good with music and movies

AGAINST
Not without competition in the home cinema-in-a-box market

VERDICT
There are plenty of systems like this on the market, but few with the minimalist style, or the performance, of this Jamo package

SO JAMO IS just a speaker company? Wrong – this set-up is based on the company's A3 speakers, designed by the Danish all-female Smedegaard and Weis design team, and the DVR50 DVD receiver can be bought with one of three A3 packages, ranging from £599 to £799 all-in.

The midrange system on test here uses four A325 speakers, an A3CEN.5 centre and the A3SUB.5 active subwoofer. The speakers use inverted dome tweeters and a 10cm mid/bass unit, with twin units in the centre speaker and a 20cm driver and a passive radiator in the sub, driven by a 100W internal amp. All of them – including the sub – can be used free-standing or wall-mounted; stands cost £79 a pair.

The DVR50 incorporates an RDS FM/AM tuner and 5x50W digital amplification, offering both progressive scan and RGB Scart output, optical and electrical digital inputs, three line-ins and a single tape output. It'll also play DiVX discs made on a home computer.

Most people are going to use it to play commercial CDs and DVDs, and this package does both well. Picture quality is very good, making the most of the busy visuals of the Lord of the Rings movies, thanks to subtle colour rendition and fine sharpness, while the receiver and speakers crash out the soundtrack in impressive style. CDs playback also pleases, with a combination of balance and power that's good for a system of this kind.

The Jamo is well worth auditioning: it's not the very best home cinema in a box we've seen at this price, but it offers a great blend of style and performance.

VERDICT
Offers a great picture but this performance – if not style – is available for less money

BEYOND THE STARS. It's not just the title of Martin Sheen's 1989 space movie, but also a wise way to look at this review. Despite the three-star rating, we genuinely like Bose's Lifestyle 18: you can buy its level of home cinema performance for less money, but it may appeal if you're happy to pay extra for style and convenience.

The package includes a poster that guides you through the connections – an excellent idea of which rival manufacturers should take note. There are five "Virtually Invisible" speakers, the Media Centre and the Acoustimass module. This translates to five 7.6cm high satellite speakers – not invisible, but certainly discreet – plus a DVD/CD player and AM/FM tuner, and lastly a subwoofer with internal amp.

The Acoustimass sounds best with the twin drivers pointing away from the wall and the satellites should be at ear level. Bose says its technology enables the centre satellite to sit on the floor, but we'd advise you to place it higher up.

Display connection choices comprise S-Video, composite or component video adapter – but there's no Scart. The adapter offers the best picture performance.

Normally at this stage of a review we cover balancing the speakers – but not with the Lifestyle 18. The system confirms you have connected the speakers in the correct order, but there is no test tone option. If you want to optimise sound performance you must part with a further £300 and buy Bose's ADAPTiQ system (see panel). This isn't ideal.

Nevertheless, we spin some discs and the Bose's picture swiftly improves our moods. Movement is smooth and detail levels are excellent. The player executes skin tones especially well and faces carry an enjoyable realism. In fact we have no complaints about the image, but we are less enthusiastic about the sound.

There's decent midrange detail and even quietly spoken dialogue is easy to follow, but the treble sounds a touch curtailed – this robs delivery of some excitement. The bass module produces a decent thump, but to gain full marks we would like it to sound more taut, as extra control would boost both film and music replay. As it stands, CD replay is decent but not up there with a dedicated stereo system.

However, in its favour, the Lifestyle 18 offers multi-room capability. You can buy an extra pair of powered Bose speakers for £300 and listen to the tuner in one room and the CD player in another. Once more, convenience at a cost.

But if you don't mind paying the presentation premium, your extra pounds buy a smart system and a smart picture. If Bose could throw in the ADAPTiQ for free, tweak the sound, and knock a few quid off the price, the Lifestyle 18 could be on course for a more stellar success.

SETTING IT UP

Bose's ADAPTiQ system

THE SYSTEM ADJUSTS the audio settings to your particular habitat – taking into account factors such your room furnishings. A hard room (one that includes a bare floor and little furniture) can cause treble problems and a warm room (with thick carpets and lots of soft furnishings) tends to cause bass issues. You insert the CD, stick on a pair of special headphones and select up to five likely seating positions. The whole process takes around 10 minutes.

This all sounds intriguing but our problem is the cost. Here's a tip, though: Bose dealers will rent the system to you for a week – you give them £300 and they return £250. Better, but not free.

FOR
Slimline style; good radio tuner; interesting techonology

AGAINST
Lacklustre sound; no DVD-A/SACD support

VERDICT
Stylishand innovative, but can't match top slim or regular rivals

PANASONIC'S ENTRY-LEVEL slimline receiver – designed to partner the company's similarly skinny DVD players, like the DVD-S35EBS – is just 52cm tall, but crams in five amp channels (each capable of 35W), along with Dolby Digital/Pro-Logic II and DTS processing, a 30-preset FM RDS/AM tuner.

Three line-ins and a tape loop are provided, along with composite video switching, and there are two optical digital inputs and one electrical, plus a preout to feed an active subwoofer. Completing the package are a comprehensive if not always intuitive remote control, speaker terminals on binding posts for the front left and right speakers and springclips for the rest, and a headphone socket. What you don't get is any provision for multichannel audio from DVD-A/SACD players or any on-screen menus to aid set-up – in fact dialling in speaker levels and distances requires the use of both front-panel and remote control buttons, which is a little awkward.

There's nothing fundamentally wrong with the Panasonic, and used at low levels it's almost quite attractive, but it lacks the grunt and dynamics to make movies exciting even at modest volume settings, while the way in which effects are steered to the various speakers is rather vague. Action movies sound flaccid and lacking in conviction, while dialogue and effects clarity on more subtle material leaves something to be desired, too. With music in stereo, too, the Panasonic will be shown the door by even entry-level two-channel amps.

The SA-XR15 could compete against a relatively modest home-cinema-in-a box system, but when you consider another £300 or more will be needed for suitable speakers, after which you'll still have to buy a DVD player, this receiver doesn't really stack up, either on price or performance.

Active operation means there's less scope for system development

VERDICT
The Active 20s are top class active speakers that rival many pricier conventional combinations for outright ability

THESE ATCS ARE no ordinary speakers. Each distinctively styled rock-solid cabinet houses a power amp – sorry, make that two: a 200watt unit for the mid/bass driver and a 50-watt amplifier for the tweeter. The advantages of active configuration are plentiful. There's no passive crossover to spoil signal purity and the amplifier works directly into the drive unit rather than through metres of cables. Points against include low perceived value – after all, you don't see the power amps – and the fact that the user can't play around with different power amp options.

However, take a serious listen to these 47cm tall speakers and messing about with the system will be the last thing on your mind. These ATCs dig extremely deep into a recordings and pull out low-level subtleties dangerously close to the level of our reference £18,000 Krell FPB400cx/PMC IB2s power amp /speaker combo. It doesn't matter what kind of music you play, the Active 20s will deliver it with class-leading honesty and insight. They can unravel the complex weave of Massive Attack's 100th Window better than any rival we've tested.

Two power amps sit inside each speaker

However, don't think these speakers are all about analysis. The thing that makes them great is that they can assemble all the detail into a cohesive, convincing whole. Dynamics are also excellent as is stereo imaging.

You've just got to remember that with 250 watts per side, these are still mid-sized monitors, which means ultimate bass extension won't worry similarly priced floorstanders such as KEF's Reference 203s. Still, the ATCs' breathtaking speed and definition in those low frequencies are adequate compensations, and they deliver low bass with more authority than any other compact rival we can think of. Only obsessive bassheads will be disappointed.

If you want to hear exactly what's on your CDs, these ATCs are a great buy. They won't make a bad recording sound good but that's not their fault – these are honest speakers and we love them for that.

Cyrus steals the show

Cyruslink wireless multiroom hi-fi range leads a raft of key launches at the What Hi-fi? Sound and Vision show

WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION SHOW 2003
OLYMPIA HILTON LONDON
26-28 SEPTEMBER 2003

Toshiba's sub £1k projector (top); thousands enjoyed product launches

CYRUS STOLE THE WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION show with the launch of Cyruslink, a multiroom hard disk server system that's due on sale now. Cyruslink will beam music wirelessly around your home and is controlled by a touch-screen remote.

At the heart of the system is the Linkserver, a high performance multi-room enabled hard disk server. This upgradable unit offers sufficient storage capacity for around 400 CDs, or 4000 discs using MP3 compression, and draws on the company's QDAC technology to optimise sound quality.

The Linkserver can be integrated with Cyrus's existing range of stereo and AV units and can be used to play music out into a number of zones. Two versions of the unit, one with a 160 GB drive costing £3000 and a £5000 unit with a massive 250 GB drive, are available. Music is played back remotely via client units called Linkports, costing £650 each, which can be connected to the main server wirelessly over IEEE 802.11 networks or via a cabled Ethernet link.

Cyrus Linkwand software can be used to control the whole system – it's compatible with the latest generation of Windows CE PDAs and webpads and costs £200.

Toshiba previewed its latest LCD and plasma TVs at the show, plus its first sub-£1000 LCD projector. The company also revealed its new entry-level DVD recorder: the DR-1, with DVD-R/RW/RAM recording formats, is expected to cost around £400.

Some of the biggest queues of the weekend were outside the Bose room. The company was running an AV demo and showing its new 3-2-1GS DVD system, which create surround sound from just two speakers. The £1000 system comprises a DVD/CD player with AM/FM tuner, two front speakers designed to deliver a broad and spacious sound, and a subwoofer.

NAD distributor Lenbrook launched the PSB Platinum range of loudspeakers, featuring the T8 and T6 floorstanders, C4 and C2 centres, an M2 bookshelf speaker, the SS10 subwoofer and S2 biwirable dipole rear speakers.

The latest addition to Arcam's DiVA range, the £700 DV78 DVD player, was also on show. Claiming to have all the video performance of the DV88 Plus at a more affordable price, the new player supports both interlaced and progressive video outputs including PAL progressive scan. Attention has also been paid to CD performance via the analogue outputs to please audiophiles.

Speaker manufacturers enjoyed much attention with Acoustic Energy, Wilson Benesch and Spendor launching new ranges.

Gadget lovers were also in heaven with plenty of intriguing products available to buy. One of the cleverest was the Clear FM indoor aerial – claimed to perform almost as well as an outdoor antenna, it's neatly disguised in an A4 picture frame!

Sony drew plenty of crowds with its massive display, which included its cracking range of LCD and plasma TVs, plus its latest home cinema in a box solutions.

Jamo displayed its first plasma TV and a new home cinema system. The DVR50/A325 (see First Tests) wowed the crowds with its punchy sound and sleek styling by a team of female consultants.

One of the highlights of the show was the new Cyruslink – the latest multiroom hi-fi system

Deal of the month

Onkyo is offering a bargain bundle deal on its sleek CR-305TX CD/receiver system. The £225 unit – which won a favourable four-star rating in September as the £300 CS-210 micro system with compact speakers – is now available as a package (pictured) with Jamo's £259 E800 bookshelf speakers for just £299 – saving £185.

New-look Zen takes on the iPod

AS WE PREVIEWED in August's digital music feature, Creative has cut the size – and relative price – of its MP3 jukeboxes and players to take on the double threat of Apple's iPods and cut-price ultraportables from iRiver, BenQ and others.

Going up against the iPod is the new Zen NX jukebox. Slimmer than the original Zen (though still slightly larger than the Apple), the NX model offers a whopping 30GB of storage – enough for 8000 songs – for just £250. It also supports the latest, fastest USB 2.0 file transfer standard and has a host of new features, including a sleep/wake-up timer. We'll be testing the Zen NX next month.

Also getting the NX treatment is Creative's MuVo ultraportable. The updated, 128MB player now features a blue, backlit LCD display together with scroller wheel to aid track navigation. An integrated microphone means the MuVo NX can also be used as a voice recorder, while its new M-Port compatibility means it can be hooked up to compatible Creative speakers using just the USB port.

Out of the revamped range, the new kid on the block is the stylish MuVo² (£200). This pocket-sized unit is packed with a 1.5GB micro disk, which has the capacity for 850 WMA or 425 MP3 tracks. It also features a four-band equaliser and a backlit LCD display, while the accompanying rechargeable lithium-ion battery will provide up to 10 hours of on-the-move listening.

All three products are PC-only and come bundled with Creative's new MediaSource software for file conversion, editing and transfer.

Naim draws on reference kit for '5' line

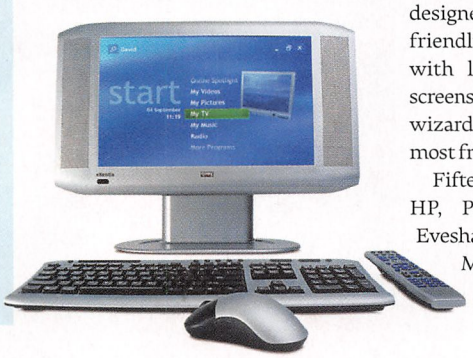
BRITISH HIGH-END hi-fi specialist Naim is edging closer to the mass market with its latest CD player. The £825 CD5i is based on Naim's reference CD players, using the drawer and transport suspension from the CDX2, and the replay and control software from the CDS3. Unusually for Naim, the CD5i will feature phono as well as DIN sockets.

Naim is also launching the £699 5i integrated amplifier, which offers 50Watts per channel continuous output, with peaks into 1ohm of almost 500Watts.

The PC that thinks it's a TV

A NEW BREED of PCs that can be controlled via remote control handset has arrived, boasting a range of features that its supporters hope will see your computer rather than your TV becoming the centre of your home entertainment system.

The PCs run the new Media Center 2004 version of Microsoft's Windows XP operating system. This software provides an interface to core features including analogue or digital TV, a PVR (personal video recorder), DVD player, digital music jukebox and a photo management system – plus standard computing functions and options like a digital radio tuner.



Media Center PCs have also been designed to be more living-room friendly. For example, most come with large widescreen LCD flat screens and there's a video calibration wizard to ensure you're getting the most from your picture.

Fifteen PC companies – including HP, Packard Bell, Elonex and Evesham – have already announced Media Center PCs, priced from £1000-£2500, with big names like Dell to follow shortly.

FREEVIEW GROWS TO 2.1M

New research shows 45 percent of UK homes now have access to multichannel TV services via Freeview, satellite or cable with Freeview gaining a place in 2.1m households since its launch a year ago. In a separate move, Sky has dropped the £10/month subscription charge for users of its Sky+ satellite receiver/hard-disk recorder who sign up for more than one of its premium movie or sports channels.

EPSON ADDS TO PROJECTORS

Epson's expanded its range of dedicated home cinema projectors with two new LCD models – the £999 entry-level EMP-TW100 and the progressive-scan enabled EMP-TW200 (£2199). Both are out now.

PURE'S NEW DAB RADIO ALARM

Pure Digital has launched an alarm clock version of its popular Evoke digital radio. The Tempus 1 offers the DAB benefits of the Evoke 1 including easy tuning, crackle free reception and exclusive DAB stations, but adds sophisticated but simple to use alarms, touch sensitive Snoozehandle, backlit night time clock display and a timed record function.

SHARP TO GO FLATSCREEN ONLY

Sharp has revealed it will withdraw from the traditional CRT TV market by 2005 to concentrate on LCD TV production. It predicts more than half of all TVs will be flat panel by 2007, possibly including go-anywhere wireless technology as found in its new 15in £1400 LC-15L1E (right).

New gear

KEF aims to follow the success of its Product of the Year-winning KHT2005.2 speaker package with the KHT5005 setup. The cast aluminium column speakers feature two 75mm long-throw bass drivers and KEF's Uni-Q mid/high-frequency driver arrangement. The £1200 package will be available in early November.

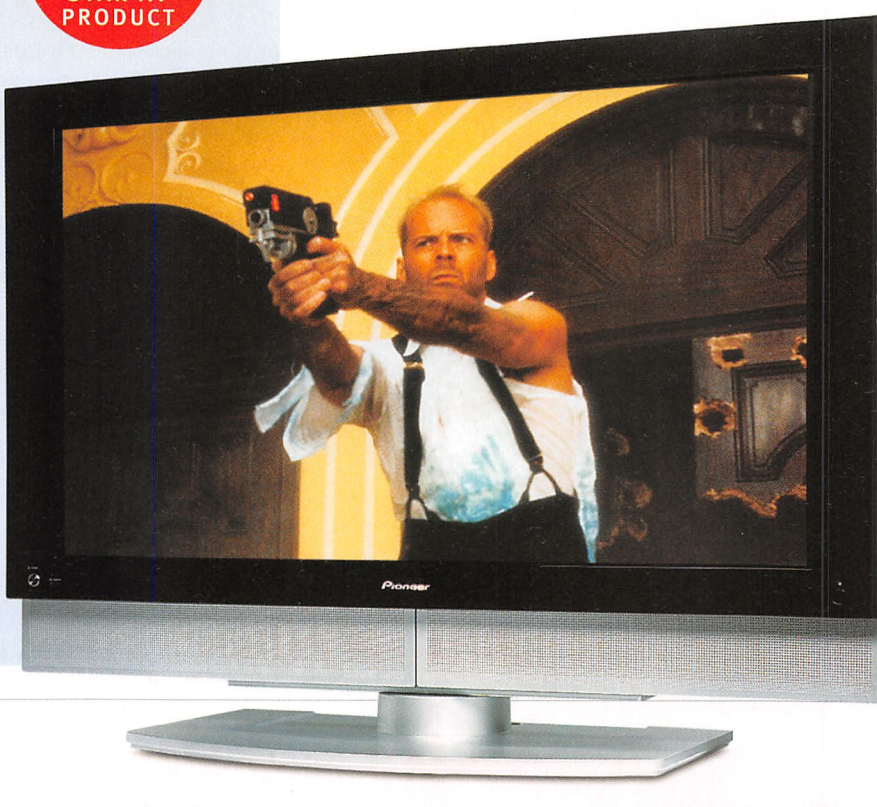
Denon has announced the launch of its second universal player, the DVD-1400. Featuring 24-bit 192-KHz DVD-Audio and SACD playback, as well as 12-bit 54MHz video DACs, the '1400 will be available from October for around £400. Its slim case will be available with a silver or black aluminium fascia.

Sennheiser has launched three new headphone designs. The range-topping HD 650 (pictured) will be available in November for £300. The PXC 250 'phones feature NoiseGard background noise reduction, and are available now for £90. Also new on sale are Sennheiser's first neckband headphones – the PMX 60 – at £30.

STAR AV PRODUCT

Pioneer promises high definition plasma TV

AFTER A MOUTH-WATERING sneak peek in our October issue, we've been awaiting the launch of Pioneer's new range of plasma televisions with some anticipation. Available in 43- and 50in screen sizes, the PDP-434HDE and PDP-503HDE are radically improved when compared to the company's outgoing models. As before, they include external tuner boxes with all the usual input sockets you'd expect, including PAL progressive scan component video sockets - but that's not the really big news. Both plasmas include the performance-enhancing benefit of the High Definition Multimedia Interface (HDMI), a digital video transfer system that looks set to transform the picture performance you can expect from DVD. Available soon on two new Pioneer DVD players – one costing £600, the other £1000 – HDMI is going to be the big news in video for years to come, and these two plasmas are the first on the market that are suitably equipped to cope. Look out for our First Test of the new PDP-434HDE in our next issue, out 19th November.



STAR HI-FI PRODUCT

G-Force Hi-Fi

MERIDIAN AUDIO HAS announced its first major product launch for a decade. Drawing on the technology of its flagship Reference 800 line, the G Series consists of new disc-spinners, stereo and multichannel power amps, preamps, a two-channel receiver and a surround processor with built-in tuner. The new line also features RS-232 ports for complete configuration via Meridian's proprietary PC software.

The G91 DVD Audio Player Controller, pictured, comprises an audio and video disc player, a stereo digital preamp and an AM/FM tuner, at a cost of £3895. With the addition of a pair of Meridian's Digital Loudspeakers, the G91 becomes a complete two-channel system. All models are available now.

Projector specialist SIM2 is adding to its Grand Cinema range. Its new flagship HT 300 LINK costs £12,000 and features a second- generation DigiOptic Image Processor (DOIP). The Italian company says this allows quality connections to video sources up to 1600 feet away. As the convergence of home media continues – from lighting to security to video – Sim2 believes connectivity is the key. Consequently the HT300 LINK incorporates rates digital optic fibre, High Definition Multimedia Interface (HDMI), and the option to include IEEE 1394 (Firewire).

A classic '80s integrated amplifier, the IncaTech Claymore, has been revived by new hi-fi brand Inca Design and redesigned using state-of-the-art technology . The new Claymore will cost around £995. The Inca Design range – available by the end of October – also includes the Katana CD player (pictured) at £695, an SACD version of the Katana, and several other amplifiers.

Hauppauge's MediaMVP (Music, Video, Pictures) is a new set-top decoder that acts as a bridge between your home network and hi-fi or TV, taking the digital media from PCs and converting it into an analogue signal. Unlike similar products, the MediaMVP will play MPEG-1 and 2 (DVD) video thanks to its high-speed ethernet connection, as well as digital pictures and MP3 music files.

Test CDs: November

The music we used to make this month's systems work harder

Mary J Blige

Love & Life | Geffen

LOVE & LIFE kicks off with dutiful subjects Jay Z (that's zee not zed) and Sean Combs (that's Diddy not Daddy) hailing the "queen of hip-hop soul". Unfortunately, for the remainder of this set Queen Mary does her best to abdicate. Her voice occasionally soars, but tunes lack drive and, most surprisingly, production sounds a touch harsh.

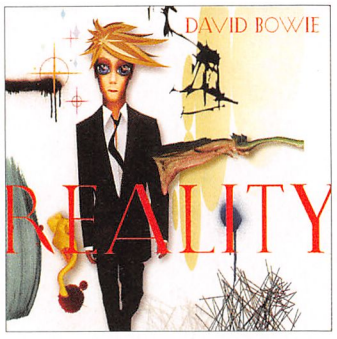
MOST TESTING TRACK

Love @ 1st Sight – featuring Method Man

WHY? If this track sounds dull and inoffensive, your kit is not revealing the true recording. If the handclaps make your ears beg you to do a Van Gogh and release them from the flinch-inducing treble, then it's on the right tracks. Add a layer of paper cut-sharp backing vocals and you have a high frequency internal examination.

David Bowie

Reality | ISO/Columbia



COME ON NOW Mr Bowie, it's time for your pills. And, no, not those pills. But the 56 year-old icon refuses to put his expensively clad feet up. Last year's Heathen was his best since Scary Monster days and Reality goes one better. Naturally, for a multi-millionaire rocker, production is top-notch and there's a lavish gathering of musicians to test your hi-fi kit.

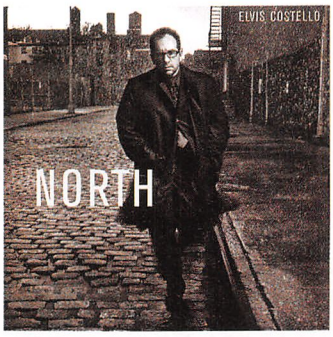
MOST TESTING TRACK

The Loneliest Guy

WHY? Only a man who could make falling down stairs look cool could get away with the line "pictures on my hard drive" (especially at his age). But Great Uncle Digital manages, and this delicate track is a neat test of subtlety. Listen to the piano and gauge how realistic it sounds, and note Bowie's lyrics for heart-rending emotion.

Elvis Costello

North | Deutsche Grammophon



NOT TO BE confused with the lip-curling, erratic dancing lead singer of The Attractions, today's Elvis Costello is more vintage Bordeaux than Beaujolais Nouveau. If you are looking for a disc to "make your kit sound good" then here it is. As lovingly put together as the 48-piece ensemble, this unhurried album sounds rich and lush. Makes a great vocal tester.

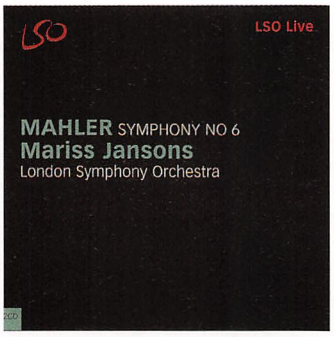
MOST TESTING TRACK

Fallen

WHY? As with the bulk of this set, the Clark Kent of the music world leaves piano duties to Steve Nieve and concentrates on superhuman vocals. Our caped arranger also sorts the strings and the result is a test as subtle as a funeral director. Costello's voice should lilt delicately and the double bass should sound deep and musical.

Mahler Symphony No 6

Mariss Jansons and London Symphony Orchestra | LSO



LIVE RECORDINGS MAKE excellent testers, so titles from LSO's live collection are always a safe bet. This double-disc set was recorded last November at the LSO's Barbican residence, with the indefatigable Tony Faulkner at the sound desk, and it makes a magnificent test of dynamics. It sounds painfully claustrophobic on a system with a narrow range.

CD2 Sostenuto - Allegro energico

WHY? Before he lost faith in titles, Mahler considered naming his sixth symphony The Tragic – it would have been an apt choice. Top-performing systems pick out the nuances and inflections that help paint a picture of hopelessness and pessimism. And the dynamic change of pace about 22 minutes into it thrills the listener.

Ennio Morricone Remixes Volume 1

Various | Compost Records

RIGHT THEN, LET'S take a big helping of Mr Morricone's spaghetti western scores and mix in a spicy dollop of remix sauce. On paper, the recipe looks somewhat harebrained and destined for the waste disposal unit. Happily, on CD, the resulting sonic dish sounds fantastic and we have been feasting on this tester since the microwave went 'ping'.

MOST TESTING TRACK

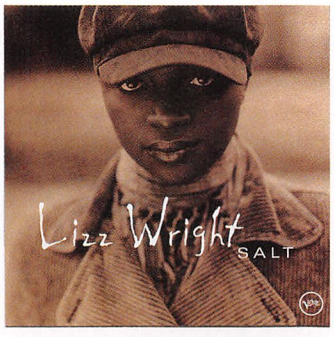
Swell Session

Il Buono, Il Brutto, Il Cattivo

WHY? Here's a super-swift tester. That atmospheric whistle will have you swaggering like Clint Eastwood – but only if timing is spot on – and your kit must keep pace with the complex beats to present the tune's infectious enthusiasm. Quickly separates good systems from the bad and the ugly.

Lizz Wright

Salt | Verve Records



NOT THE MUSIC for sufferers of narcolepsy but Lizz Wright's deep voice is well worth staying awake for. She's only 23 years-of-age but her vocals – perfected from several years of singing in a gospel church – sound full of authority. This is no system-thrashing CD, but if you enjoy a filling helping of velvety tunes then Salt is the ideal accompaniment.

MOST TESTING TRACK

Silence

WHY? It's a simple song – just Lizz plus a couple of guitarists – but it's a complex tester. Can your kit pick out the guitarist's fingers moving up and down the acoustic's strings and can it do justice to the deep sounding bottle-neck? Once your system has handled the instruments, it must serve up the vocals with realism and emotion.

High flying Kiwis land in Kingston

We help a couple of NZ hi-fi fans track down an ideal system among the streets of Kingston town

OUR REGULAR READER Rescue goes like this. We sift through your letters and choose a victim, sorry winner – based on level of need and likely tea and biscuit provision. We then arrive, with a load of kit, at said reader's home.

It's great fun but it's not the real world. In truth, buying new hi-fi or home cinema kit requires plenty of planning and bags of stamina. Not all shops stock every manufacturer's products and some retailers concentrate solely on a single brand. Not easy.

So for this Rescue we take a Kiwi couple under our big old What Hi-Fi? Sound and Vision wing and hold their hands on a quest for a hi-fi. The streets of Kingston (unfortunately London, not Jamaica) are our hosts.

So what brought our pair to the UK? "It's the law." explains Sam Moore. Sounds severe – until he explains he and his wife-to-be Andrea Wilson are both lawyers. But they're fast approaching the end of their UK secondments. They enjoy England's capital city but, back home, they are looking forward to buying a home with more than one door...

But they won't be going back empty handed. Consumer electronics are much cheaper here, plus they can reclaim the VAT, and Sam has identified a loophole in New Zealand's import laws that may save him even more dollars. So it's time to invest.

Currently they own a Denon D-M30 hi-fi system and a Sony DAV-S550 looks after home cinema duties. But this budget is going solely towards hi-fi, and kit flexiblity is key. Sam and Andrea share eclectic musical tastes and, as yet, they don't know which house the kit will live in. But, in keeping with most New Zealand homes, it will probably be large with lots of wood. Can Kingston deliver the goods?

Sevenoaks Sound and Vision

43 Fife Road, Kingston KT1 1SF

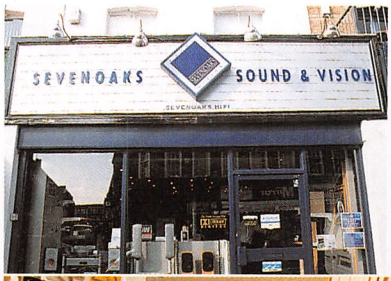
THE SHOP'S MANAGER, Chris, immediately apologises: "the hi-fi demo room's due for a re-fit." It looks fine to us – it's a decent size with a comfy couch – and it's one of two (the other's for home cinema). Good start.

Chris checks the couple's budget, musical tastes and the type of room the hi-fi will live in. Sam and Andrea explain their predicament and the need for flexibility. Chris quickly offers a neat suggestion. "Don't buy expensive interconnects and speaker cable until you're back in New Zealand," he says, " then you can fine tune to the room's acoustics."This impresses our shoppers and they visibly relax.

The suggested kit is based on the flexibility of the Cyrus electronics and the pair's preference for the Ruarks over the Monitor Audio Silver S8s and Quad's 22L floorstanders. Sam really likes the idea of adding a Cyrus PSX-R or SmartPower at a later stage.

WHAT THEY AUDITIONED

Cyrus 8 integrated amplifier £800
Cyrus 8 CD player £1000 & PSX-R £350
Ruark Prologue II speakers £1250



"Sam really likes the idea of adding an extra power supply at a later date"

Bang & Olufsen

31a Fife Road, Kingston KT1 1SF

"He latches onto Sam's interest in multi-room hi-fi: BeoLink can connect rooms"

WOW. THIS STORE could double as a designer clothes boutique. Sam worries this visit could intimidate, but our B&O man Richard is very hospitable.

There is a dedicated listening room with scope for hi-fi and TV testing, but the main shop floor is where the couple listen to the two-channel range.

Richard explains that with these Danish products the couple are paying for style in addition to sound, but he is confident the sound will impress. His initial discussions concern the couple's budget and he latches onto Sam's interest in multi-room capability – BeoLink connects rooms and offers outdoor speakers.

Sam and Andrea are able to load their own CDs and Richard clearly explains the systems. Some of the styling is not to their tastes but the Beo Sound 3000 paired with BeoLab 8000 loudspeakers hit the mark. We grab a chunky brochure and head off.

WHAT THEY AUDITIONED

Beo Sound music system £1250
BeoLab 8000 loudspeakers £2450
Beo4 remote control £150

John Lewis

Wood Street, Kingston KT1 1TE

THE LAST STOP is John Lewis and we're in the safe hands of another Chris. He is younger than Mr Sevenoaks, but still knows his stuff.

He's also totally up front and suggests Sam and Andrea may be better off elsewhere. Chris explains John Lewis has jumped firmly aboard the home cinema and multimedia train. Their most expensive two channel hi-fi system retails for £700 and this store no longer stocks separates.

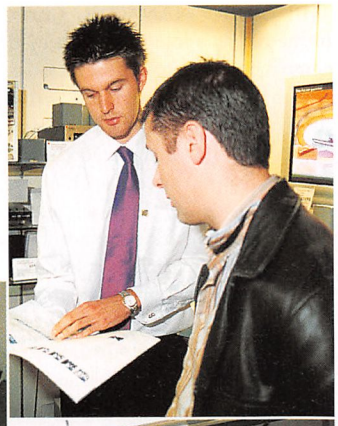
But, using the couple's CDs plus some movie clips, he manfully demonstrates the Bose Lifestyle 28. Other shoppers come and go while we are in the listening room, but next year the store plans to open an upgraded demo facility plus a dedicated Apple multimedia test room.

In the meantime the Bose interests Sam and Andrea, and Chris's encyclopaedic knowledge of all things Bose impresses us all. Does he ever sleep?

WHAT THEY AUDITIONED

Bose Lifestyle 28 £2500

"The store is on the home cinema bandwagon – it no longer sells hi-fi separates"



What did they choose?

OUR FINAL VISIT list comprised three electronics shops, one coffee shop and one sandwich shop. The message is, allow plenty time to shop around.

But both Sam and Andrea feel they understand more. "I'd never even heard a system costing four grand before, so that was great," says Sam. Another welcome feature was the absence of sexism. "The shop people talked to me as well as Sam, which is not always the case," Andrea explains.

So which shop best met their needs? John Lewis didn't stock the kit they are looking for but the salesperson didn't try and shoehorn them into another purchase. In fact if they didn't already own their Sony, they'd consider the Bose system.

Our trip to hi-fi chic also went well. Sam and Andrea didn't

"I'd never even heard a system costing four grand before, so that was a great experience"

warm to all the Bang & Olufsen styling but were happy at the lack of snobbery. But Sam admits, "I don't really care how it looks, it's how it sounds that counts."

The couple's winning vote goes to Sevenoaks' Kingston branch. The dedicated listening room and choice of hi-fi kit impressed our couple, as did Chris's enthusiasm for the subject. And the upgradability of Cyrus was a big hit. Sevenoaks also boosted its mark by discussing accessories and producing a form to reclaim the VAT. Clever.

The final kit selection was the Ruark Prologue IIs plus the amp and CD player from Cyrus's 8 series. A Cyrus PSX-R may also be added and when it came to choice of finish the Kiwis chose the Cyrus all blacks. Naturally.

Sam and Andrea get the kit – and VAT paperwork – they want

Dirty Dozen?

Cheap can be cheerful if it's a DVD player

WITH PRICES FALLING faster than premiership strikers in the penalty box, DVD players have never been cheaper. If you're still suffering the shortcomings of video, or even considering a second player for the bedroom, these 12 sub-£100 players offer an inexpensive entry into the digital video world.

But with so much emphasis on price, are manufacturers sacrificing performance in favour of profit margins? Well, if you're searching for your first DVD player, both picture and sound quality will be more impressive than anything your about-to-be-obsolete VCR has mustered recently – even at this price. And budget players are no longer masses of mock metal that should be ashamedly hidden in the depths of your video cabinet. Most feature slimline silver styling that belies their modest price tags. There have also been giant strides in the range of features available at this price including full connectivity, integrated sound processing and even PAL progressive scan for less than £60.

However, cost-cutting does trim performance, and although all of these players represent great value for money only a few can boast the ability to match.

So, which gets our money? Allow us to separate the top scorers from the Sunday-league scuffers.

AGAINST

Performance can't quite equal the class leader at this price

VERDICT

A good all rounder and a podium place behind the best in class

IN A TEST marred by mediocrity, the Aiwa XD-AX10 is one of the few acceptable ambassadors for the budget DVD player market.

Although it shares the same pseudo-silver styling of its peers, there's an improvement in build quality that's reflected in neat design touches, plus a smooth-operating mechanism that's unusual in DVD players at this level.

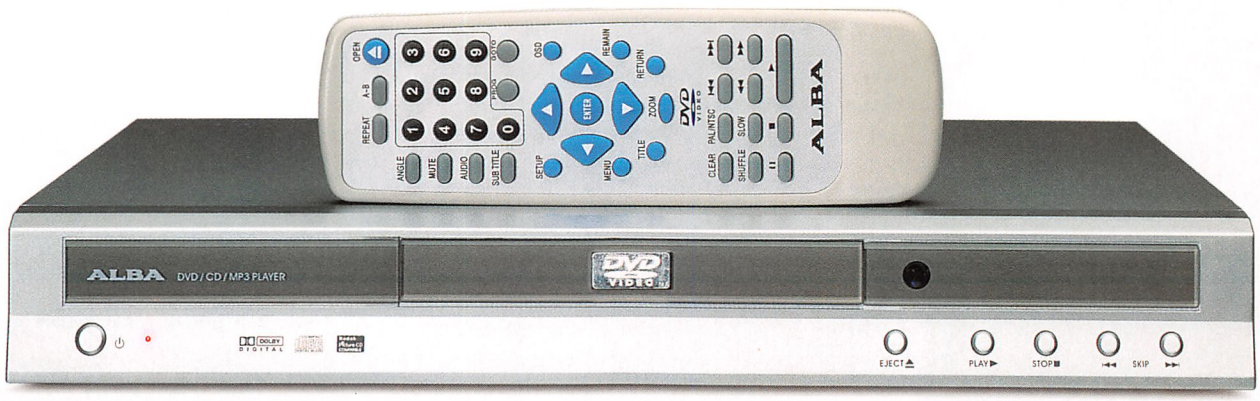
DVD first-timers will benefit from an excellent Quick Start function that effortlessly guides you through a series of graphical installation options. And while connections are limited – you get a single Scart and coaxial digital output – at this price it's unlikely you'll make use of any more.

> "The AX10 is one of the few players that renders colours naturally without shades becoming confused"

The AX10 is one of the few players that's able to render colours naturally without shades becoming confused or smearing when active. There's also enough detail to recognise the subtle changes in facial expressions and digital noise has been reduced.

It's a success in sonic terms, too. Superior dynamics dramatise the difference between heavy and subtle sounds: the boom of thunder followed by gentle rainfall that precedes the Battle of Helm's Deep in The Two Towers is a good example. And, unlike other models, CD performance is reasonable, at least by the standards of this class.

Aiwa's AX10 is an impressive all rounder and only really suffers when compared to the class leader.



Alba DVD 45

★★☆☆☆ £40

FOR

Competitive price

AGAINST

Poor construction; 'green' images; one-dimensional sound

VERDICT

The Alba DVD 45 is a cost-effective player but otherwise ineffective

THE PRICE OF the Alba DVD 45 may attract your attention, but the level of performance is proof that you often only get what you pay for.

The regulation silver styling fails to disguise the player's cut-price construction, with little attention to detail and the omission of a front display panel leaving it looking about as aspirational as an '80s mobile phone. The remote is equally unattractive, but the oversized cursor controls make steering through the limited set-up menus simple enough. Rear connections are simple, too: a single RGB Scart, standard AV outputs and a coaxial digital output for connection to a processor or receiver.

> "Images are tainted by an overriding green tinge – a problem that affects a few of the cheaper models in this test"

For the price the structural shortcomings could be ignored if performance prevailed, but the Alba DVD 45 disappoints in both sound and picture quality. Images are tainted by an overriding green tinge – a problem that affects several of the cheaper models in this test. Colours have been boosted to compensate for poor contrast levels, but the end result is so unnatural, images appear animated. There's also a degree of digital noise, especially in dark sequences, while the sound lacks the dynamics necessary to create an involving experience.

Perhaps at this price we shouldn't expect anything more, and first-time users will still be pleased with the improvement over VHS. But if any more corners had been cut the DVD 45 would be circular.

Arianet PDVD-2277

★★★☆☆ £70

FOR

PAL progressive scan support; good selection of connectivity options

AGAINST

Poor colour balance; sound lacks detail

VERDICT

A case of great on paper, bad in action for the Arianet – it offers superb specs, but poor performance

THE ARIANET PDVD-2277 is the only player in the test that can boast true PAL progressive scan, previously unheard of at this price point. However, to use this advanced picture technology, you'll need a display capable of accepting the signal – and at the budget level these are few.

But that's only part of an exhaustive specification list. The PDVD-2277 is better connected than a mob boss, with a comprehensive collection that includes a full suite of video outputs, both optical and coaxial audio outputs and a set of 5.1 preouts. With the extra features comes a more convoluted set-up procedure that can involve individual speaker settings and an extensive array of adjustments that can be daunting for a beginner.

> "Enabling progressive scan improves detail by deepening blacks and adding contrast, but it makes colours look unnatural"

Enabling progressive scan mode provides more detail by deepening blacks and adding contrast, but unbalances colours, which leaves the picture looking unnatural. Back in RGB mode, poor edge-definition means the player struggles to contain even more unruly colours, creating soft boundaries and a lot of fizzing lines.

The sound livens up the experience with a forceful rendition suited to high-energy scores – but it's ultimately brash and misses the subtleties that create a film's ambience. Similarly, music playback lacks detail and only suits energetic tracks.

Despite impressive specifications, in action, the Arianet PDVD-2277 can't equal the class leaders.

Bush DVD 2035

★★★☆☆ £70

FOR

Appealing and practical design; adequate sound and picture performance

AGAINST

Fails to excite in any area

VERDICT

This Bush is reasonably priced, but its performance is only competent

BUSH, GOODMANS AND Alba are stablemates that share the same UK distributor, and while none of their players in this test are particularly impressive, the Bush DVD 2035 is the pick of a poor lot.

The super-slim chassis, mirrored front panel and controls positioned on top of the player make the Bush one of the better-looking models here, with definite hints of Panasonic. The remote also combines flair with functionality, incorporating glow-in-the-dark buttons.

A first look at the player's features excited us, thanks to the inclusion of component connections, but they're not for UK use and you'll have to make do with basic AV sockets. The set-up menus are also common to several players tested, clearly using the same transport and operation software. And that's a fair description of the player's performance. The 2035 is afflicted by the same limitations that affect most budget players in this test: poor contrast levels and digital interference still apply, but not to the extent that they disrupt viewing. Colours are well balanced and able to portray natural tones alongside special effects in films such as The Fifth Element.

> "Colours are well balanced, but the picture performance never manages to exceed average"

But the Bush DVD 2035's picture performance never manages to exceed average – and that's also true of the sound performance. Good timing and efficient steering make for easy listening, but it lacks the authority to turn heads.

Cyberhome CHDVD 505

★★★★☆ £100

FOR

Comprehensive connections; cohesive sound; solid pictures

AGAINST

Bulky, dated design; dark contrast levels hide image detail

VERDICT

A real dark horse from Cyberhome, which surprised us with its level of performance

WITH DIMENSIONS resembling an old-school VCR, the Cyberhome CHDVD 505 dwarfs the other slimline models in this test. And it's the only player to shun ubiquitous silver styling in favour of a glossy black finish.

And this is another model loaded with facilities rarely found at this price point. Connections include component outputs, which aren't progressive scan-enabled but do offer higher picture quality, along with practically every other AV connection going. The on-screen displays won't win any prizes for beauty, but are simply navigated from the stocky remote control. The RGB picture is striking, with rich, fluid colours and exemplary black depth that gives images solidity. This works well with animated films such as The Jungle Book sequel, but switch to reality and the dark blacks have difficulty differentiating between shades, leaving shadows blocky and detail hidden. Using the component connections reveals some of that lost detail at the expense of the vibrant colour.

> "The on-screen displays won't win any prizes for beauty, but are simply navigated from the remote"

Cohesive panning between the speakers suggests the digital feed here is good, but, like its peers, this player is more adept with films than music.

For a picture that outperforms most rivals, the Cyberhome CHDVD 505 merits its lofty rating and proves big-name brands shouldn't always be the automatic choice of budget shoppers.

Dual DVD 858

★★☆☆☆ £55

FOR

Price; connectivity options

AGAINST

Badly built; inconsistent colours; sounds terrible

VERDICT

This Dual is the most competent of the super-cheap models in this test

FROM A DISTANCE, Dual's DVD 858 looks like a player out of proportion with its meagre price tag. But look beyond the mirrored styling and you'll find a poorly constructed player with loose, unresponsive controls and a stiff mechanism that's serenaded by a chorus of clunks while playing.

Similarly, the tall, slender remote control flatters to deceive, but poor arrangement makes it difficult to find buttons and slows down an otherwise straightforward set-up process. When it comes to connections, surprisingly there's a choice of both coaxial and optical digital outputs to join a standard set of AV outputs with a single RGB Scart.

> "The tall, slender remote flatters to deceive, but poor arrangement makes it difficult to find buttons"

The Dual's picture suffers from over-emphasised colours, dismal contrast levels and streaky motion rendering. Adjustments to the colour balance fail to find a point between bleached and psychedelic but at least there's no green hue flooding the screen. But there is a wave of white interference that floods the screen when detailed background shots arrive.

If this is your first venture into DVD, you'll still be impressed by the gains over VHS, and all for a very affordable price. We wouldn't advise ditching your CD player though, as its sound performance is dire.

Of the lower-priced models in this test the Dual DVD 858 is possibly lord of these particular flies, but doubling your outlay will more than triple the performance.

Goodmans GDVD 141

★★☆☆☆ £70

FOR

Still better than your old VCR

AGAINST

Basic specifications for the cost; images soaked in green; listless sound performance

VERDICT

This Goodmans is disappointing – unless you're watching The Hulk

AS WE'VE MENTIONED, a common flaw separating the poor from the average players in this test is a recurring green tint in colours – even blacks – that swathes the picture in a verdant mist. Goodmans' GDVD 141 is also afflicted.

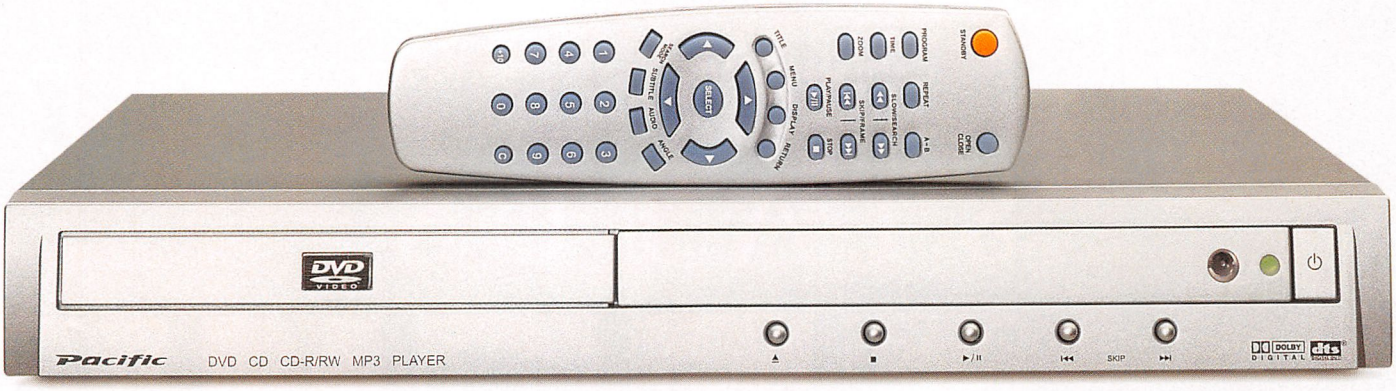
The slim, silver, reflective design mirrors the styling of the majority of players here. And the remote control looks familiar – it's obviously cheaply manufactured but at least the oversized buttons make navigation through the limited set-up options simple. There's a bare minimum set of socketry to contend with, of which an RGB Scart connection and coaxial output are your most likely ports of call.

> "Green seems to bleed into all images, leaving an unbalanced monotonal hue across everything"

However, it would take more than improved connections to enhance the poor picture quality on offer. Once again chaotic colour balance is at the root of all problems: like its relation from Alba, greens seem to bleed into all images, leaving an unbalanced monotonal hue across everything. Soft detail and recurring digital artefacts fail to compensate for the colours.

Neither is the sound good enough to save this player from a below average rating. There's very little energy conveyed in film scores, which sound subdued, while CD playback is painted with a broad brush whatever music you choose.

The GDVD 141 is a disappointing player: it struggles in most areas and deserves no special recommendation.



Pacific DVD 1001

★☆☆☆☆ £38

FOR

It's the cheapest player in this test

AGAINST

Everything else

VERDICT

The Pacific may be cheap, but it left us far from cheerful

AT LESS THAN the price of a DVD box set, the Pacific DVD 1001 is the cheapest player in the test, but given its capabilities you may prefer just watching the box set's packaging.

Describing the design as bland would be a compliment: the ultra-basic styling is a display-less mass of plastic with only a smattering of stubborn controls to define it as a DVD player. And the cost cutting doesn't stop there: not only are there no batteries supplied for the flimsy remote, but there aren't even any standard connection leads supplied. Socketry is just as spartan, with only a basic set of AV outputs.

> "Colours refuse to keep their composure when movement rises above snail's pace, with slime trails"

Performance is plagued by a return of the green colour balance that heightens the grass in The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers to almost unbearable levels. And colours refuse to keep their composure when movement rises above snail's pace – and they leave nice slime trails in their wake, too.

Sonically, the Pacific struggles in every area, with dynamics that fail to recognise sound above or below an unnatural-sounding midrange, leaving voices detached from the images. And, if you enjoy music, refrain from playing CDs – it's like hearing a Pop Idol contestant mangling your favourite song.

At £38 it would have been sheer folly to expect the Pacific to come out on top, but it's still a disappointment to find something that performs so badly it doesn't even warrant use as a spare unit.

Roadstar DVD 2200K

★★☆☆☆ £100

FOR

Reasonable spread of features, including a karaoke function!

AGAINST

Terrible picture performance for the price

VERDICT

The Roadstar's picture will leave you singing the blues, karaoke style

NOT ONLY DOES the Roadstar DVD 2200K play a variety of digital discs but it also acts as a karaoke machine, complete with twin microphones and a CD starter pack – ideal for that post-pub experience.

The colourful design features a neon-blue fascia and an equally kaleidoscopic remote that reflects the fun nature of this player, which seems aimed at a younger audience.

We didn't test this player's karaoke capabilities, but hope they're better than its video performance – which, given that this player is at the top end of this test's price-band, is frankly duff.

> "We didn't test this player's karaoke capabilities but hope they fare better than video performance"

Practically every aspect of picture performance is plagued by weaknesses: these include superficial, unbalanced colours, contrast levels that mask detail and a sustained level of digital noise throughout. True, the sound outperforms the picture, but it's a close-run thing: the explosive space effects in The Fifth Element are delivered without distortion and a reasonable degree of timing accuracy means stereo playback is better than others.

But ultimately we expect a lot more for a player at this price, and in terms of picture-per-pound the Roadstar ranks as one of the worse buys in this test. Unless you regularly feel the need to enact pop star ambitions in front of bemused friends, this player should be seen as a karaoke machine that plays DVDs, not the other way around.

Samsung DVD-E234

★★★☆☆ £100

Neat styling; fair picture; competent sound

AGAINST

Fails to excite in any area

VERDICT

Samsung's player is too good to be bad, but not good enough to be great

THE SAMSUNG DVD-E234 is a competent player that neither excites nor dismays. Everything from the neat but unimaginative styling to the fair level of picture quality is average.

As a budget player it does all you could reasonably ask and even flaunts a few extra features such as a 3D sound function and EZ view aspect ratio adjustment. And there's a choice of digital audio and video connections – remember to set the rear switch to initiate RGB viewing with a Scart.

At the same price as the class-leading Toshiba, it's difficult to recommend the Samsung but just as hard to over-criticise a player that performs positively but still falls short of what can be achieved at this price point. Colours are natural and detail is reasonably sharp with only fleeting evidence of digital noise affecting the picture. But there's noticeable judder when the camera pans across a broad area and some blurring in fast-paced action scenes.

> "Colours are natural and detail is reasonably sharp with only fleeting evidence of digital noise"

There are few harsh criticisms of the sound, but an obvious gap exists between this and class leaders. Good detail lends itself to ambient soundtracks, with plenty of information and a nice sense of spatial awareness but without the weight to do justice to demanding film scores. Music performance is indifferent, though.

The E234 is a fine player, but for the price you could do better – read on to find out how.

Sanyo DVD SL22

★★★☆☆ £100

FOR

Doesn't offend in any way

AGAINST

Doesn't excite in any way

VERDICT

Another average player that's lost in the shadow of the class leader at this price

SANYO'S DVD SL22 inhabits the grey area that separates the under-achievers and outperformers in this test, deserving neither high praise nor damning criticism.

In its favour, it's possibly the most aesthetically attractive player in the test, featuring an aluminium-effect front panel with easy access controls that's a cut above the mock-metal designs seen elsewhere.

And although the matching remote appears overcrowded, the important keys are given enough space to allow easy use. Set-up menus are recognisable from previous players, leading to similarly fuss-free installation and operation. A big difference, though is that connections only extend to an optical digital output, as opposed to the better-sounding coaxial version.

> "There's an obvious distinction between this player and some of the lesser models in this Supertest"

And so to performance. There's an obvious distinction in picture quality between this player and some of the lesser models in the test, but the difference isn't great enough to compare it with class-leading products at the same price. Contrast levels and black depth in particular can be improved, as pictures lack a level of solidity and edges tend to fizz. Otherwise picture performance is competent.

Sound output benefits from a natural, expressive midrange that works well with dialogue heavy films like Analyze That, but the music ability suits vocals rather than big beats.

The SL22 is acceptable but you can do better for the same money.

Toshiba SD330E

★★★★★ £100

FOR

Peerless picture and sound performance

AGAINST

For the money, absolutely nothing

VERDICT

At this price, accept no substitute – and if you shop around, you can pick up the Award-winning Toshiba for around £80

IF YOU THOUGHT all hope of finding an outstanding budget player had faded, rest assured that the Award-winning Toshiba SD330E still holds the trump card in this otherwise uninspiring pack.

The Toshiba bears all the hallmarks of quality you could wish for at this price. Even on style it's a cut above the competition, featuring a slimline, silver case that stands out in this company. There's an ample array of connections including component outputs – although it's not progressive scan-enabled it's still good enough to complement a high-quality display.

> "While others struggle, the SD330 produces the most natural colours we've seen at this level"

Set-up menus are characterised by colourful graphics and simple-to-follow steps.

With a picture as good as we have here, though, everything else becomes an afterthought. Above all, while other players struggle, the SD330 produces the most natural colours we've seen at this level: solid blacks and superb contrast lift images from their docile two-dimensional state. Not only does the picture leave rivals trailing in its wake, but sound is superior in both surround and stereo, with a refined, detailed delivery that reveals subtleties and doesn't shy away from the explosive effects.

A recent fall in price has allowed the Toshiba SD3330E to mingle with this modest competition and for less than £100 it's the only player we'd recommend without hesitation.

What our testers said...

"On paper, a DVD player for under £100 looks great value, but this test proves that is not always the case. Many of these budget players paint the screen a strange shade of green and detail levels are poor. Cheap technology is admirable but not when it means your new DVD player looks worse than your old VCR. And don't forget sound quality – the Toshiba is good for the money, but spend an extra £150 on your DVD player and you can significantly boost its sonic performance potential."

Murdo Mathewson
Staff writer

"It amazes me that I now own several DVD box sets that cost me more than a fully functioning DVD player. In fact, I can see a great Christmas marketing wheeze on the horizon: buy the box set, get a free DVD player thrown in. But I still wouldn't advise any of you to buy a super-cheap player, not when the Toshiba SD-330E offers so much more for only a modest extra premium (especially if you shop around). If you want a player that does more than just 'function', the Tosh is the one to go for."

Andy Kerr
Home cinema tests editor

"Several of these DVD players are sold in supermarkets, and in some cases there's a strong resemblance to the tin-of-beans-for-8p ranges of value groceries. Yes, they're DVD players, but only on the most basic level, with a fraction of the performance potential of decent models. As the Toshiba shows, a little more cash buys you a far more tasty prospect – it may leave you less money for the DVDs themselves, but I'd take a few favourite films looking great over more movies looking green any day."

Tricky terms explained

Component video Only available on some DVD players, but gives the optimum picture quality when used in conjunction with a similarly-equipped TV, projector or plasma screen.

RGB Stands for Red, Green, Blue and gives the best picture quality when connecting the DVD player to a TV using a Scart cable, provided the Scart socket on the DVD player can output a RGB signal. Remember you will have to set your DVD player to RGB using the menus.

Progressive scan Provides even sharper images from a suitably-equipped DVD player and TV, LCD, plasma or projector. Can now be found in both PAL and NTSC (ie British and American) forms.

5.1 channel output If your AV amp or receiver is an older Pro-Logic only model and you're using your DVD player's internal Dolby Digital/DTS decoding, then you need to hook the two together using six interconnects. You'll also need to make this sort of connection to listen to DVD-Audio and SACD Multichannel.

Region hack Allows you to modify the player so it will play DVD discs from other regions such as the US (region 1). Usually done using the remote. Many players are sold 'pre-hacked' by dealers, but it's best to check this before your purchase.

DVD-Audio New high-resolution audio format that offers multichannel surround-sound music and high-quality 24-bit/192KHz stereo.

Super Audio CD (SACD) rival high-resolution music disc format to DVD-A.

Make the most of the winner

If you want to get the most from your Toshiba DVD player, don't just plonk it down below your telly and leave it at that. A few simple procedures will get the most from it; all you need is the remote and the on-screen display.

Step 1

First, you need to 'tell' your DVD player about your TV. Virtually every DVD disc contains electronic widescreen coding designed to produce the optimum picture, in terms of both image size and image quality, with a widescreen TV. To crack this 'anamorphic' code, you need to tell the Toshiba that you've got a '16:9' TV. If you haven't got a 16:9 widescreen set, then set '4:3 letterbox', since this ensures that the pictures you see are correctly formatted on the screen. However, some newer 4:3 televisions also include a '16:9 widescreen mode', and you can use this mode to get a better picture by setting both your DVD player and your TV to the appropriate 16:9 mode. Turn off the 16:9 on your TV when you've finished your DVD.

Step 2

Next, select the RGB mode for your Scart connection. This will give you the best picture, unless you're fortunate enough to own a TV that has component video inputs. In this case, turn the RGB option off, and use component video connections between your DVD player and TV. You'll need an extra pair of phono audio cables if you want to send sound into your TV as well as pictures.

Step 3

Finally, select your sound options. Choose 'digital output normal' if you've got a home cinema set-up, as this will give you true 5.1 surround sound. Remember to buy a decent digital cable, though! If you haven't got a home cinema system, turn the digital output to 'PCM', and then link your DVD player into your TV using a Scart cable or phono cables, as above.

THE OVERALL WINNER

Toshiba SD330E

★★★★★ £100

AN UNDERSTANDING OF rocket science isn't required to work out that, as the only five-star player, Toshiba's Award-winning SD330E is the obvious winner of our budget DVD player Supertest.

Prices may have fallen to all-new low levels but we're disappointed with the standard of performance on offer. In fact, price plays less of a part in this test, as the difference between the most and least expensive players is minimal. And with the lower-priced models generally reflecting inferior standards, without any real bargains below the £100 point, it makes sense to concentrate on the high end of this spectrum.

The players were primarily judged on picture performance, followed by sound performance and finally features and flexibility. And in a collection of players characterised by over-emphasised colours, soft detail and unhidden digital artefacts, the SD330E is the only player that presents a truly natural picture, simultaneously rendering natural tones alongside surreal special effects with detail that leaves the competition trailing in its wake. Sonically too, there's no substitute – Toshiba's superior dynamics and cohesive steering create an involving listening experience that's as gentle with subtleties like dialogue as it's forceful with dramatic effects.

> "The SD330E is the only player that presents a truly natural picture"

Leading the chasing pack are Aiwa's XD-AX10 and Cyberhome's surprising dark horse, the CHDVD 505. Both are excellent players, but are destined to live in the shadow of the outstanding Toshiba unless they can become more price competitive.

The Cyberhome is one of several players that surprised us with an exhaustive list of specifications that's rare at this price – Arianet's progressive scan player is a prime example. However, the Toshiba's RGB picture outperformed anything other component-sourced pictures in this test had to offer.

The remaining players can be divided into two camps: Camp Average and Camp Awful. Average players such as Samsung's DVD E234 are defined by competent but unexciting performance that can be bettered at no extra cost. Meanwhile, awful players like the Pacific DVD 1001 generally consist of the bargain-basement models that are tainted by unbalanced colours, poor contrast and extremes of digital noise.

It pays to spend a little extra especially in the direction of the Toshiba SD330E, still the reigning DVD champ.

Top home cinema for every wallet

from £150

These simple sound systems are ideal for home cinema on a budget. They won't shake your foundations or give you great hi-fi, but they will comfortably outperform the best results of any TV, delivering proper Dolby Digital and DTS 5.1 surround sound for a very modest outlay. All you need add is a digital cable.

from £650

If you don't want to have to put up with the fuss of a true surround system, then a surround sound TV can be worth a look. Most of the latest sets offer better-quality amplification than before, coupled to Dolby Digital 5.1 surround sound decoding. You'll get a modest pair of surround sound speakers included.

from £250

Our preferred option for a better-quality home cinema system, the multichannel receiver is a flexible beast that can accommodate virtually any system need, as well as providing muscular surround audio to as many as seven loudspeakers. They'll also give you better quality stereo sound.

from £349

Compact speaker systems like this will give you potent surround sound without taking over your living room. By offering matched speakers throughout the system, these set-ups deliver a more convincing spread of sound than you'd get by 'mixing and matching' speakers from a range of companies.

from £500

Although plasma and LCD sets dominate the news these days, the good old cathode ray tube still gives you the best picture for your money, and these days, a decent TV costs less than you'd think. We've gone for flat-tube sets since they offer a cleaner picture that's free of unwanted distortions.

Home cinema in a box £150-£500

Looking to buy a complete set-up? Try these combinations for one-stop surround sound success

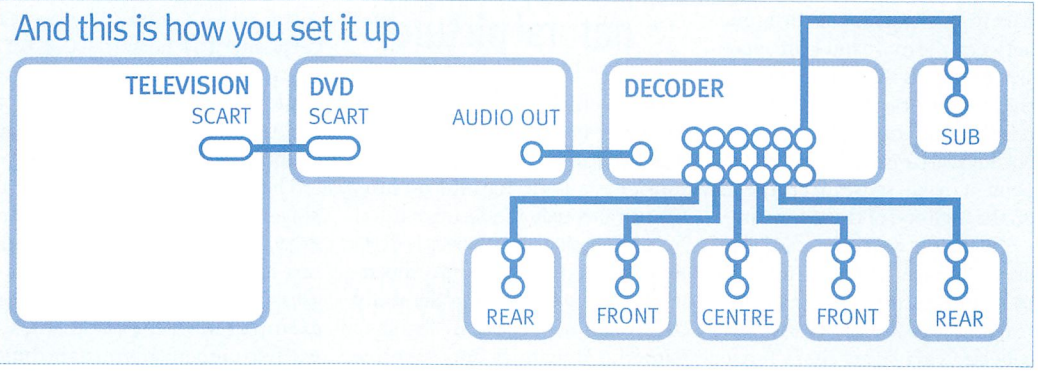
The home cinema in a box system is exactly what you'd expect to be: a complete package of speakers, surround sound decoding and amplification in one large package. Some systems also include built-in DVD players, and indeed these 'just add a telly' packages have given the consumer electronics industry one of its big success stories of recent times. However, since we're recommending kit to go with our Supertest-winning Toshiba player (see p51), we've gone for the simpler decoder-based systems, which combine processing, amplification and all the speakers you need for surround sound.

So what does that mean? Simply put, it means if you already have a DVD player, this kind of home cinema in a box system will give you everything else that you need for a modest home cinema system. The Dolby/DTS decoder section in each of these systems takes care of the complex business of generating surround sound from the datastream coming off the DVD via a digital connection, while modest amplification for all the channels is commonly built into the bass-generating subwoofer. It's not the kind of sound that will shake your sofa, and these systems do suffer from limitations when used for replaying music, but for both compactness and convenience – to say nothing of what often looks like a giveaway price – these systems seem to offer top value.

> "If you already have a DVD player, this kind of package will give you everything else you need"

If you don't expect miracles, or simply want a system for the kids or a second room, this kind of set up could be the answer.

And this is how you set it up



CREATIVE INSPIRE GD580

£150

FOR

Compact and inexpensive; looks good

AGAINST

Sounds resolutely small-scale; really for computer use only

VERDICT

The price and style may appeal, but the Creative package's performance shows there's only so much you can do with very tiny, very cheap speakers

HOW LITTLE DO you have to spend to get a complete home cinema processor/speakers system? Well, £150 seems to be the answer, judging from this package from computer ancillaries specialist Creative: in the box you get a processor unit plus five tiny satellite speakers and a subwoofer with built-in amplification, plus of course all the cables you need to hook it up.

Creative has been making packages like this for quite a while, and plays it laudably straight when it comes to quoting the power available from this system: you get 5x6W, plus 17W for the subwoofer. That's quite a way from stump-pulling, groundshaking power, and this – plus the relatively short cables provided to connect processor to sub, and then sub to speakers – suggests this is a system very much designed for personal listening. In fact, the cables are so short you'd have problems spreading the speakers around even a modest-sized room without recourse to extension leads.

The processor has both line and digital (optical/electrical) inputs, and has Dolby Digital/Pro-Logic II and DTS decoding, plus a number of 'effects', best avoided. It's relatively easy to set up, though the lack of any display makes getting the channel balance a little trickier than with conventional processors.

So how does the Creative sound? Small – it's as simple as that. Park yourself on the floor in front of the telly with the speakers all around you and the presentation is just about adequate – provided you're not expecting furniture-rearranging explosions and mind-boggling effects – but in a more conventional front-room set-up, tiny speakers, weedy sub and the short cables provided mean you're on a hiding to nothing. And the music reproduction? Well, it's also just as you'd expect from very small computer speakers – bright, lacking any semblance of realistic weight, and rather compressed.

If the kids watch DVDs on bedroom computers, this package may be suitable. For anything more ambitious, forget it. There's nothing much to Inspire here.

Creative's system is cheap, but has nothing to Inspire

£299

FOR

Style and solidity of build for the money; reasonably good channel steering

AGAINST

A bit thin and weedy beside more conventional (and pricier) packages

VERDICT

The Logitech system seems to have it all, including THX certification, but while it's OK for the money it isn't quite to the standards of conventional hi-fi

PSSST! WANNA BUY a THX system? Speakers, processor, amp, the lot? To you, mate, £300 complete – all you need add is a DVD player and telly. And yes, the Logitech Z-680 does come complete with THX Multimedia certification, which is a quality standard for speakers and systems for computer use.

And the power output seems decent, at least on first inspection: the sub gets 185W, while the rest of the speakers are treated to 53W per channel. But these figures are quoted at 10% clipping distortion into a single frequency – 100Hz for the sub, 1kHz for the rest – suggesting the real figures, full range and with distortion of 1% or less, are a fraction of this.

The Logitech is relatively well put together, and accepts a six-channel analogue input, stereo line-in and optical and electrical digital feeds, while the stylish processor/amp offers Dolby Digital/Pro-Logic II and DTS processing along with a range of proprietary surround effects, and is easy to set up. And as the manual says, 'for a pro-audio look, remove the cloth grilles...'

The sound is reasonably persuasive, at least in small rooms: the high-octane action of 2Fast2Furious or The Italian Job is delivered in suitably exciting fashion, with lots of stuff whizzing around you, and the subtle dialogue of Gosford Park is intelligible and easy to follow. But the system lacks all-out clout when you push it a bit – it may be fine for a single gamer hunched over a computer with fingers a-twitching, but it's only barely up to the task of filling a room with surround sound for the whole family to enjoy. With music it's pretty woeful: the basics are there, but you wouldn't choose this as your only source of listening, as the overall result is compressed.

Logitech package has the style, but it could sound better

ACOUSTIC ENERGY AEGO P5
£499

FOR

Compact and stylish; still offers a high standard of performance

AGAINST

Buy now while stocks last; shows its age in the lack of Dolby Pro-Logic II processing

VERDICT

Still a fine buy, helped by a £100 price drop, but it's on the way out very soon

IT'S ALMOST CURTAINS for one of our favourite speaker packages: after a couple of years at the top, Acoustic Energy's innovative Aego package is soon to bite the dust in order to make way for a replacement. The good news, however, is that there should still be stocks in the shops, and the price has fallen by £100 to make it an even better buy.

The system remains neat and very competitive, from its compact processor to the stylish little speakers, drawing on the manufacturer's extensive experience of making acclaimed conventional designs. These really are AEs in miniature, and while they deliver a totally convincing sound, there are some signs that this is by far the oldest package here.

The most notable omission is Dolby Pro-Logic II processing: the P5 has the original MkI version, which is something of a handicap when products are beginning to emerge with third-generation Pro-Logic IIx processing. It means this system is less convincing when it comes to creating good surround from older soundtracks and stereo material such as CDs.

However, when it comes to Dolby Digital or DTS 5.1-channel sound, the Aego package is still very much on the pace, offering a fine mix of subtlety and pure clout. That means it gives an expansive soundstage with fine focus, and best of all plenty of weight when it comes to those big action soundtracks. Partner this with your budget DVD player and we're sure you won't be disappointed.

Yes, the Acoustic Energy Aego P5 is both the oldest system here and the most expensive, but it still offers good, if not spectacular, value.

Acoustic Energy Aego P5: buy now to avoid disappointment

Surround sound TVs £650-£1300

There's nothing to rival the surround sound TV for a convenient and neat home cinema system

IF YOU WANT the ultimate in convenient surround sound, there's little to rival the surround sound television. One of the earliest 'convenience' solutions for easy home cinema, the surround sound TV dates back to the early '90s, and offers a simple proposition for affordable home cinema. You get the TV, the amplification, the surround decoding and all the speakers you need in one package; all you need do is add the source, and in the modern world, that means a DVD player.

There are some drawbacks worth mentioning. Many very affordable surround TVs tend to be Pro-Logic only, with no provision for the higher-quality Dolby Digital surround sound that'd you'd get from other solutions. We've gone solely for Dolby Digital sets in our round-up below, because we feel that the added sonic benefits are more than worth the additional outlay.

Other issues? The amplification is strictly limited in quality and power, while the speakers tend to be flimsy, lightweight affairs that lack the guts of their separates rivals. You'll also find that most surround sets only include rear speakers as standard, which means that the front speaker 'image' you get is narrower in width than the results you'll get with a separates system.

> "You get the TV, the amplification, the surround decoding and all the speakers you need in one complete package"

But it's true that some of the best modern sets have improved dramatically on all these issues, and like we said, for convenience and neatness, the surround sound TV takes some beating. Check out the wireless rear speakers on the Philips 28PW9618 as evidence.

And this is how you set it up

£650

FOR

Great picture, reasonable price, effective surround sound steering

AGAINST

Lacks the muscular sound of a home cinema in a box system; limited Scart fit

VERDICT

Well worth a look. The TX-28PS5 is ideal for an affordable surround system, especially in a smaller living room

Another vision cracker from Panasonic at a fabulous price – this one comes with the added bonus of surround sound

OUR FIRST SURROUND set is also one of the most affordable. In many ways, the Panasonic TX-28PS5 is a similar proposition to the outstanding TX-28PS1, in that it's a standard 50Hz chassis rather than an all-singing, all-dancing 100Hz affair, but that's no bad thing; the PS1 is our favourite budget widescreen set. It provides a superb picture for the price, with outstanding levels of contrast, colour realism and detail, and the TX-28PS5 is no different. In image terms, it's a peach.

The key difference, of course, is the provision of internal surround sound decoding, in this case for both Dolby Pro-Logic and Dolby Digital 5.1, the latter being accessible from both coaxial and optical digital input sockets. Just add a DVD player and the appropriate digital interconnect cable.

Sonically, this set is a fine affordable solution. No, it won't shake your foundations with deep bass, despite its internal subwoofer, and you won't get the same level of midrange punch that you'd find from a decent separates system either. But you do get modest, effective surround steering and a decent level of surround sound involvement, especially with a beefy action movie soundtrack. To get the best surround results, ensure you put the surround speakers at a decent height, and you should find that you'll be involved in the movie action far more than you would with a normal TV.

At this price, the Panasonic is well worth a look. It's got a great picture, and it works well enough sonically.

£1200

FOR

Excellent picture, flexible socket fit, neat wireless surround speakers...

AGAINST

...although they aren't actually 'wireless', because they need to be mains-powered

VERDICT

Not cheap, but a fantastic TV, blessed with a great picture (although it isn't that big) and decent digital surround sound

OUR SURROUND TV Award-winner is a terrific set. The 28PW9618 is a compact widescreen set featuring Philips' much vaunted Pixel Plus technology, which increases the number of pixels and lines in the picture to improve detail.

And sound isn't a second thought either, with integrated front left, right and centre speakers, and two wireless rear speakers offering both Dolby Pro Logic II and Dolby Digital 5.1 surround sound. Having said that, 'wireless' is a loose term, as connections to an external receiver box still need to be made. Still, you get an impressive array of audio connections including 5.1 audio preouts and digital inputs and output as well as four Scarts, but no component connections.

Picture performance is great, with fluid motion and contrast levels that literally lift images from the screen. Meanwhile, the sound teems with detail, and smooth steering between channels create an involving listening experience. It's a little light in the bass, though; if you really want to 'max' the set's performance, use the connection options to add an external subwoofer.

FOR

Sensational picture, truly extensive array of sockets, fine surround sound steering

AGAINST

Not much, save the slightly disappointing decoding/processing options

VERDICT

A fine-sounding set that provides a fine blend of attributes at its price. If you've got the money, it's a fine buy

OUR FINAL SURROUND TV is one of the best-sounding we've heard. This is chiefly because it uses external speakers for both the rear and the front (making four in total), so you get surrounded much more effectively than is typical from a set in this class. Surround audio is forceful and weighty, and effects move with a speed and conviction that rivals the best efforts of many budget home cinema in a box systems, save perhaps in terms of overall bass weight.

Having said that, the Toshiba is slightly off the pace in terms of surround sound decoding and processing options, both compared to home cinema in a box sets, and other surround sound TVs in its price class. It provides Dolby Digital 5.1 surround decoding, but you don't get the benefit of Dolby Pro-Logic II (unlike the Philips set tested above); instead, you have to make do with plain-vanilla Pro-Logic, which works well enough, but doesn't rival its newer sibling. You can also forget the benefits of DTS decoding.

But the Toshiba still wins a place in our affections, chiefly because of its excellent home cinema credentials. As you'd hope from a set in this price class, it's compatible with PAL and NTSC progressive scan video from a suitable DVD source, and has a truly extensive socket fit, including both component video sockets and three Scarts, two of which have RGB.

And as we've come to expect from Toshiba sets, the picture quality is just sensational. Images are pin-sharp, colours are rich and vivid, and black depth is exceptional, being bettered only by deadly rival Panasonic. It's exceptionally impressive with DVD signals, although even off-air viewing impresses; you'll love the mix of low picture 'noise' and smooth, natural motion across the screen.

Multichannel receivers £250-£330

Want more oomph and upgrade potential? What you want is a full-blown AV powerhouse like these

IF YOU WANT to take a step up in price and ability, a dedicated multichannel receiver should be on your shopping list. Sure, this is the pricier path – remember, opt for a receiver, and you'll also have to budget for speakers and cabling, both of which are usually included in packaged systems – but in both home cinema and in stereo use, a separates receiver will outperform an all-in-one home-cinema-in-a-box set-up.

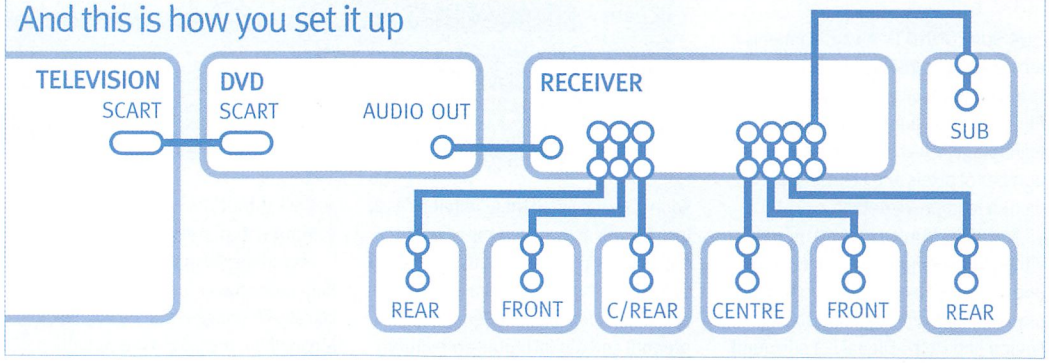
The good news, though, is that just as prices of DVD players continue to tumble, offering you ever more performance for your money, the latest multichannel receivers cost a lot less than their forebears, yet have made significant strides in both sonic ability and flexibility. Aside from the very cheapest, most now offer full compatibility with DVDs having 6.1 'extended surround' soundtracks, giving you a much more three-dimensional home cinema experience – assuming you're prepared to put up with an extra surround speaker, of course.

All surround receivers also offer a great long-term ownership proposition, since even the least expensive designs come with plenty of input sockets to accept all the components you might want to connect to your set-up, from extra video sources such as your TV's sound and a video recorder right through to CD players and digital recorders.

> "The built-in upgrade path, coupled with sonic superiority over packages, makes a receiver the smart buy"

It's this built-in upgrade path, coupled with sonic superiority when compared to packaged solutions, that makes the receiver our preferred budget home cinema option. It's the smart buy.

And this is how you set it up



PIONEER VSX-C301S £250

FOR

Simplicity and style; compact dimensions but still delivers plenty of power

AGAINST

Nothing major, unless you're into receiver machismo, in which case see opposite

VERDICT

A fine partner for Pioneer's entry-level DV-464S DVD player, this slimline unit is also ideal with other budget machines

SO ALL RECEIVERS are big, hefty and macho, right? Wrong – the current trend is toward slimline home cinema equipment designed to tackle the all-in-one home-cinema-in-a-box packages head-on, and this Pioneer is a fine example of the trend. Yes, it's basically designed to partner the company's new-generation DVD players, and in particular the entry-level DV-464S, but while it doesn't make quite such a good visual match with our Toshiba Supertest winner, it certainly has the performance to make the most of the digital signal quality the SD330 can deliver.

And while the Pioneer may be very slim indeed, standing just 7cm tall, it's not lacking in power or weight. The onboard amplification delivers a claimed 75W into each of five channels – although this is in fact nearer 50Wpc when measured without the pixie dust of flattering distortion and frequency parameters – and the receiver supports all the popular surround formats, including the 5.1 versions of Dolby Digital, Dolby Pro-Logic II and DTS. There's also a 30-preset FM RDS/AM radio tuner built-in, along with a wide range of effects modes including proprietary settings for games, sports and headphone listening.

One novelty here is the provision of RGB-enabled Scart sockets on the rear of the receiver designed to make connection into a system even simpler than usual. Two Scart inputs are provided and two outputs, and while our advice would always be to connect your DVD player direct to a TV set for the very best picture quality, there's no denying the connections provided here are convenient. The unit also has conventional digital and analogue sockets for system hook-up.

The Pioneer VSX-C301S sounds as good as it looks, with a more than reasonable performance in stereo and plenty of weight and focus when playing multichannel soundtracks. Add in the ease with which it can be set-up and used, and you have a solution that will appeal to anyone wanting great sound without all the machismo.

Pioneer's slimline AV receiver may stand just 7cm tall, but it has a weighty, confident presentation of music and movies that belies its dimensions

FOR

Superb all-round ability; 6.1-channel operation; easy to set up and use

AGAINST

Not exactly dripping with facilities by the standards of its class; sound is warm

VERDICT

Not one of the newest receivers on the block, yet the Yamaha can still cut it, with great performance for the money

THE FIRST RECEIVER to hit the magic £300 barrier for a fully equipped 6.1 multichannel unit, Yamaha's RX-V440RDS has since then set the the benchmark that rival manufacturers have been striving to attain. And yet the Yamaha remains a strong buy in this highly competitive arena – clearly the company's designers got it right first time.

Kudos, then, to Yamaha for building a product that not only set new standards, but had the wherewithal to keep on leading a sector of the market. True, when compared with the Pioneer VSX-D812 below, the Yamaha's specification looks a little mean: it omits some of the input/output options provided on that unit, and as such is less able to grow with your system needs over time.

But it sounds so good that we don't really mind. Despite losing the 'on-paper' power war, the RX-V440RDS makes great use of its comparatively modest 65w per channel output, sounding full, rich and thoroughly listenable whatever you play through it. In part, that's a reflection of Yamaha's usual modesty with power output figures: to its credit, the company always quotes ratings measured using the most rigorous (and honest) criteria rather than trying to win the specification war by applying flattering parameters. And while this one sounds warm against some harder-hitting rivals, it's friendly, accommodating of speakers and rooms, and always rewarding to listen to.

That's readily demonstrated with a loud blast of action from Behind Enemy Lines. The RX-V440RDS can't match the Sony for processing speed or spaciousness, but it beats it for overall enjoyment – you revel in its richness and become immersed in the cinema-sound experience as you do so. Explosions have weight, conviction and good midrange drive, with bass as well-extended as any sensible listener could want for most modest living rooms. Perhaps it could sound punchier, but many listeners will prefer the Yamaha's unruffled, composed balance in any event.

And the Yamaha suffers from very few outright flaws. It's even decent in stereo – at least by the standards of AV receivers – conveying rhythms with a reasonable if slightly lush musicality. That, along with its home cinema strengths, means this remains one of the best multichannel receivers £300 (or less) can buy.

It may lose the specification war, and sound a little warm, but the Yamaha remains a great buy at just £300

FOR

Blistering multichannel sound; decent stereo ability; terrific specification

AGAINST

Nothing at the price

VERDICT

Another astounding receiver from Pioneer, the VSX-D812S is capable of subtlety when required, and loads of power, too

PIONEER HAS SOMETIMES seemed to struggle at the entry-level end of the market: it's had some great home cinema products recently, but its budget stuff has been more competent than class-leading. The VSX-D812 puts all that right, looking very like a 'mini' version of the mighty £2700 VSX-AX10 – and why not? If you've got that kind of kudos sitting up at the top of your range, it's sensible to make use of it.

The VSX-D812 offers an extensive array of inputs and abilities for its price, and even allows you to connect two pairs of centre-rear speakers for what Pioneer calls a '7.1' set-up. As we've said many times before, there's no such thing – yet – but it's still a useful feature if you've got a larger room. However, since the two centre-rear speakers share the same amplification (this isn't the case in larger receivers, where discrete amps are used) it's important that you use easily driven speakers. Most popular designs at this kind of price level won't give the Pioneer any problems.

So, the specification is right, the looks are bang on the money: but how's the sound? In a word, excellent. The designers of the VSX-D812 seem to have added a layer of sophistication to its performance when compared to Pioneer's older budget receivers, which had a slight tendency to sound overbright, hard and coarse under duress. Just when you needed all the power and thunder, some of those units started to struggle.

There are no such problems here: this is a budget design with muscle, authority and the ability to go very loud indeed without ever sounding unduly harsh. The amplification power ratings – a claimed 6x100w – might have been 'cooked' upwards to appear more impressive (by using some flattering measurement parameters), but there's still plenty of drive, even during the excesses of Behind Enemy Lines' bangs and crashes. The seven-speaker mode works well, too, providing all that extra spaciousness when compared to a 6.1 set-up.

Surprisingly, the Pioneer works respectably with music, too. There are still the familiar weaknesses of timing and and bass agility to address – basically, a good stereo amp costing £150 has far more rhythmic ability – but by the same token, the VSX-D812 does manage to generate reasonable imaging, and it's not excessively unrefined. In fact, with multichannel SACD it proves to be a smooth, involving listen.

Yes, this is another remarkable Pioneer receiver, and shows just how seriously the company is taking the task of making this end of the market its own. And at the price it's an absolute steal.

Pioneer's £330 model looks like its range-toppers – and delivers more than a taste of their performance, too

Speaker packages £349-£800

Cracking surround sound speakers needn't hog a whole lot of cash or take up your entire living room

IF YOU'VE GOT a surround receiver, you'll need something to plug it into, and that's where these sharp-looking multichannel speaker packages step in.

Each comprises five speakers bolstered by a bass-generating subwoofer cabinet: that's one speaker for each of the main sound channels in a 5.1 surround set-up. Some modern receivers offer the additional flexibility of 6.1 surround sound, which means you'll need to find an extra speaker if you want to maximise the ability of your surround sound receiver.

Thankfully, many makers have tried to make this easier for you by offering an additional single surround speaker as an add-on upgrade, and usually these are available easily for a modest extra cost.

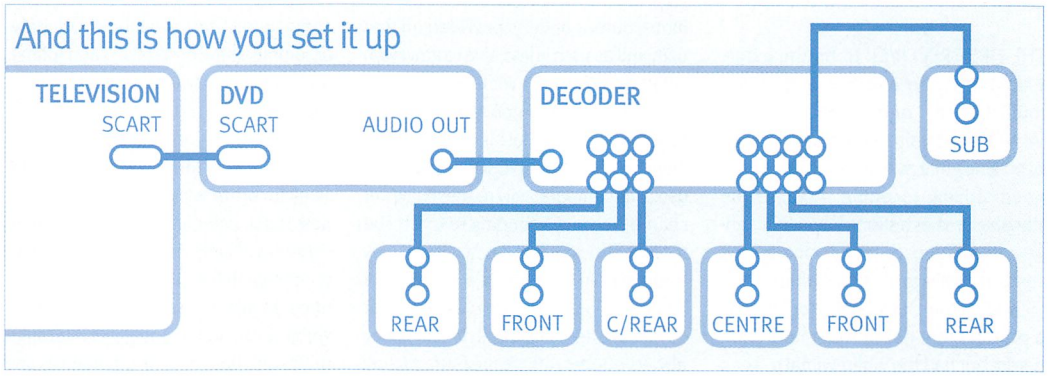
Remember when you go for any multichannel package that you'll need to budget for speaker cabling. A good system should use the same quality of speaker cable throughout, since this will help each speaker to sound tonally similar to its sibling. This will produce a more convincing, three-dimensional surround effect.

> "Remember, when you go for any multichannel package, that you'll need to budget for speaker cabling"

And don't forget the importance of speaker positioning. Speaker stands and wall brackets can transform the level of sonic delivery. A system won't thank you if you leave it on the carpet.

Finally, experiment with subwoofer location. Find the correct placement and you get tighter, more musical lower frequencies.

And this is how you set it up



CANTON MOVIE 10-MX II
£349

FOR

Well-focused and crisp performance; good looks; price

AGAINST

Occasionally bright-sounding nature means you should take care with partnering kit

VERDICT

For a modest price, this compact Canton package gives you bags of excitement and living room friendly looks

THIS IS ONE of the cheapest speaker packages we've seen, but don't let the bargain-basement price put you off. This system is loads of fun.

The package shown here is the new version of Canton's compact Movie 10-MX II. It gets a silver paint job and a conventional horizontal centre-channel arrangement, as used in separates systems the world over, but remains extremely competetively priced.

Four cute-looking satellites handle front and rear effects, while an active subwoofer looks after the low end. Inside the sub sits 50W of internal amplification, w hich powers a 20cm drive unit. It's all finished to an especially high standard and good, solid wall brackets are included in the price. At just 10cm deep the satellites will happily sit on your wall.

Set-up is fairly simple. As with most sub/sat kits, the satellites are designed to reach down to 100Hz, the standard 'small' crossover point found in most surround amplifiers, with the subwoofer handling the rest.

You can position the sub almost anywhere in the room, but experiment for your room's sonic sweet spot. We found that the best integration between the sub and its satellites comes with the drive unit facing the wall. This means the sub 'pressure loads' the surface and maximises its own ouput.

If you are unpacking your system for the first time, then allow the 10-MX II a couple of days to warm and sound its best. The satellites use fairly modest 15mm tweeters, and can sound a little bright straight from the box. Ideally leave them running over the weekend (good and loud) and the initial harshness gives way to composed, focused and crisp detail. Voices don't carry the same weight and extension that some rivals can convey. The Mission package opposite does a better job, but the Canton set-up offers ample clarity and the surround action in Star Wars: Attack of the Clones is speedy and full of life.

The slight lack of warmth and authority is an irritation at times, but the system's mix of accuracy and impact helps deliver plenty of excitement in compensation.

Stereo replay is not as proficient as multichannel, but that comes as no great surprise at this price. The delivery remains exciting, though, and feed the package fast-paced rock or hip-hop and it sounds fun. If you want a package for music as well as movies then save up and go for the £480 Mission m70s.

This is not the best-sounding package on these pages but it's keenly priced, stylish and loads of fun to listen to.

The Canton is fun but can sound a touch bright, so give a good, long warm up to tone it down

£480

FOR

Excellent sound, both in stereo and in multichannel form; great value for money

AGAINST

Not as small as some rivals, so takes up more of your living space

VERDICT

The Mission satellites are more than double the size of the Canton's but the payback is better and bigger sound

IT'S TIME TO increase both price and dimensions. The Mission Cinema m70 satellite speakers are much smaller than standard hi-fi speakers, but at 245mm-high they are over twice the height of the Canton's.

But there is method in Mission's apparent madness. The laws of physics mean the smaller the speaker the bigger the compromise. So up against smaller rivals, this package excels. It has greater overall authority, stronger outright punch, and sounds better as a result. The larger centre speaker makes a particularly welcome boost. The greater weight results in a more realsitic midrange, and in turn means voices sound more believable.

But it's with big, loud Hollywood blockbusters that this system really thrashes its teenier rivals. Spin Star Wars: Attack of the Clones and the battle scene sounds awesome. The room comes alive with weighty effects shifts, forceful laser-blast panning and crisp, accurately conveyed detonations.

Since four identical speakers are used front and rear, you get sonically believable surround effects, with sounds remaining consistent as they spin quickly around the listening room.

Home cinema is where this package excels but it also makes a decent stab at music. Smaller sized systems can sound tinny when it comes to CD replay but the Mission m70's richer sound means tunes sound closer to a more traditional hi-fi. You also get a more convincing soundstage than any other system we've tested in the last year.

And here's a bit of good news for those worried about lack of space. The bigger satellites mean extra muscle, so the m70 package gets away with a relatively small subwoofer. It uses just a 20cm drive unit but a larger-than-norm 100W amp means plenty of thump.

A winning compromise – the Missions are twice as tall as many satellite speakers, but sound twice as good as most

So it's not the most discreet system but if sound per pound is your bag, we reckon you won't care. It romps to stereo success and when it comes to a big-sounding home cinema experience it's streets ahead of smaller rivals. If you've got the room, the Mission m70 is a great surround speaker package.

FOR

Refined, well-integrated sound that's bit utterly composed and extremely exciting

AGAINST

A full-size speaker set up can beat it but this is the king of compact packages

VERDICT

Our 2003 Award-winner is small, effortlessly desirable and easy to install in any home: this is a real champion

FEAST YOUR EYES on our 2003 compact speaker package Product of the Year. They look so good that before you press play, they scream 'style over substance', but in reality it's a case of style and substance.

Since its 2001 introduction, the KEF KHT 2005 surround system has dominated this sector, and the revised 2005.2 is even better. To the naked eye, the new satellites look similar but some major internal revisions have improved both dynamics and power handling. The changes include new drive units, revised magnets, a new crossover and a host of other tweaks to help increase the available bandwidth from each little egg.

The new subwoofer offers a more dramatically different look. That's because, basically, KEF stuck the original design in the bin and launched an all-new design. It's now a sealed-box and uses a larger drive unit and far more amplifier guts to give it a vastly superior ouput. It fires out a room-shaking 250W of bass power and is significantly better than the old unit.

So, that's the engineering lecture over: let's talk sonics. Put simply, the KEF system plays anything extremely well. It has accurate timing and midrange clarity, plus a smooth, expansive and detailed top-end with bags of bite. This clear midrange means that dialogue is easy to follow. In other words, it's not a case of cranking the volume to hear quiet voices and then clasping your ears when the shouting starts.

Integration between the subwoofer and satellites is as good as we've heard, which helps to convince you that you are listening to a much larger-sized (and far more expensive) speaker arrangement.

Of course a full-size speaker offers greater sonic potential than this room-friendly package but this is a sonic compromise at its most acceptable.

The biggest improvement over the previous KEF package is found in the lower frequencies. The new sub is a corker and the bass on offer stuns. For an £800 package to deliver this sort of bass reach, slam and energy takes some doing.

This bass performance is of course great fun for boisterous movie scores but it's also good news for music fans. The sub's tight grip means musical bass and results in foot-tapping tunes. This package sets the standard for £1000 and under offerings.

Super-stylish looks coupled with seat-of-your pants sonic excitement make this the sub/sat package of choice

Nicam stereo TVs £400-£1000

Go for a standard stereo TV if you plan to add a surround system to your DVD player at a later date

IF YOU HAVEN'T already got yourself a widescreen TV, then there's no time like the present. The latest 16:9 sets are equipped to offer significant increases in picture performance over their forebears, in particular thanks to the advent of the affordable flat-screen picture tube.

This shouldn't be confused with the flat TV, such as a plasma or LCD set; flat-screen simply means that the glass tube that makes up the TV's screen uses a flat outer face. This helps to reduce unwanted reflections (caused by lights or windows) that can intrude on your viewing pleasure, but more importantly, it also virtually eliminates 'distortions' to the image. A curved screen tube subtly bends images, especially towards each corner of the screen, but a flatscreen tube avoids this problem, thereby making it the screen of choice, especially if you plan to watch a lot of DVDs.

In this section, we're concentrating on stereo TVs. Obviously, you could simply connect your DVD player into a stereo set and leave it at that, but from the home cinema point of view, you'd be missing out on a lot of surround sound fun. We view sets like this as being ideal for use with an existing surround set-up, whether it's a home cinema in a box or a receiver and speakers set-up. Don't forget that you can easily connect the sound of your stereo TV into an external surround system too, and this can add a new dimension to 'off-air' TV viewing. It's worth looking out for a home cinema system that offers Dolby Pro-Logic II for just this purpose.

> "Don't forget that you can easily connect the sound of your stereo TV into a surround sound system too"

And this is how you set it up

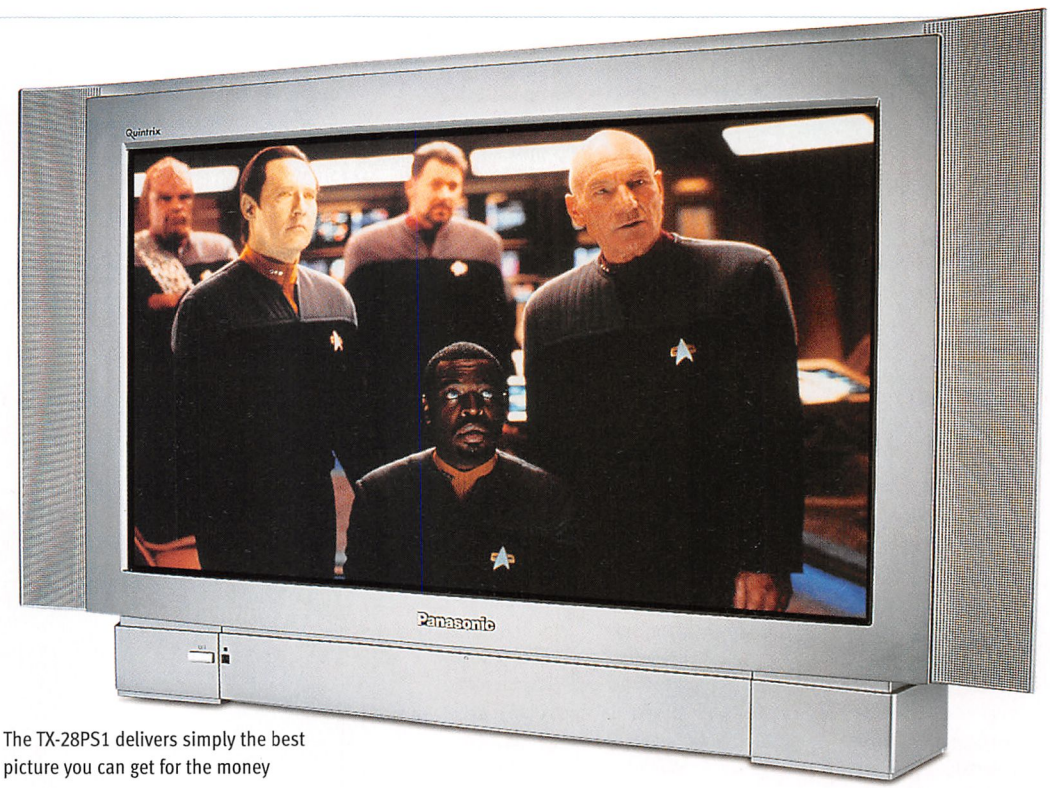
Brilliant picture, solid sonic performance, reasonable specification, great price

AGAINST

Nothing significant, although it would be nice to have component video inputs, too

VERDICT

The best affordable telly on the market, this is a terrific investment that will flatter any decent budget DVD player's picture



The TX-28PS1 delivers simply the best picture you can get for the money

PANASONIC HAS PUSHED the frontiers of budget TV performance with this set. Put simply, the TX-PS1 delivers an extraordinary picture for its very reasonable price.

It's a comparatively basic set, with a 16:9 Quintrix widescreen flat picture tube, 50Hz scan and Nicam stereo sound. It won't sell itself on the basis of socket provision either, but there's an acceptable degree of connectivity on offer. Two Scart sockets, one RGB-capable, are fitted as standard.

The TX-28PS1 doesn't pull up many trees in terms of sound quality when compared to rivals either. It's not bad, by any means, but the sonic performance lacks the midrange weight and realism of rivals

But the TX-28PS1 aims to impress with one thing and one thing only: the quality of its picture. That picture is truly staggering for the money, with blacks that are consistently deep and dense, and a colour balance that hits a sublime balance of realism and rich tones. Spin the DVD of Treasure Planet and the deep hues and crystal-clear definition belie the set's modest price tag with a richness and vitality that genuinely impress.

Sometimes a product hits the right balance, spot-on, and the TX-28PS1 is one of those. If you want a TV and your budget is £500 then our verdict is simple: look no further.

FOR

Fine picture, respectable sound, internal digital television tuner flexibility

AGAINST

Only that some rival sets offer you a little more performance with DVD-Video watching

VERDICT

A good marriage of digital TV convenience and effective performance, although not quite a rival for the best in this class

DIGITAL TV WITHOUT the hassle of a separate digibox: if it sounds like a good idea, that's because it is. It's also the idea behind Panasonic's DT4 series of IDTVs (integrated digital televisions). The TX-32DT4 gives you easy access to Freeview services via the on-board digital tuner, and even has a modem connection allowing you to access online services.

The TX32-DT4 is fitted with a Quintrix F picture tube and 'Tau' widescreen technology, and features attractive though fairly standard silver styling. It has also been the recipient of a recent price cut, from £950 to £800.

In action the off-air picture is fine, with good line definition and minimal digital noise. With fast-moving action such as a car chase or a football match, this Panasonic tracks quick motion adeptly, with commendable clarity and a natural, realistic feel.

In DVD mode the TX-32DT4 creates deep blacks and impressive contrast, delivering the bleak scenes from Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers with the right blend of detail and atmosphere. The stereo sound is also effective, although for the money there are rivals that offer you a more convincing and natural midrange. All in all, then, this is a solid set that works well for the price.

FOR

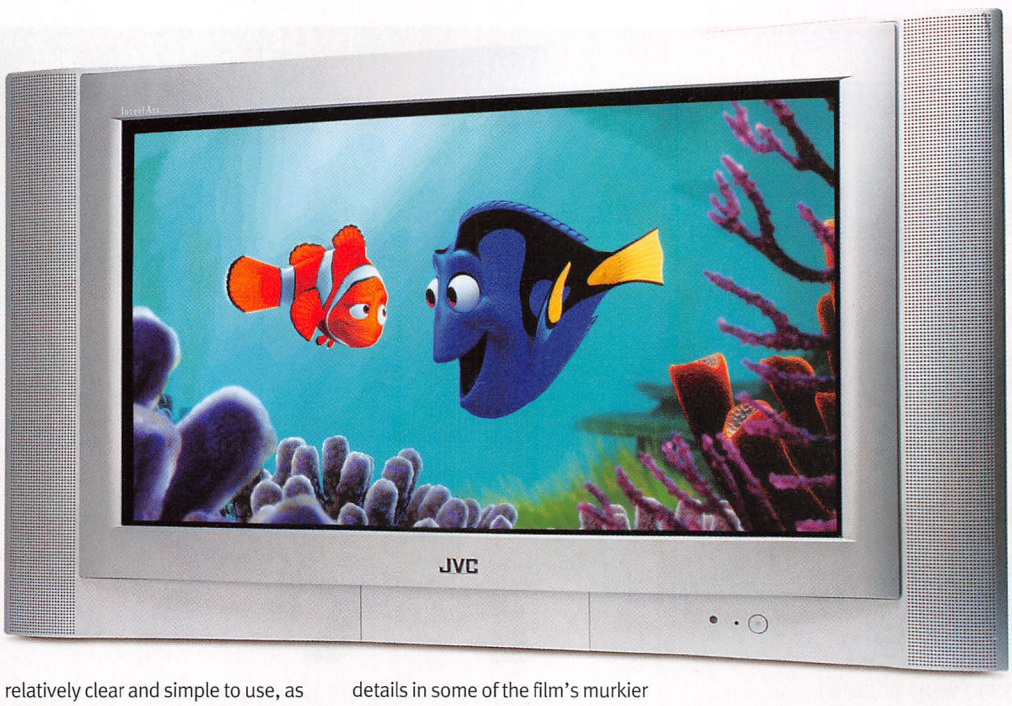
Solid picture in most regards, including good contrast levels; good stereo sound

AGAINST

Picture doesn't match the best in this class for detail, being slightly soft

VERDICT

A fine all-rounder, with very respectable stereo sound performance, and a largely good picture for the price



PART OF JVC'S InteriArt range, the AV32T25 combines attractive styling with reassuringly sturdy build quality. This is reflected by the stereo sound quality you get from the set's 20W speakers, which can deliver a full, rich and detailed sound.

There's a fairly standard range of connections on offer, including three Scart sockets (although only one offers RGB). The onscreen menus can be a little annoying: the process of set-up and picture adjustment isn't as intuitive as on many rival sets, although the remote handset is relatively clear and simple to use, as you'd hope from a company with JVC's considerable experience.

That said, get the JVC into action and it delivers a high standard of picture. Feed it with the DVD of Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers and it deals with the movie's dark scenes and fast movement with a commendable level of contrast and control. You can clearly make out the background details in some of the film's murkier scenes, a sure sign of a set that has well-sorted black and white levels.

The AV32T25 also delivers high levels of detail, although it doesn't, in absolute terms, have the sparkling line definition and realism that some of its rivals can muster. While it is admirably low on digital artefacts, the overall presentation tends toward being rather soft, with a less distinctive sense of background and foreground than can be found elsewhere for similar money. This is perhaps the only area of concern in terms of performance, which is why we'd suggest you also audition the TX-32DT4 from Panasonic (as well as the pricier Toshiba 32ZD26P). That said, you'll find this JVC at some terrifically tempting prices online...

Perfect systems £899-£1400

The secret of great home cinema for £750 is revealed here, plus three great value-for-money packages

PUT IT TOGETHER and what have you got? No, not 'bibbidi-bobbidi-boo', but something even better: perfect home cinema systems that won't break the bank.

How you configure your system is as much to do with your needs as the size of your pocket. You could combine our Supertest winning Toshiba player with a do-it-all surround sound TV such as the Panasonic TX-28PS5, and get complete Dolby Digital/Pro-Logic II sound from just two boxes for £750. Even connecting it up is simple – as we showed a few pages back, all you need is a Scart connection to carry the picture from DVD player to TV, and a digital feed for the sound to the set's processor.

Alternatively you could go down a route that boosts performance without costing you a fortune, adding a compact speaker package to the Toshiba, and using a simpler TV set to provide the pictures – again for £750.

> "The most flexible route – a receiver, TV and full-size speaker system – gives the best sound and vision"

But the most flexible route must involve a TV, a receiver and a full-size speaker system: this will give you the best sound, a great picture and the ability to upgrade your system later if you wish. Read on as we explain the three routes in more detail...

Good sound and vision without spending a fortune from the Toshiba, Logitech and Panasonic

SO YOU WANT to do the home cinema thing on a tight budget? The answer is to combine the Toshiba with a compact speaker system such as that from Creative and you can have full home cinema for just £750. But for a better sound, we'd drop the Creative system in favour of the Logitech Z-680, which offers you everything you'll need on the sound side of things for just a little extra cash – £149 to be precise.

Packed into one box are the processor, a centre and four more speakers for front left and right and surround duties, plus an active subwoofer. All you have to do is take a digital feed from the Toshiba to the Logitech processor, connect up the speakers, and do a quick bit of set-up and tuning.

The Toshiba and Logitech work together well to give a sound that has good weight and definition, even if it's not to the standards of the more expensive conventional package opposite, and with the Toshiba in the TV stand and the Logitech processor perhaps sitting atop the set's cabinet, you have a complete 'stealth' home cinema system that won't fill the room with ugly boxes. We've even removed the grilles from the speakers, just like the manual suggested, for that 'pro audio' look. Mmmm – nice...

To handle the visual side of the equation we've used the 28in Panasonic, winner of a Best Buy in the 2003 WHAT HI-FI? Sound and Vision Awards, and an absolute steal at just £500. It produces a crisp picture with fine contrast and detail and, in truth, there seems little reason to spend much more. Add in the Toshiba player and Logitech speakers, and you have a fine budget set-up.

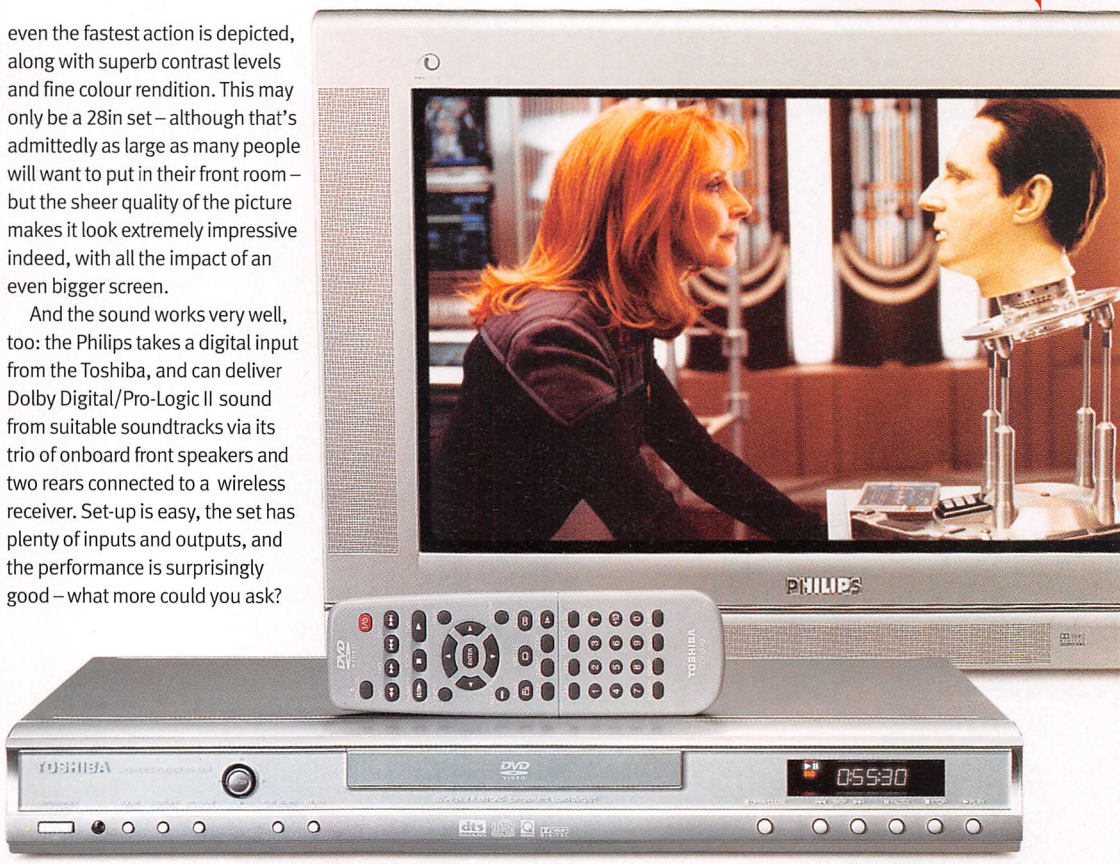
HOME CINEMA DOESN'T get any simpler than this and, once again, it can be really cheap. Our favourite Toshiba DVD player could be mated to the Panasonic TX-28PS5 for just £750, but this Philips redefines standards in this sector of the market. As well as a fine picture it offers a sound that's more than respectable, plus the great benefit of wireless rear speakers to keep the clutter down. If you want home cinema that's as stylish as it is easy to set up, this could be the solution for you.

Philips isn't too sold on the benefits of progressive scan, preferring its own Pixel Plus technology to boost detail and smooth motion on the screen. It works here to breathtaking effect, giving punch and power to the way even the fastest action is depicted, along with superb contrast levels and fine colour rendition. This may only be a 28in set – although that's admittedly as large as many people will want to put in their front room – but the sheer quality of the picture makes it look extremely impressive indeed, with all the impact of an even bigger screen.

And the sound works very well, too: the Philips takes a digital input from the Toshiba, and can deliver Dolby Digital/Pro-Logic II sound from suitable soundtracks via its trio of onboard front speakers and two rears connected to a wireless receiver. Set-up is easy, the set has plenty of inputs and outputs, and the performance is surprisingly good – what more could you ask?



Plenty of power from our receiver/ speakers system

YOU CAN'T BEAT a conventional home cinema system when it comes to outright performance and flexibility for your money, and this set-up, using components from four of the leading names in AV technology, offers a huge amount for what is still relatively sensible money.

We don't need the surround ability of the Philips TV used in the system above – the receiver and speakers are going to take over those duties – so we're back to the excellent 28in Panasonic set, saving us a useful £700 to put towards the amplification and speakers. And that saving almost pays for Yamaha's bargain 6.1-channel receiver and Mission's fine m70 speaker package which, with the addition of one extra speaker, will let you do the complete 6.1-channel thang if required.

However, even in 5.1-channel modes the system shines: the big, rich presentation of the Yamaha is well suited to the fast, dynamic and detailed presentation of the Mission speakers, and though the RX-V440RDS doesn't have a massive power output, at least by the standards of some of today's home cinema monsters, it uses its 65w per channel to good effect, giving a sound that's as powerful and exciting as it is well-controlled.

With a system like this in harness, it's not hard to see what makes the Toshiba player so special: the picture looks excellent on the Panasonic, while the Yamaha gets its teeth into the clean digital feed from the player to recreate excellent surround from Dolby Digital soundtracks or those using DTS encoding. There's crunching action and fine channel steering, as adept when effects are flying as it is with subtle ambience.

Yes, this system takes up rather more space than the set-up above, but it's worth it – you won't regret buying it for a moment.

If you want to upgrade your budget system to a more classy combo, here's the speaker solution

SKY-HIGH HOUSE prices mean more and more people are improving their existing habitat instead of moving home. But what does this mean to the world of hi-fi? Well, it means the upgrade is king, and this helps explain the explosion in mid-price kit offerings.

Owners of budget systems are building new hi-fi combinations costing £1500 upwards, and, when it comes to speakers, they're spoilt for choice. We've assembled a known trio of top standmounters and a familiar triple of fantastic floorstanders. Plus we introduce a couple of promising newcomers: the Quad 12L standmounter and the Monitor Audio Bronze B6 tower. They both cost just £500 a pair and boast impressive siblings: Monitor Audio's Bronze B2 is our 2003 budget Best Buy and the Quad 11L is our reigning speaker Product of the Year.

But the debutantes face a tough task. The opposition includes Dynaudio's awesome Audience 52 plus a clutch of five star winners. It's a cracking line up and this one's going to be as tight as Pavarotti's suitcase.

AVI Neutron III

FOR

Beautiful midrange; tip-top resolution; control, compact size

AGAINST

Its ultimate bass depth tends to fall short of bigger rivals

VERDICT

These space-savers don't take over your room, but they look after the sonic duties with skill and authority

FIRST OUT OF the box is the AVI Neutron III. And it's a small box – very small. To get an idea of this speaker's size, take a look at this page – the Neutron III is around 2cm shorter than the height of this magazine.

Place one up against a giant Wharfedale Evo 30 and you half expect a white towel, thrown from AVI's Gloucestershire headquarters, to flutter into our listening room. But have no fear: the Neutron pair may appear vulnerable, but charge them up and they punch well above their weight. And for best results position the Neutron IIIs about 20cm from the rear wall – this helps the little speakers produce a scale of sound that astonishes.

A significant factor behind this impressive performance is the gorgeous-sounding Danish-built tweeter. AVI says this unit costs three- to five-times the norm for a monitor this price and the company uses it on all its loudspeakers. All this expense would be pointless without comparably capable bass and the 5in doped paper cone makes the effort worthwhile. The two units integrate extremely well and though the tweeter is the star, the bass driver never sounds out of place.

But let's be clear, if you are looking for buckets of deep bass, the AVIs are not for you. The laws of physics mean these boxes will never match the floorstanders in this test for quantity of lower frequencies but when it comes to quality of bass, they are more than able. Spin this month's favourite bass tester – Ennio Morricone Remixes Volume 1 from Compost Records and the dubbed-up spaghetti western themes belt out with fine timing, composure and authority. The AVIs offer strict control and, no matter how complex the tunes, they present the sound in a coherent manner.

And if you love midrange you'll love the manner in which the Neutron III's care for voices. The female vocals in Hakan Lidbo's mix of Alla Serenita sound authentic and the rich tones overflow with huge spoonfuls of sweet honey. Stunning.

Lend the little AVIs your ear and they repay with pure, unbridled quality. As all-round speakers we award them four stars, but for small rooms they're a leading choice.

> "These are very small speakers: in fact the Neutron III is about 2cm shorter than the height of this magazine"

Dynaudio Audience 52

£624 ★★★★★

FOR

Hard-hitting bass; refinement; consistently enjoyable presentation; love to party

AGAINST

Timing occasionally falters in comparison to some highly capable rivals

VERDICT

Classy speakers with an Award-winning heritage that will grace any mid-price set-up

WHEN IT COMES to Awards, Dynaudio's Audience speakers behave like Olympian Sir Steve Redgrave. First the Audience 50 Mk 2 then the Audience 52 and latterly the Audience 52 real-wood veneer version seen here – they've all demonstrated an endless appetite for winning, consistently gobbling up gongs at our annual Awards. These boxes are current holders of the £500-£999 speaker Best Buy.

So, why do we regard the 52s so highly? In short, musicality: the 52s love all genres, and from Mahler's dynamic Symphony No 6 to Lizz Wright's more subtle Salt, presentation impresses.

In our book, good dynamics equal added interest and this is where the speakers excel. The difference between loud and quiet moments – as the Dynaudios expertly demonstrate with classical crescendos – stuns. Think of how a cheap radio speaker hardly varies in level and imagine the complete opposite: that's how these speakers sound.

Bass performance is similarly assured. Hip-hop sets such as Mary J Blige's Love & Life thump along and drums sound defined and hard-hitting. In a straight bass-weight fight the 52s whip the AVI Neutron III's, but to be fair the Dynaudios are bigger all round than their £500 rivals.

This weight and control means these units are ideal party speakers: crank up the volume and your ears will admit defeat long before the powerful Dynaudios surrender to the devil of distortion. Place them in free space, on a good pair of stands, and the soundstage is especially roomy and the 28mm soft dome tweeter and 17cm polypropylene driver integrate enjoyably. No frequency range stands out from the others, and treble avoids harshness while bass avoids boom.

Our only criticism concerns timing. Play the brilliantly demanding Indian-music soundtrack from Devdas, and the tricky beats occasionally fox the Dynaudios. But this observation must be taken in context – the 52s are only exposed by the very best timers like the AVIs and Quads.

Overall the Dynaudio Audience 52s are champion speakers. Their sonic character is ever so slightly forgiving but this is what makes thousands of listeners warm to them.

> "These are ideal party speakers: crank up the volume and your ears will admit defeat long before the 52s do"

Monitor Audio Bronze B6

£500 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Huge levels of bass; build quality; commanding looks

AGAINST

Inability to reign in lower frequencies spoils overall presentation

VERDICT

The disappointing B6 takes some of the shine off the Award-winning Bronze family

THE MONITOR AUDIO B6 is an ideal example of the importance of hearing before you buy. Based on family ability the B6 should stun: its B2 brother is our reigning budget speaker king and the Monitor Audio B4 surround sound package is a cracker. So does that mean you can buy a pair of B6s without a demo? Certainly not. Black sheep is a bit strong, but what we have here is the Ralf of the Schumacher siblings.

Initially the B6 gives the impression of good value for money. The commanding tower reaches up almost one metre and the front baffle contains an array of drivers, plus a front port. Round the back you find biwire terminals and a further port. Add solid build – the B6 is built from 18mm thick MDF – and a pleasant finish and you have the makings of a fine speaker.

So why four drivers? Well, a C-CAM tweeter handles the highest frequencies; directly below a single MMP Mk2 driver looks after upper bass and midrange, and finally the two units below are on strictly bass-only duties.

The result is a lot of bass – but sadly only in terms of quantity, not quality. Mary J Blige's deep hip-hop beats swamp smaller rooms and even in larger rooms the B6 doesn't possess the control or punch to turn this mass of low-end information into a musically accurate presentation. The B6s may function more effectively in a home cinema set-up where a competent sub could handle much of the bass, but for stereo listening the result is poor. Insert the bungs and the problem lessens, but in turn this taints the overall sound. As a rule, if you need to bung speakers, buy a different pair.

Higher up the frequency range the B6 is more capable. There's a reasonable level of information on offer and the C-CAM unit avoids harshness – on the condition you give it a good warm up – and midrange is passable but not hugely realistic.

But with bass-management issues this severe, it doesn't matter how good the midrange or treble units sound – they'll always be dragged down by the twin drivers plodding below them. The B6s seem destined to remain in the shadow of their more able siblings.

> "The B6 doesn't have the control or punch to turn the mass of bass it products into a musically accurate presentation"

Monitor Audio Silver S6

£600 ★★★★☆

FOR

Glorious build and finish; good detail in midrange and refined treble

AGAINST

Occasionally clumsy bass can engulf the enjoyable treble and midrange

VERDICT

Very good floorstanders with lots going for them, but take care with that big bass

SO AFTER A disappointing debut from the Bronze B6 it's over to the Silver S6 to polish up the family Monitor Audio reputation. And straight from the box the outlook improves. At only £100 extra over the B6, this speaker offers a significant step up in visual stature, and its classy cabinet rivals the impressive Quad in the quality-of-finish stakes. The twin rear-ported unit also feels good and solid – this in part is due to the extensive internal bracing – and this rigidity reduces cabinet colouration and produces a cleaner and more incisive sound.

Like the B6 it's a two-and-a-half way design – the bottom unit lends a hand with lower frequencies – but the S6 employs one less driver. These are not the same units found in the Bronze series though. There is a specific Silver 'S' tweeter, again based on Monitor Audio's C-CAM Gold Dome, and all three drivers use ceramic-coated metal diaphragms to improve rigidity without adding weight: the idea is to improve detail resolution and dynamics. The larger drivers also use a new rubber surround with a flush edge – the intention is not only to allow slimmer, more attractive cabinet designs but also to present a smooth, more natural sound.

Up and running, and placed in free space the S6s sound the more accomplished of the two Monitor Audio entrants. A crucial reason for the difference in performance is the superior bass on offer. Yes, there's one less driver but there's still plenty of weight and lower frequencies are reasonably tight. In our opinion there is still a lack of control – especially with Mary J Blige's hip-hop – but in a bigger room the problem is more bearable.

However, the main attraction of this floorstander is the insight on offer at higher frequencies. During Mahler's Symphony 6 the S6s manage to unravel the musical message and remain unruffled when the pieces are at their most complex. That driver array is also pretty nifty with vocals and Mary J's voice sounds rich and believable.

Good timing and decent attack means the Silver S6 adds up to a very impressive floorstander for the money. If you can live with the occasionally heavy-handed bass these Monitor Audios are a bright prospect.

extreme Performance

No matter how good your home entertainment system, high quality cabling is critical to reveal its true performance capability. By combining our award-winning patented technologies with ultra-high grade materials and a passion for performance, we have been able to engineer a new breed of cables that deliver the very essence and life of analogue and digital signals.

XHT611

The IXOS® XHT611 Flat SCART interconnect delivers the performance you would expect from IXOS® but with the convenience of a flat cable. High Grade PC Oxygen Free Copper conductors are used for a high-resolution image and a twin screen arrangement of Oxygen Free Copper braid and an Aluminium-Mylar foil wrap virtually eliminate RF (radio frequency) induced noise.

"This outstanding flat ribbon cable uses a cunning centre-type plug that makes life very easy when you've got to connect several Scart cables at once. The picture's excellent for the price and it's sonically capable too. Well worth checking out."

Quad 12L

£500 ★★★★★

FOR

Rock-hard bass; dynamics; detailed delivery; awesome depth of field; build and finish

AGAINST

Unforgiving, what you play is what you hear

VERDICT

Like the 11L, this Quad offers stunning value for money. Massively transparent but a joy with the right kit and recordings

YOU'RE HAVING AN impromptu footie match in the park and it turns out one of the opposition's related to a famous player – and he's a bit handy, too. Nothing worse. This is how the other speakers in this test must feel about the majestic-looking Quad 12L.

For those unfamiliar with the Quad's sibling, the £379 11L is our 2003 speaker Product of the Year. It's a stunner but if we are being hypercritical we could ask for a touch more bass weight. Well, a larger cabinet tends to mean greater bass weight and the 12L offers extra volume... so bring on the test.

The 12L's mid/bass driver features a resin-impregnated Kevlar diaphragm. The idea is the resin stiffens the cone, while the inherent self-damping properties of woven Kevlar keeps cone resonance to a minimum. This unit is 1.5in larger than the 11L's mid/bass driver, and the tweeter used is found in both versions.

But, as we know (see Monitor Audio's Bronze B6) one successful speaker doesn't guarantee a winning range. Not always, but in action, the 12L is awesome. Move the speakers away from the wall – this gives the twin rear port room to breathe – and the depth of field is such you can almost believe you are listening in surround sound. Excellent.

And remember our minor moan concerning the 11L's bass weight? Well, big bruv solves that one – the 12L dives deeper and carries extra force. It falls just short of the depth of its stand-mounter rival, the Dynaudio Audience 52, but delivery is rock hard. Hakan Lidbo's Morricone remix belts out with precision timing and the monitors handle even the devilishly tricky beats from Devdas's soundtrack with skill.

Dynamics are wonderful and detail resolution is best in class – definitely a case of uncovering nuances other rivals miss. The midrange is rich and informative, though falls just short of the 11L's abilities. We reckon that's the trade off for the extra bass weight.

Our only word of warning concerns possible partners. The Quads are hugely transparent, unforgiving speakers – in other words a bad recording sounds bad – so try to avoid lean or similarly characterised electronics. Another Quad, another L of a speaker.

> "Dynamics are wonderful and detail resolution is best in class – these uncover nuances other rivals miss"

Spendor S3

£600 ★★★★½

FOR

Transparency; tonal balance; refinement; informative delivery; neat build and looks

AGAINST

Can't match the bass weight of larger-sized rivals; lose composure at high volumes

VERDICT

The little S3s make up for their sonic limitations with a stimulating, natural-sounding performance

HERE'S ANOTHER DWARF among the giants. At 31cm-tall the Spendor S3 is marginally larger than the AVI Neutron III, but we're looking for the best sound-per-pound all-rounder here so things don't look too rosy from the outset. But we guarantee that many of you will still love this speaker. These fans are unlikely to include hip-hop aficionados or those who love to crank up their amp but, if you enjoy natural-sounding voices and acoustic instruments, read on.

Other Spendor lovers will have smaller listening rooms – the closed box design means it is less fussy about positioning than even the neat AVI Neutron III. But for best results place the S3s open out into the room and on top of solid speaker stands. Choose platforms carefully though – the Spendors' compact bottoms can slip between the spikes. Ouch.

The S3's 13cm homopolymer driver sits below a 19mm soft-dome tweeter. Round the back of the cabinet the terminals accept biwire cables. The S3's textured cherry wood veneer is gorgeous to the touch and build quality is superb if not class-leading.

Presentation is also of a model standard. That tweeter digs up masses of information and its impressive transparency means the difference in recording quality between discs is obvious. This honest character is similar to the Quad 12L's but the S3 is more forgiving and lends the music a slightly warm, loving touch. As we promised, the little boxes love vocals and acoustic instruments - spin Silence, the closing track from Lizz Wright's debut album, Salt, and the guitarist's finger movements sound glorious and Wright's deep, distinctive voice contains bags of emotion and a rich, chocolate coating. This type of music finds the Spendors at their best – and their best is highly impressive.

Okay, it doesn't provide the low-end punch of the Quad 12L, and its bass weight falls far short of the floor-standers here, but the lower frequencies the S3 offers are taut and full of detail. And if you want to party all night then head over to the Dynaudios – the S3s lose composure at high volumes but otherwise these little stars offer a wonderfully refined and informative presentation.

Tannoy DC2

£649 ★★★★½

FOR

Expansive soundstage; big, bold presentation; frequency range; exciting

AGAINST

Opposite ends of the frequency range occasionally invasive

VERDICT

Take care with partners – the DC2s won't thank you for harsh electronics – but these animals love to party

THE DC2'S AREN'T exactly creepy, but its 25mm titanium-domed Super Tweeter staring at you from its time-aligned pod takes a bit of getting used to. And a keen eye will spot another tweeter hiding in the centre of the woofer. Let's summarise what's going on. The SuperTweeter extends the frequency range over 50KHz – especially good news for fans of SACD and DVD-A – and the DC2 woofer is Tannoy's Dual Concentric unit, which attempts to deliver an extra-wide imaging 'sweet spot' and create an expansive soundstage.

And there's more. The rear panel sports biwire terminals, including an earth, plus a rear port. So no shortage of hi-tech ideas and no complaints about build or finish, either. The front of the tower is dressed in a grey cloth and cabinet quality is good.

Now to set up. Ideally, place the DC2s in free space, in a large room: in smaller spaces the bass weight can dominate and spoil your listening. Next, give the towers a good run in – that tweeter combo needs a good workout to brush off a slightly harsh tinge.

Once up to speed, the Tannoys impress – if the Spendors aren't for you, these speakers may be. You can crank up the volume to absurd levels before the DC2s buckle – and hold on to your coffee mug if you're spinning bass-heavy hip-hop: these speakers pack a big punch.

Higher up the frequency range delivery contains good levels of detail and though not quite a match for the Quads, you feel the tweeter arrangement is working well. Midrange is also good – not quite Spendor good, but for a big floorstander the results are above average. As promised, the soundstage is expansive and the speakers present complex pieces from Mahler's Symphony No 6 with finesse.

Overall the Tannoys are a serious floorstander option, but due to the DC2's occasionally excessive treble, you must take care with aggressive or bright-sounding kit. You should also think carefully about the size of your listening room – is it big enough for these bold towers? Otherwise the DC2s are well worth a listen.

> "Hold on tight to your coffee mug if you're spinning bass-heavy hip-hop: these speakers pack a big punch"

Wharfedale Pacific Evo 30

£650 ★★★★★

FOR

Dynamic range; big yet punchy bass; upmarket looks; vast soundstage

AGAINST

Need space to sound their best, otherwise bass can take over

VERDICT

Fantastic value for money – if you have the space, give the Wharfedales a whirl and be bowled over by their dynamic presentation

WHARFEDALE'S PACIFIC EVO 30 is no normal floorstander. The speaker designer's holy grail is to combine the deep bass available from a tower, together with the control, speed and midrange excellence of a top stand-mounter. Well King Arthur's designers should keep searching, but the Evo 30's a step in the right direction.

So why does this Wharfedale receive such praise? The answer may lie in the curved real-wood veneer cabinet which, along with bracing and damping, attempts to improve midrange performance. Wharfedale says the curved shape reduces standing waves – sound produced behind the cone that bounces back and forth – and therefore cuts cabinet resonance.

And then there's the driver arrangement: the Kevlar drivers use a bi-directional weave in a further effort to absorb standing waves. And in an act to improve dispersion, and benefit from the strongest point of the cabinet, the tweeter housing is sunk into the top of the unit. We could go on ad-infinitum but the most blatant reason is the Evo 30 sounds excellent.

As with the other floorstanders here, this big monitor needs room to breathe – freespace is most desirable – and biwire for best results. The speaker takes whatever musical genre you chuck at it. Spin Mary J Blige's hip-hop and it pounds out hard-hitting low frequencies, and timing is the most accurate of the floorstanders on test. But the Evo 30 is not just a big-hitter: the drivers integrate superbly and possess the finesse to present the delicate moments from Lizz Wright's jazz debut with care and attention.

And if you love dynamic classical, hold on to your trilby. The Evo 30 reaches high and bends down low to paint a far-reaching sonic picture. Excitement is high in the agenda. Up against the Quad 12L this floorstander is still second best in the midrange, but nevertheless, vocals contain plenty of emotion and detail. Intakes of breath are deftly relayed.

At this price point floorstanders have a tendency to overwhelm with bass but give the Evo 30s plenty of room and they go a long way to convincing that size matters.

Winner Quad 12L

£500 ★★★★★

LET'S DEAL WITH the test disappointment first. The Monitor Audio Bronze B6 promised much but didn't deliver. The flabby bass was a big let down and in this illustrious company it looks out of its depth. Fortunately the Silver S6 restored some of Monitor Audio's pride. It looks great and, so long as you keep a reign on that bass, sounds even better.

The Tannoy is also an impressive unit that, with the correct electronics, excites as much as it rocks. But if these mighty towers are too big for your room, the little Spendor and tiny AVI offer neat solutions.

These two are very different in character – the AVI is the in-your-face Eminem and the Spendor is the more laid back Barry White – but both are highly capable.

The final test verdict, though, came down to the three five-star speakers. The Wharfedale Pacific Evo 30 impresses with its combination of deep, yet tight, bass and its midrange is a match for most rival standmounters. But for ultimate sound per pound it has to be the Quad 12Ls or the Dynaudio Audience 52s.

We can imagine lots of buyers opting for the Dynaudio's slightly more forgiving character but the Quad's 12L speaker – like its Quad 11L baby brother – is simply stunning value for money. Match it with complementary stereo electronics and the result is mid-price perfection.

The future of hi-fi in your home?

Look, Ma, no wires! Yamaha's MusicCAST wireless multiroom system is here, and it's every bit as good as we'd hoped it was going to be. Welcome to the future of home audio systems...

Yamaha MusicCAST | server £1800; client £600; speakers for client £100 | ★★★★★

FOR

Flexibility; ease of use; sounds good, too; just so cool we can't resist it

AGAINST

Time lag between server and client; get the feeling we're struggling to find something?

VERDICT

If this is the future of hi-fi, count us in: it offers fuss-free multiroom music for less

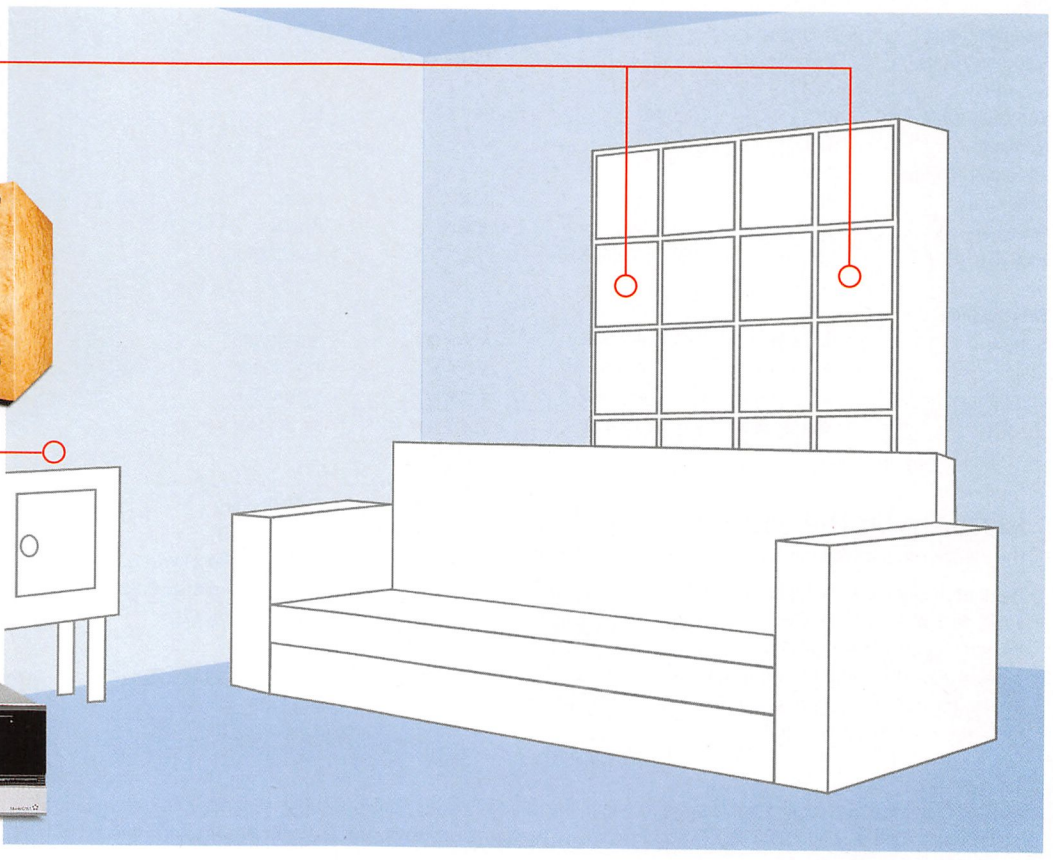
STIRLING MOSS. AUSTIN Powers. James Bond. They're some of the names that spring to mind when the subject of multiroom systems crops up: it's that bachelor-pad concept of pressing a button and music pouring forth from concealed speakers around the house. But until now, getting such whole-house entertainment's involved serious building work to install speakers and chase signal, control and power cables into the walls. A properly installed system could put you into five-figure territory and involve a good deal of domestic disruption.

Wireless networking solves that at a stroke. With a hub or server plugged into your main hi-fi system and remote wireless client units dotted around, it's possible to transmit music – and in the not too distant future, video – throughout the house. This was a hot topic at this year's IFA home entertainment show in Germany, with most of the big names showing systems of this kind. But the product grabbing the headlines is Yamaha's MusicCAST, simply because it's so neat. And with prices at a very sensible level, this could be one of the products that drags the whole wireless multiroom system concept out of the realm of early adopters and gadget freaks and into the real world.

Yamaha's CDR-HD1300 is our current Award-winning CD/hard-disk recorder, and there are similarities between MusicCAST's MCX-1000 server and that machine. Both use 80GB hard drives (although the MCX-1000 can be upgraded all the way to 2TB), rip CDs to the drive at high speed, and will also burn CD-R/RW discs if required.

The server holds music in both uncompressed PCM and MP3 format – the former for play out via the analogue terminals on the rear, the latter for transmission to the client units, although one client at a time can also access the full-resolution PCM datastream. The drive can hold around 100 hours of music like this, or 1000 hours

The Living Room



Speakers

The choice of speakers and amp in your main room is up to you – since the server is used with your main system, it can play through any amp and speakers you like, acting as a digital recorder, CD copier and above all a huge musical jukebox for your set-up.

The Server

Plugs into your main hi-fi system, and allows playback of music through that system, or streaming of other sources to the client units around the house. And if you have a Yamaha receiver, the system will also control that.

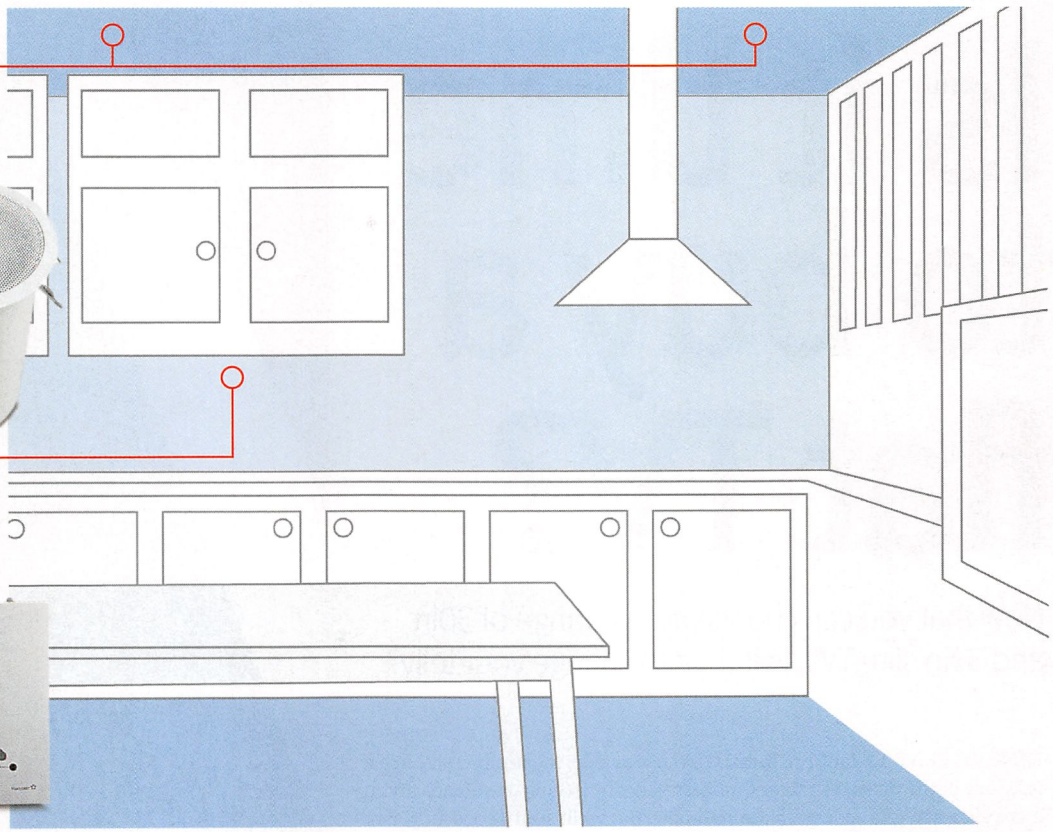
The Kitchen

Ceiling Speakers

Thanks to the fact the MusicCAST Client unit has built-in amplification, it could easily be connected to ceiling loudspeakers in locations such as kitchens. Most speaker companies have suitable models, ranging from the basic to the very exotic – this is KEF's new Ci80, which uses a tiny Uni-Q driver and costs £50.

Client Unit

The client unit can be wall-mounted or used on its own stand, and its compact dimensions make it perfect for use in rooms where space is tight, such as kitchens. And if you have a kitchen TV, the sound from that can be fed into the client, too.



if you only use MP3 encoding, though this depends on the data rate used – the server offers a choice of 160-, 240- or 320kbps. The server can sit in the kit rack with the rest of your main system and stream the output from your CD player, tuner or whatever to the client units. There's also an internet connection so the server's Gracenote cddb CD recognition software can be updated – this provides title, artist and track information as music is stored.

The MCX-A10 client units combine a wireless receiver with a control interface and stereo digital amplification, and can either be used with the matching MCX-SP10 speakers or connected at line level into a standard amp or system. Music can also be fed to the client in analogue or digital form, and there's a composite video output, so menus can be viewed on a larger screen.

And it keeps getting better: the Yamaha is even easy to install, thanks to simple auto-configuration routines allowing the server to find the client(s) and vice versa. And once they're all talking – up to seven clients can be used, with expansion possible using standard IEEE 802.11b hardware – you just select the music you want to play using the client. This will even wake up the server remotely if required and away you go, with different music in each zone if you wish. There's a lag of a few seconds between the server system and the client, but that's the only glitch we found, and won't be a problem if music from one room can't be overheard in another.

> "This is a system you could install in a couple of rooms, then expand as your needs – and your funds – increase. It's also very cool..."

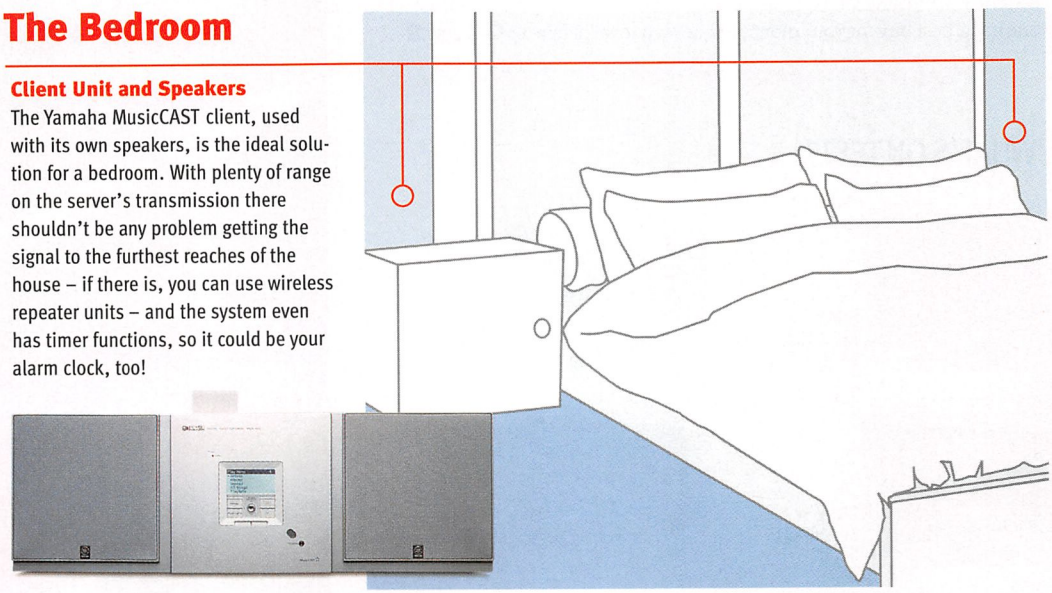
Best of all, MusicCAST sounds excellent. The server's on a par with that Award-winning CDR-HD1300, and while there are obvious signs of compression when music is streamed to the clients in MP3 format, it's more than good enough for background use and casual listening. Streaming in PCM format gives a much better balance, the speakers used with the client being the only limiting factor: they're enjoyable enough, but you notice the difference when you take a line-out and feed it into a conventional amp and speaker system. The quality is then very good indeed, with fine punch and drive, plus high levels of detail, as well suited to tinkling jazz or chamber music as it is to driving rock or rap.

You can't overstate the importance of this Yamaha: MusicCAST is a fine introduction to its technology's potential, which is likely to be the future of music in the home. And given that it's all done without recourse to any wires, this is one system you could install in a couple of rooms, then expand as your needs – and funds – increase. That it's also just about the coolest product we've tested all year helps, too...

The Bedroom

Client Unit and Speakers

The Yamaha MusicCAST client, used with its own speakers, is the ideal solution for a bedroom. With plenty of range on the server's transmission there shouldn't be any problem getting the signal to the furthest reaches of the house – if there is, you can use wireless repeater units – and the system even has timer functions, so it could be your alarm clock, too!



Is it time to buy a flat TV?

Now that you can choose from a range of 30in and 32in slim TVs, is it time to change your telly?

FANCY A FLAT TV for Christmas? Of course you do: the slimline screen has to be one of the most desirable of modern gadgets, freeing up valuable living room real estate and adding style to any home. But while slim is good, huge isn't necessarily to everyone's taste, and most of the plasma screens on the UK market come in a whopping 42in screen size. Terrific if, like us, you're a committed home cinema buff with a sizeable DVD habit, but not necessarily what you want if all you're after is a replacement for the conventional 28- and 32in tellies that dominate British homes.

Which is why we've got this group test together: four slimline screens, all four of which can be hung on the wall or mounted on plinths as you prefer, and all of 32in size or less. Now don't get us wrong; if you want the best DVD experience with your home cinema system, and if your living room will cope, then by all means go for a larger plasma set. But sets like these are big enough for a lot of households, and their relatively small screen size means that they cost a fair bit less than most larger TVs, too.

You'll notice that we've mixed plasma and LCD TVs together in the same test. Why not? It's no different from many of the advertising campaigns currently doing the rounds. Slimline screens are being sold on their allure, not their respective technologies, and to a degree, the issues over the merits of each type of screen matter not a jot. If you want to buy a 32in or 30in slimline screen tomorrow, you can choose from an LCD or a plasma, and the only real issue of note is this: which one is the best buy for your money? That's what we're here to find out.

Sony KE-32TS2 £3400 ★★★★★

FOR

Style; picture quality; strong specification; plenty of input sockets

AGAINST

Off-air TV broadcast signals don't look quite so good, but that's true of every plasma

VERDICT

Still one of our favourite plasmas, this is a very desirable and effective performer

OUR SOLE PLASMA TV entrant is a peach: Sony's KE-32TS2 is our 2003 Award-winner, and offers a very solid blend of plasma performance for the money. It's a delight to use; every detail, from the remote handset through to the on-screen graphics, is superbly conceived. It's a great looker, too – it'll flatter almost any living room.

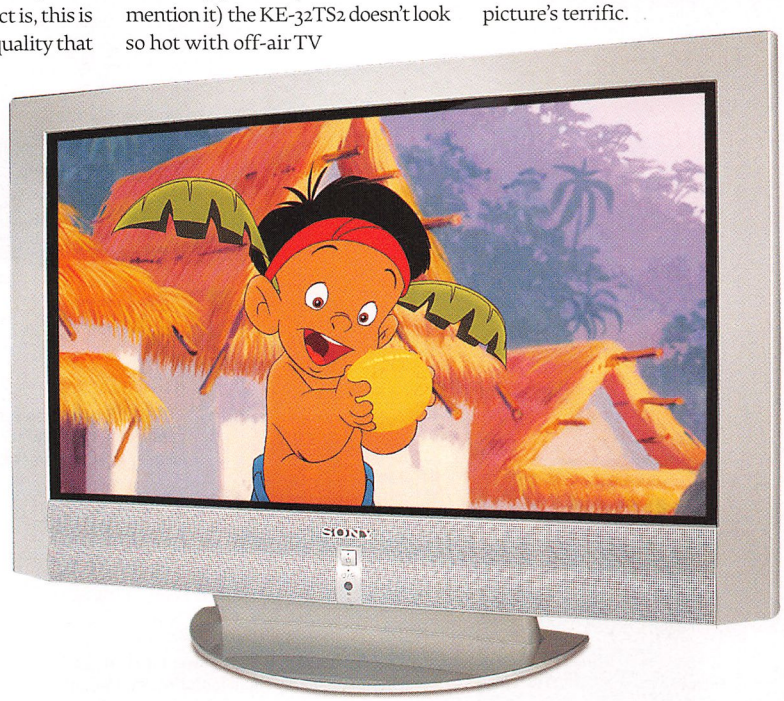
Unlike many rival plasma sets, Sony's smallest is an integrated unit, with the tuner and all the relevant input sockets built into the set's rear. That makes it deeper than some rivals, which means this is a set best suited to mounting on a table-top stand or its (optional) glass equipment rack, rather than being hung from a wall. Having said that, you can find a suitable bracket for the wall-hanging job if that's what you want.

So, let's talk performance. Like we said, we gave this particular plasma a gong in our Awards, so you'd expect it to be pretty good, right? Fact is, this is a terrific set, with picture quality that firmly eclipses most comparable plasmas. Like every TV here, it's at its best when fed with a high-quality DVD signal, preferably from a progressive scan DVD player using component video inputs. Colours are rich and vivid, especially with animation, but even fleshtones on The Lord Of The Rings look natural, not something that can be said for every rival.

Black depth is very impressive, too, though you'll notice some loss of contrast when viewing wide 2.35:1 'Cinemascope' movies, where the black bars that frame the image top and bottom can cause a reduction in picture dynamics. Otherwise, this is a first-rate image for the money.

There has to be a 'but', and it's this; like every plasma (or LCD, come to mention it) the KE-32TS2 doesn't look so hot with off-air TV signals. There's some grain in the picture, but using a digibox helps to reduce this to more reasonable levels.

Overall, this is a gem of a slimline set: it looks great, it's easy to use, it's well-equipped with sockets, and the picture's terrific.



Sony KLV-30MR1 £4000 ★★★★☆

FOR

Truly gorgeous to look at; well specified in terms of inputs; a decent performer, too

AGAINST

Not quite as good as its plasma sibling in image terms – pricier as well

VERDICT

Sony has excelled itself with this set: it's one of the best LCDs on the market

IS LCD GOING to triumph over plasma in the long term? Some pundits seem to think so, although we're reserving judgement for now. Sony seems to feel the same way, because the company has recently launched the KLV-30MR1 LCD TV as a direct competitor to its own, ultra-desirable plasma TV, tested above. Talk about hedging your bets...

It's an intriguing conundrum. There's not a great deal to separate the two products in price terms, and the LCD set's slightly smaller screen (30in, as against 32in) isn't going to cause too many sleepless nights. And as for looks – well, see for yourself. If the KE-32TS2 is a looker, the KLV-30MR1 is a positive stunner, thanks in no small measure to its amazing 'suspended' glass screen.

The real surprise, though, is that the KLV-30MR1 is good enough to stand up to its sibling in performance terms, too. With progressive scan DVD signals, the Sony generates bright colours and boasts excellent detail rendition.

However, it's not quite as good as the KE-32TS2. Movement across the screen can appear less than smooth, and the faster the motion, the more you're aware of some background noise. Contrast is also not quite 'right': it's better than most LCDs, but not quite as rich as you'd like.

Naturally, off-air signals also suffer from more distracting noise on the screen, but as we've said, that's true of most plasma screens, too.

Still, this is a sterling LCD effort from Sony. We'd buy the plasma, but it's good to have the choice...

Sharp LC-30HV4E £3500 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Good detail and brightness; slim design; comprehensive array of inputs

AGAINST

Colours can be artificial; contrast could be better; some picture noise, especially off-air

VERDICT

A sleek and appealing LCD set, but you can get better performance elsewhere

AS YOU'LL HAVE read in our News section (see p26) Sharp is so enamoured of the LCD and plasma display concept that the company has taken the decision to cease conventional TV manufacture altogether. Clearly, the company thinks that this slimline screen game has got a future!

The LC-30HV4E looks relatively plain next to the sleek Sony and radical Toshiba, but it's well finished and thoughtfully equipped, boasting an external tuner box that houses an extensive array of sockets. Set-up is straightforward, and if the remote handset is on the bulky side, at least it's well laid out and clear.

Performance is a blend of strengths and weaknesses. In common with many LCD sets, the Sharp can produce bright, vivid colours, although it's not quite as spectacular as the Sony KLV-30MR1 in this regard. Detail definition is impressive too, the Sharp delivering crisp, accurate lines with animated DVDs.

However, standard DVD imagery can look a little artificial – skin tones can look somewhat unreal, while the overall contrast could be better. This is especially apparent on The Lord Of The Rings, where some dark scenes can be difficult to follow. Fast motion is handled reasonably well, with respectably low levels of picture noise and image 'smearing', but just the same, the image doesn't appear to be as three-dimensional or convincing as you'd find with the very best plasma or LCD alternatives.

Still, we can understand why the Sharp's slimline appeal could win you over. It's not a bad performer by any means: we just feel that there are some superior rivals available.

Toshiba 26WL36 £2500 ★★★★☆

FOR

Good picture in most regards; stylish design; excellent specification in terms of inputs

AGAINST

Contrast could be better; still some smearing to the image on fast motion

VERDICT

A very effective LCD set: looks great, and is largely a success in picture terms

YOU'LL HAVE NOTICED that this is a 26in TV, not a 30in or 32in model. Fair cop: we wanted to get the new 32WL36 Toshiba, but the company wasn't able to get us a suitable review sample in time. Since there's no technical differences between the 26in and 32in models (they have the same resolution and contrast ratio), it's still a reasonably fair comparison; we'll just ignore issues of relative screen size.

Certainly, this new Toshiba is a very commendable LCD effort. It looks the business, that much is obvious, and the dark frame around the screen is more than just a styling point; it serves to intensify the contrast of images on the screen, especially with 1.85:1-ratio DVD transfers.

Technically, Toshiba's paid special attention to the 'response speed' of the LCD panel, with the aim of minimising motion 'smearing', the traditional bugbear of these TVs. It works, too: the 26WL36 is one of the smoothest LCDs we've seen, handling rapid motions across the screen with impressive consistency. It's still not perfect, though – Sony's KE-32TS2 plasma is a more natural performer, especially with football or other fast-moving sports programming.

In most other image regards, the Toshiba is a solid performer. Black levels and contrast are respectable without being remarkable: you get a good sense of depth and detail in the darker scenes of The Lord Of The Rings, but some of the subtle tonal differences between grey and black are less clear than is ideal. Off-air signals suffer from the usual grain and noise that blights many LCD and plasma TVs, but it's no worse than other slimline sets.

Other stuff? This being a Toshiba, it's very well sorted from the home cinema point of view. It's the only set here to give you two component video inputs, for starters, and both forms of progressive scan video are supported. All in all, this is a slimline debut Toshiba can be very proud of.

Performance: get it out of your system.

Winner Sony KE-32TS2 | £3400 | ★★★★★

NOW LET'S GET this part clear once again: we've got no axe to grind about LCD TVs. You shouldn't read anything into the fact that a plasma won this particular test, save for this: if you want a slimline TV in this size class, the KE-32TS2 is the best way to spend your three grand. End of story.

But we will say this: we're sure that LCD sets are getting better. Some of the early examples were – being blunt – awful, but the latest generation of sets deliver images that are vastly superior to their forebears. We could also add that we were in no doubt that this would happen: Panasonic proved last year that it's possible to make a great LCD TV, as our five star review of the TX-15LT2 (soon to be replaced) so ably illustrated.

However, when compared directly to an equivalent plasma, we don't think that even the new, improved LCD sets are quite there yet. Fast motion still seems a problem area, and so does contrast. In the most direct LCD-to-plasma comparison possible, comparing a 30in Sony with a 32in Sony, it's the latter that triumphs, delivering better overall contrast and lower 'noise' than its newer sibling.

One thing is certain: we'll see more slimline sets in the coming months. In fact we've a superb large-screen plasma test lined up next issue...

Double feature

We test space-saving DVD player/video recorder combinations – which is the two-in-one winner?

FOR MANY OF us these days, space is at a premium, so it would seem to make sense to buy appliances that cover more than one function: washer/dryers, for example, or microwaves that double as grills. But it's also a fact of life that so often these combination units are a compromise – they save space, but they don't function as well as two conventional units.

One of the latest trends in mass-market electronics is the combined DVD player and video recorder, designed to save space under your TV, and also answer some connectivity problems. With one of these your DVD and video hardware can share one remote handset and one Scart connection to the TV, with none of the 'daisychaining' needed with two boxes, and you can even run the output from the two into the TV via an aerial connection should your TV be so old that it lacks Scarts.

But can these combination machines really offer value for money? Or would you be better off with a separate DVD player and VCR, now that these two boxes can be bought for the same kind of money as one of these combi units? You're about to find out... ➡

Bush DVHS1 £200 ★☆☆☆☆

FOR

Not exactly pricey; reasonable remote

AGAINST

Not exactly very good; laborious VCR tuning; poor sound and vision

VERDICT

You can find this Bush combo for a sensible price, but we can't imagine why anyone would want to own one

IMAGINE THE SCENE: you buy this Bush unit for the kid's bedroom for Christmas, and little faces light up. Then, bored on Boxing Day, they find this magazine, a bit dog-eared and well-thumbed. With tears welling in their little eyes, they ask you why you didn't buy them a proper DVD player and video recorder, why you don't love them any more, and what time nice Uncle Ray who Mummy likes so much is coming round with his presents. You crack open another can of beer, and ask yourself what kind of a parent you've become...

You see, the simple fact of the matter is that the Bush DVHS1, with which we kick off this Group Test, really isn't very good. For a start it looks and feels rather cheap, with only a clearly labelled and logical remote handset to redeem it, and when you unbox it and hook it up you find that it lacks the automatic set-up and installation found on all the others here. Tuning in the video channels is a matter of searching for them one by one and allocating them to presets, while the clock also has to be set manually. It's a real throwback to the past, as is the lack of Videoplus timer control, found on every other machine in this group, and which we'd really expect in a machine these days.

What's more, the quality from the video section is no great shakes: the Bush looks soft and 'fizzy' when recording off-air or playing back pre-recorded tapes, making it suitable only for time-shifting duties in absolute emergencies – you really wouldn't want to make tapes of shows you need to keep on this machine.

> "The Bush looks soft and 'fizzy' when recording off-air or playing back pre-recorded tapes"

And the DVD playback, while notably better than the VHS quality, isn't up to the standards of the best in this group, and lags well behind that of the best DVD-only machines in the sub-£100 market. Sonically the Bush is soft and compressed via its analogue outputs, and while it's better when hooked up digitally to an AV receiver it's still rather lacklustre.

Factor-in limited connections – the machine only has stereo analogue outputs and an electrical digital feed alongside its twin Scarts and aerial hook-ups – and the Bush is a unit of relatively slight appeal. Even by the low standards we'll see in this group, the DVHS1 is pretty poor.

Hitachi DV-PF3E £200 ★★☆☆☆

FOR

Very compact dimensions; big, clear remote; OK playback and recording

AGAINST

Quality is unremarkable; limited outputs; coffee-grinder tape rewind noise

VERDICT

This Hitachi is a compact, shallow unit that will fit into tight spaces, but it's only average value for money

IT WOULD BE tempting to think that all these machines are created equal, and choosing between them is simply a matter of picking a brand name and styling that you like. But the Hitachi proves this isn't the case, and for reasons likely to limit its appeal to any home cinema buyers still wanting to play their old VHS video cassettes through an AV system. You see, while the DV-PF3E seems at first glance to have a reasonable range of connections – two Scarts, S-video outputs, analogue audio outs and both optical and coaxial digital feeds – this provision is limited by the fact that, apart from the Scarts, these sockets only work with the DVD player section of the machine.

Short of buying a special Scart cable with the audio broken out to a pair of phono leads, there's no way of getting the sound from the video recorder into an AV receiver or processor and thus enabling it to be processed with Dolby Pro-Logic II and fed to a multichannel speaker system. In short, we suspect this machine is basically designed to be hooked up to a TV using RF and/or Scart connections, and the other sockets on the rear are just a bit of window-dressing few buyers of this unit are expected to use.

That impression carries through to the performance of the Hitachi, which really is nothing special, whether from VHS or DVD. On tape, whether playing back its own recordings or shop-bought tapes, it shows all the visual vagueness and sonic shortcomings none of us missed when we moved to DVD, and the automatic rewind at the end of a tape is extremely noisy.

> "There's no way of getting sound from the VCR part into an AV receiver for surround action"

Even with DVDs it looks soft and muted, with a lack of contrast and dull colours doing nothing much to grab the viewer's attention. Yes, it's better than the unit's VHS performance – considerably so, in fact – but that's really not saying too much. Add sound that's compressed and confused from the analogue outputs, and noticeably lacking in punch on the digital connections, factor in a cost that's more than enough to buy a decent DVD player and a VHS recorder – even at the £180 rate you can easily pick it up for – and you have a machine that's really best avoided.

JVC HR XVS20 £240 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Good off-air recording; reasonably clear remote; OK DVD playback

AGAINST

It isn't small; it isn't cheap; no electrical digital output

VERDICT

Not a bad example of its type, but the JVC sets no new standards in any area, and is relatively expensive

THE JVC HAS one advantage and one disadvantage. As you might expect from the inventors of the VHS format, this machine offers good off-air recording, thanks to its use of the Super VHS ET system, which allows a choice of high-quality taping or extended recording times of up to 12 hours, although quality suffers. On the downside, this isn't exactly a small machine, even if it's still smaller than having a separate DVD player and VCR, and should fit on most TV stand shelves.

Otherwise, this is a pretty run-of-the-mill DVD/VCR combination unit, although rear panel connections are kept to the minimum – aerial in/out, twin Scarts and analogue stereo phonos, plus digital out only on an optical connection, in the old Japanese style. Set-up is automatic and logical, even if the JVC needed a little help finding ITV1 in our test location, and the usual DVD set-up menus are similarly easy to navigate. Meanwhile the remote handset is fairly clearly laid-out – at least, it's easy to use after a little experimentation – and we had this one up and running just as fast as we did the others in this test.

However, performance isn't all we'd hoped. Yes, this machine produces some of the best off-air tapes we saw during this test, with only the Panasonic and Toshiba rivalling it, but the limitations of VHS – even here in its Super form – were apparent both with recordings and commercially duplicated tapes. The picture is soft and a little fizzy, and the sound is plagued with all those odd burbles we'd almost forgotten thanks to prolonged exposure to DVD. And the performance with disc is adequate rather than spectacular – comparing our tape of Goldeneye with the DVD copy showed an obvious quality jump, but we've seen sharper, more subtle pictures from budget DVD hardware, and the sound via that optical link lagged behind the best we've encountered from current sub-£100 players.

> "This JVC combo offers good off-air recording, thanks to its use of the Super VHS ET system"

Yes, the JVC offers convenience, and for those wanting to do no more than connect it to a TV set it could well be good enough. But it's big, less than stylish and relatively pricey, meaning it doesn't stack up against the separate DVD and VCR options. If you must have a machine like this, you can do better.

Panasonic NV-VP30EBS £270 ★★☆☆☆

FOR

Styling; nice on-screen graphics; reasonable DVD picture quality

AGAINST

Build quality and VHS playback nothing special, optical digital only, poor remote

VERDICT

Another machine, another disappointment: the Panasonic's OK, but no stunner

UP TO NOW this test has made pretty grim reading, so we approached the Panasonic with some hopes that things would brighten a little. Surely here at last have we'd a machine we could recommend as a space-saving solution without too many performance compromises?

Well, things looked good from the offset, with the Panasonic having that fashionable half-mirror finish display panel and good, large digits on the display itself, making it easy to read from across the room. By keeping some minor function buttons small the company has also given the machine a relatively clean look, but it has more than made up for it with the remote control: we'd love to have been at the product planning meeting where someone decided light blue on grey was a really neat colour for some of the button markings.

The build quality here is acceptable, in that we accept – or at least have come to expect – a nice metallic 'clang' from the lid of products at this level, but less acceptable is the 'old school Japanese' provision of digital output on an optical connection alone, and the need to slide a switch to change from DVD to VCR operation. Others here do it more elegantly. Maybe this is another one really only meant to be used straight into a TV, using Scart or RF hook-ups, and is therefore of fairly limited interest to anyone looking to build a system.

And that's a bit of a shame, since the picture quality from DVD is none too shabby, with subtle colours, decent contrast and better sharpness than most here can manage, while even VHS recordings are good enough for timeshifting duties. Playing back pre-recorded tapes, the Panasonic delivers pretty good sharpness and snap, but spoils things with a continuous and very distracting fizz to the picture. That said, the sound from VHS isn't at all bad, although DVD sound is poor through the analogue outputs, and unremarkable via the digital, perhaps due to that optical connection.

> "It delivers decent sharpness and snap, but spoils things with a continuous fizz"

So that's the Panasonic: while it's one of the better machines here it didn't rock our world. Maybe we were expecting too much, but this proved to be another major disappointment, especially given the machine's price – which effectively takes it down from three stars to two.

Breathtaking sound and vision. A world of emotion.

DENON

Sanyo HV-DX2E £260 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Reasonable set-up and operation; compact but clear remote handset

AGAINST

Looks cheap and bulky; DVD and VHS playback nothing special

VERDICT

Shop around and you can buy this for £200. But a budget DVD player plus a VCR would be a better bet

THE SANYO MAY not share the style of the Toshiba SD-33, but there's certainly some commonality under the skin, Fire it up and select the set-up menu, and you're greeted with the same two lines of little icons, and the same auto-tuning screen.

However, there are differences, and not just in the fascia styling, which looks a lot more basic and bulky than the Toshiba's, even if it's actually only about a centimetre taller. Maybe it's something to do with the layout and the finish of the plastics...

To the rear, the Sanyo's layout is extremely simple, with two sets of analogue outputs – one from DVD alone, the other from DVD and VCR – along with an electrical digital out, two Scarts and of course the usual aerial in and out sockets for the VCR. But where this machine scores is in the design of its remote control, which manages to be the smallest we have in this group while at the same time having a layout of exemplary clarity. After only a few hours' use it's entirely intuitive, allowing you to go straight to the function you want, be it on DVD or VCR almost without thinking.

However, the Sanyo can't match the best in this group when it comes to sound and picture quality. Even with DVD it looks a bit rough and ready, with a soft picture, muted colours and an overall sense of flatness. The sound from the analogue outputs is similarly ho-hum, and while things get better when the digital feed is used, others here still manage better impact and power when connected through a good receiver or processor.

> "The Sanyo can't match the best in this group when it comes to sound and picture quality"

VHS performance is even worse, with soft and noisy pictures when recording off-air, and similarly unimpressive results from pre-recorded tapes. You really wouldn't want to use this machine for much more than grabbing an episode of EastEnders while you were otherwise occupied, and even then there are machines better able to capture Dirty Den's latest appearance in a manner closer to your off-air signal, rather than looking like the oldest rental tape in the shop.

Yes, everything here works fine, and we really like the remote control layout, but this is hardly the best advert for the benefits of these DVD/VHS combination units.

Toshiba SD-33VB £250 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Good DVD performance; component video output from DVD

AGAINST

Only reasonable with VHS; counter-intuitive remote handset

VERDICT

The Toshiba is so nearly very good, with good performance from DVD, but that remote control really sucks

WE EXPECTED GREAT things of the Toshiba, not least because the company's budget DVD players are so good, and when it came to performance with the little silver discs we weren't disappointed. The SD-33 delivers pictures of good clarity and impact, with colours rendered subtly and good contrast control, giving an impression of depth that's admittedly not a patch on what you can get from top-notch DVD hardware, but pretty respectable at the budget end of the market.

And the Toshiba sounds good, too, on DVD: using its stereo analogue outputs it's no stunner, but with an electrical digital connection into an AV receiver things get a lot better, yet again demonstrating the huge gains DVD offers over VHS. What's more, the Toshiba is equipped to make the most of the DVD format, with component video output alongside the usual Scarts, optical and electrical digital outputs, and even dedicated line outputs for the DVD section as well as a combined DVD/VHS stereo pair.

Like the other machines in this test, this one is a breeze to tune in and set-up, but unfortunately things go pretty pear-shaped from there onwards, as the remote is one of the worst laid out and most obstructive we've come across in a good while. Even after an extended period of use we never found it intuitive, and selecting facilities always required a hunt around the button labelling to find the right one to push. Agreed, the complexity of all of these units makes for crowded handsets, but we got the hang of others much more quickly.

> "It delivers pictures of good clarity and impact. Colours are rendered subtly and contrast's good"

On VHS this machine was good with off-air recordings – well, as good as standard VHS gets, which means noticeable fizzing and other picture noise, and pretty ropy sound, but less than stunning with prerecorded tapes, with a number of titles looking rough around the edges. Maybe it's best to stick with using the VCR section for time-shifting, or for the kids' collection of Disney videos, and use the DVD player for all the 'quality' viewing.

Another plus point for this Tosh is that you can pick it up for around £200. Even so, you'd do better with a Toshiba SD-330 DVD player and the kind of VHS machine you can now pick up for £70 or less.

Winner Toshiba SD-33VB | £250 | ★★★☆☆

WEWERETEMPTED to leave a large blank space on this page: frankly, anyone wanting to take home cinema even vaguely seriously really shouldn't consider one of these units. Our advice, as you may have gathered by now, would be to buy one of the bargain DVD players in this month's Supertest, and complement it with a budget VCR if you don't already have one. We spotted a very nice Philips for around £70 in a local supermarket during the writing of this test.

No, these machines may have digital outputs – and, in one case, a component video feed – but they're best considered as units to be connected to a TV with a Scart cable for simple playback through the telly's own speakers, where the sonic shortcomings of most of them will be masked. These machines are bought to feed a kitchen or bedroom TV or as the kind of thing you might put in the kids' bedroom to allow them to play their own movies.

On those grounds the Toshiba just about squeezes the victory here, as the only machine with the kind of picture and sound quality we look for in entry-level DVD players and video recorders these days. It looks reasonable and is well put together, so should withstand some abuse. Small fingers used to games consoles and high-speed text messaging may even find their way around the remote control, which to our eyes was pretty confusing – although the Panasonic's handset had it comprehensively beaten when it comes to pure bloody-minded obstructiveness.

> "These machines are bought to feed a kitchen or bedroom TV"

It's been a long while since we ended up with a test winner with only three stars, and so the Toshiba's victory in this 'least worst among equals' exercise is a somewhat hollow one.

We were pretty disappointed with the general standards throughout, and while the SD-33VB is far from perfect – we really don't like that remote! – it just squeezes in as the best of the bunch.

DVD Player Best Buy Awards 2003

Your best bet is to spend the money on a separate DVD player and a VCR. The latter is pretty simple, given that it's relatively easy to pick up a good recorder for well under £100. This has become a market where you can buy on the facilities a machine offers, and even its style, rather than worrying too much about performance. That would leave you with about £100 or so to spend on a DVD player, and as you can read in our Supertest this month the Toshiba is a cracker, with excellent picture quality and very convincing sound.

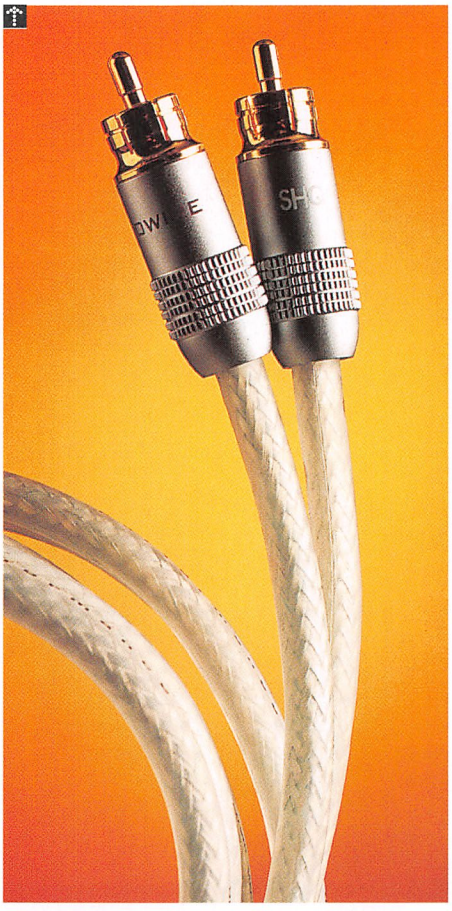
Vivanco Prowire SHQ

£29.95/1.2m pair ★★★☆☆

Using silver-plated oxygen-free copper conductors and shielding braid, this is a good-quality interconnect, although its sound is lacklustre when compared to similarly priced competitors. It's a little soft, making the bass shut-in and bloomy, and failing to convey the treble sparkle apparent when using the Ecosse rival. It's better than 'freebie' interconnects – anything is – but SHQ is only average value for money.

VERDICT

Nicely put together, but it sounds a bit soft and woolly even by budget interconnect standards



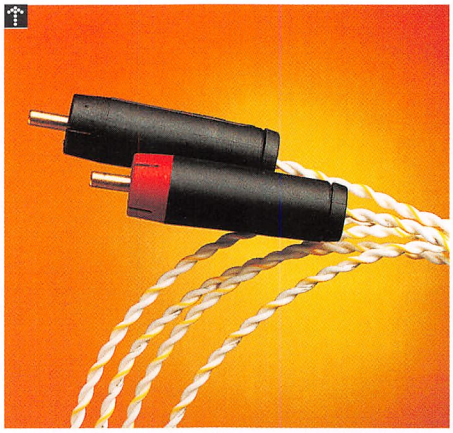
Black Rhodium Illusion

£77/1m pair ★★★★★

Illusion uses the fashionable Eichmann Bullet Plugs, thin silver-plated copper conductors giving the best possible contact with the plugs and the tight twist and PTFE insulation aiding interference rejection. And the sound is also simple and direct: it's fresh, wide open and exciting, with a powerful bass and clarity in the midband, making vocals impressive, with a breezy and involving top end.

VERDICT

Intriguing – this skinny yellow/white cable looks thin and weedy, but sounds rich, powerful and direct



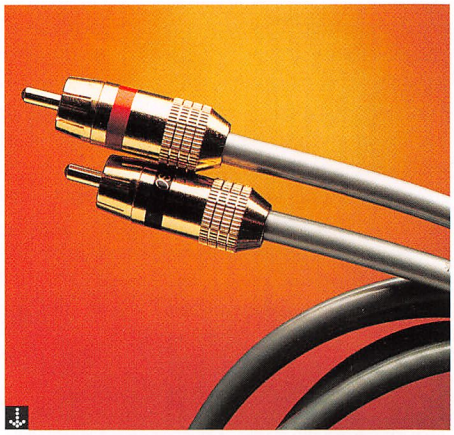
True Colours Cobra

£150 ★★★★★

This is TCI's range-topper, and using it in a budget system would be a waste of money. However, with a high-quality source and amplification, Cobra is money well spent, having a wide-open sound with a big powerful low end, an explicit midband and plenty of air in the treble. Cobra looks purposeful in its plain black sheathing, but it uses silver-plated conductors, a double-braided screen for interference-rejection, and gold-plated locking plugs from WBT.

VERDICT

Probably wasted in budget systems, but in upmarket set-ups this is an interconnect that will really shine



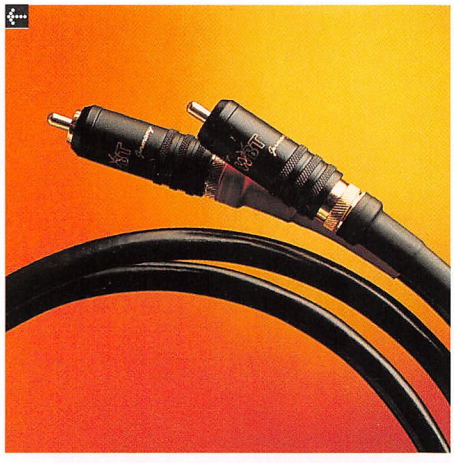
Ecosse Best Boy

£24.95/1m pair ★★★★★

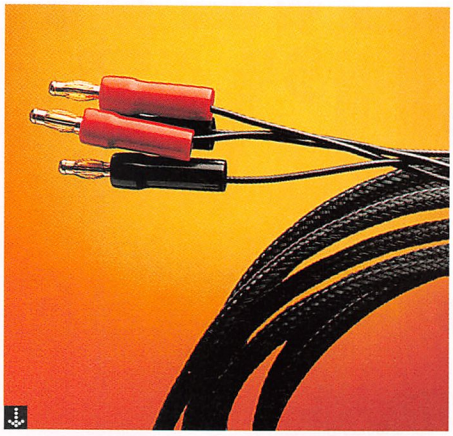
Ecosse's 'first upgrade' cable is relatively thin and grey, with oxygen-free copper, a foam insulator, an aluminium/mylar sheet and copper braid. While Best Boy will be bettered by much more expensive cables, it delivers a good powerful bass – provided your source can provide it. It also has an attractively open and sparkling treble, by the standards of entry-level cables, with good clarity and character.

VERDICT

No looker, agreed, but this is an honest and affordable cable giving fine performance for the money



Speaker cables



Precious Metals Silvertech Loudspeaker 4

£25/m biwire pair ★★★☆☆

This one is thin and easily hidden, and within the fabric sheath are four silver alloy conductors, said to give openness without excessive brightness. We weren't so sure: it grabs the attention, but over time it's hard not to ignore some glare in the treble, making strings steely and brass over-strident. But it does deliver powerful bass and plenty of atmosphere.

VERDICT

Dull it isn't, but the forthright treble balance may be too much for some. One to audition with some caution.

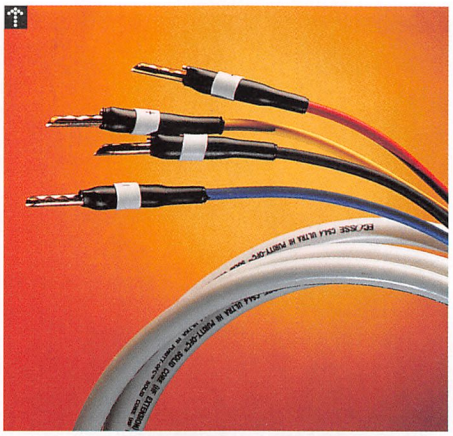
Ecosse CS4.4 Biwire

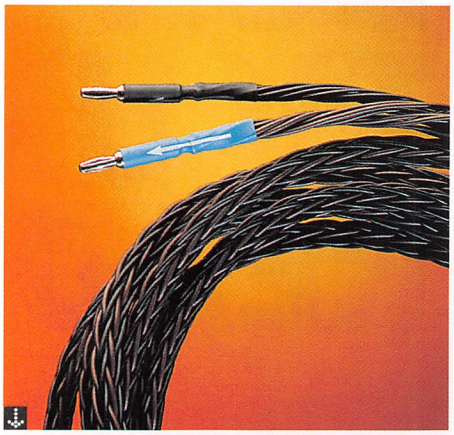
£88/3m biwire pair or £9/m cable only ★★★☆☆

This cable uses a multistrand rope-lay copper weave with a braid screen attached to a drain wire, and is available off the reel, as two-to-four biwire runs as here, or in a four-to-four configuration for £16 extra. It lacks a little openness and detail, and loses some punch in the bass, making dance and rock tracks a little leaden. What's more, we didn't notice any gains when using the earth connection.

VERDICT

A reasonable choice, and sensibly priced, but a long way from being outstanding for the money.





Kimber Kable 8PR

£153/4.5m pair ★★★★★

Based on the entry-level 4PR, with four conductors in an open weave, 8PR has – guess what? – eight conductors, for better bass and resolution, and is only sold pre-terminated. It's a fast, involving cable, coming into its own when used with gutsy amplification driving speakers that revel in a good dollop of power. Bass lines thunder, and there's a wide-open view of the recorded acoustic. This is a great buy.

VERDICT

Slightly oddball 'bundle of wire' looks, but the sound is direct and impressive, especially with powerful amps

Atlas 2+1.1

£5.49/m; £50 for termination ★★★★☆

This cable uses different-sized conductors for high and low frequencies and has a braided shield with a wire to connect to a suitable earth point on your amplifier, such as a case screw or a turntable grounding post. And it offers fine value, sounding fast and open. There's speed and power in the bass, while the treble conveys reasonable detail without ever sounding thin or overbright. As a step-up from basic single-wire runs, this one makes a lot of sense.

VERDICT

Not the most exciting-sounding cable in the world, perhaps, but Atlas 2+1.1 is sensible value for money

Grand amps

Pay more than £1000 for an amplifier and what should you expect? We test four leading examples

WHAT'S THE POINT of buying a £1500 two-channel amplifier when similarly priced AV alternatives pack in a truckful of extra features and offer the carrot of surround sound? If your main priority is music, particularly CD, the answer is simple: dedicated stereo amplifiers sound better. No, make that so much better that you'll need to spend around five times as much money on a multichannel monster to get a similar sonic performance.

Sure, there are no surround channels on these two-channel amplifiers but the compensations are more detail, subtlety and dynamics. By dynamics we don't just mean high-level transients such as bass thumps or drum rim shots, but the subtleties that communicate emotion in a voice or make the replay of an instrument convincing. Timing is usually better, too, so rhythms make more sense and consequently the music becomes more involving. Remember, all these qualities are as important for DVD-Audio and SACD as they are for CD.

Provided the restriction of two-channel replay is fine for you, things have never been this good at this price point. In the past spending between £1000 and £1500 on an amplifier meant a pre/power combination, and even now there are numerous alternatives from big-name companies such as Naim, Linn and Cyrus. However, these aren't the only way to get top-class performance, as Primare's Award-winning A30.1 has proved. This integrated has been our amplifier of choice at this price point for around five years now and remains a superb contender. The one-box configuration means cost savings over pre/power alternatives, and signal paths are shortened due to the lack of interconnect between the two amplifier sections. Sure, the power supply is usually shared, which introduces some compromise, though judging by the sound of the four products under test this is something that can be beaten. Want to know the best amplifier a grand and a half can buy? Read on as the Primare takes on high-quality rivals from AVI, Moon and Orelle.

IMAGINATIVE SIGHT & SOUND

AVI Laboratory Series | £1399 | ★★★★★

FOR
Excellent detail resolution; impressive power and dynamics; solid build

AGAINST
Control buttons could be more precise

VERDICT
This is a fabulous amplifier that doesn't put a foot wrong. It combines muscle with subtlety beautifully

THIS IS THE one to beat. AVI's Laboratory Series Integrated is the present holder of our Best Buy Award at this price point and, aside from the cumbersome name, leaves little room for criticism. This is a surprising product in many ways. It's compact, yet delivers the mightiest output in this group with a rating of 175 watts per channel. These aren't paper watts either, as this integrated really does sound more powerful than its rivals and has no trouble taking charge of any speaker connected to its terminals.

What does this mean to you? It means the AVI keeps its composure longer than most rivals as volume rises. It doesn't harden up when pushed, and delivers the stirring crescendos of The Two Towers soundtrack with the kind of conviction most rivals can't match.

These talents earn the Laboratory Series Integrated plenty of respect, but they're not the reason we like it so much. The AVI is special because it doesn't sacrifice finesse for muscle. Detail resolution is excellent, as shown by the way this amp picks out low-level subtleties. The emotion in Jeff Buckley's voice on the live version of Hallelujah is undiluted, as is the sense of space on the recording. The compelling thing about this AVI is that it balances these strengths in a way that puts music first. It has no strong character of its own, so the result is a faithful reproduction of the input signal. If that's flawed in some way that's exactly the way this amp will sound. But take care, and use a good enough source – consider Cyrus CD8 or Meridian 507 level a minimum – and this electronic brick won't disappoint.

The Laboratory Series impresses in other areas, too. Build is rock solid – this amp feels as though it'll last decades of use – with a good finish and a high-enough feature count to cater for most two-channel set-ups.

The conclusion is simple: the AVI is a great-sounding amp that will work well in a wide range of systems. It'll take something extra special to beat this.

Moon I-3 | £1550 | ★★★★☆

FOR
Refinement, timing and dynamics; fluid presentation; lovely remote handset

AGAINST
Lacks the insight of the very best

VERDICT
The I-3 remains a strong contender despite the tough competition in this price sector

WE WISH MORE manufacturers would follow Moon's example. No rival in this test can match the class and feel of the I-3's metal remote handset. It's solid, beautifully shaped and easy to use. The rest of the amplifier ain't half bad either.

This price point demands top-class build and the I-3 doesn't disappoint. Finish is spot-on, and the clean control layout reinforces the air of class the amplifier exudes. Inside, a symmetrical circuit layout aims to help stereo imaging and there's a decent-sized transformer to deliver the claimed 100 watt per channel output.

Moon believes high-feedback electronic designs reduce dynamics and transparency, so the I-3 uses no overall feedback. Another Moon priority is minimising signal paths to maximise signal purity.

The result of these philosophies is a lively, refined amp with the knack of focusing the listener's attention firmly on the music. For this to happen dynamics and timing have to be first-class, and they are. The I-3 is an expressive amp able to deliver the full dose of emotion from Jeff Buckley's live set. The creamy mid-band presentation gives Buckley's vocals plenty of presence and body, while its sweet high-end minimises any undue harshness in the recording.

Move on to something harder hitting such as Massive Attack's 100th Window and it's the Moon's fluid handling of rhythms that impresses: few rivals at this price point can latch onto a beat as effectively. Low frequencies are taut and tuneful, too.

Overall detail levels are good, but this is where rivals such as the AVI Laboratory Series and Orelle SA100evo pull ahead. Judged against these standards the I-3 lacks a little definition and doesn't position instruments with the same focus as the class leaders.

Don't get us wrong. We still like this amplifier a lot and think that its blend of refinement, timing and dynamics is highly appealing. The Moon may have lost a star but in most ways it still shines brightly.

Orelle SA100evo £1200 ★★★★½

FOR
Open, detailed and dynamic presentation; classy appearance

AGAINST
Finish a little rough edged

VERDICT
The SA100evo is an immensely talented product that's good enough to worry the class leaders

MANY OF YOU may not have heard of Orelle. We're not surprised – the company has been quiet of late, but it's back with a new range and determined to recapture past glories.

Its build quality is decent enough, though finish is just a little less polished than we'd expect at this price. Just check out the untidy machining on the remote sensor hole or the unfinished feel where the curve meets the top edge on the front panel.

Once warmed, any doubts about the Orelle's ability to compete disappear. This is an open, detailed amp of considerable ability: it challenges the likes of the AVI when it comes to outright detail resolution, and manages to present it in an enticingly cohesive and informative manner. Initial impressions are that this amplifier lacks bass, and is consequently a little lightweight in presentation. But take a longer listen and you'll find the low frequencies are unusually agile and well defined. Their crisp nature and the lack of overhang is what suggests the lack of authority. Low-frequency precision is spellbinding and makes following complex basslines from, say, Massive Attack's Future Proof a breeze.

This is an amplifier that excels at subtleties; low-level nuances that convey emotion in a voice are easy to hear, as are background instruments in a busy mix. The result is that a whole range of music, from Jeff Buckley's Grace Live EP to The Two Towers, enchants the listener with the wealth of insight on offer.

There's also enough punch to keep hip-hop and rock fans happy. Timing is crisp, so rhythms are delivered in a taut, exciting manner. This amp outputs 80 watts per channel – less than most rivals – but it'll work well with most price-compatible speakers.

If Orelle continues to make products of this ability it won't be long before it becomes a major force. The SA100evo could do with a cosmetic tidy up but sonically it can hold its own here. If you want a fast, detailed-sounding amp with bags of refinement, give this a serious listen.

Primare A30.1 £1500 ★★★★½

FOR
Top-class build/finish; clean, crisp delivery

AGAINST
Newer rivals have highlighted a couple of minor sonic shortcomings

VERDICT
Primare's A30.1 remains one of our favourites at this price level despite the arrival of tough new competition

WHEN IT COMES to shop-floor appeal, the Primare has this test sewn up. No other amp here can match its build, finish and feel – and then there are controls that work with rare precision and a low-key digital display.

In recent years this amp's been a regular fixture in our reference set-ups, and it's never let us down when it comes to system matching. There are two reasons for this: first, this amplifier is a lot more muscular than its 100 watt per channel specification would suggest, and so has no trouble driving difficult speaker loads to high volume levels. Second, the A30.1 has an even-handed presentation that highlights the quality of the partnering kit rather than the amp itself.

It helps that the A30.1 doesn't do anything badly either. It digs up plenty of detail, so delivers commendable insight into heavily layered music like The Two Towers or the Massive Attack CD. Low frequencies go deep with authority and have an impressive turn of speed when the music demands. Move up and the midrange continues the good work with its control, composure and subtlety. Vocals are articulate and harmonically rich instruments have plenty of bite.

The arrival of newer competition – particularly the AVI and Moon amps here – highlight the Primare's slightly mechanical manner of conveying rhythms. They have plenty of snap but don't flow as convincingly as these rivals. The A30.1's top-end is informative but lacks the refinement and richness of the class leaders, too.

However, the A30.1's broad spread of talents and superb build mean it remains an excellent proposition.

Winner AVI Laboratory Series | £1399 | ★★★★★

THERE ARE NO losers here. All four amplifiers deliver more detail and greater dynamics than the class leaders in the next price category down, and build is typically more solid, too.

However, there is a clear pecking order. Both the Primare A30.1 and Moon I-3 drop a star. They haven't suddenly become flawed products, but newer rivals offer just that bit more for the money. The Primare is an old favourite of ours and continues to deliver a formidable blend of top-class build, stylish aesthetics and powerful sound. It's still a great amp, but its presentation doesn't quite match the fluidity and insight of the class leaders.

The story is much the same for Moon's I-3. This is still an appealing product with a rich, liquid midrange and enviable refinement. It also has a lovely sense of timing, so rhythms bounce along with enthusiasm. Add neat cosmetics and an excellent remote handset into the equation and the I-3 remains a tempting product. However, you can buy better.

Though it's the cheapest here, the Orelle has little to fear. Aside from some gripes about finish, which we hope the company will sort quickly, it can stand toe to toe with any competitor in this test without embarrassment. The SA100evo is a precise, fast and tuneful electronic box that delivers the most detail here. All it lacks is a touch of thunder– a quality that the AVI Laboratory Series integrated has in spades.

> "A brick of an amp that will drive just about any speaker properly, and with the kind of finesse few amps possess"

The AVI is a brick of an amplifier that gets close to the Orelle in outright detail but adds extra muscle and control to the mix. The result is an amplifier that will drive just about any speaker properly and has the kind of finesse very few amps anywhere near this price possess. That's why it wins.

The latest discs that'll let your home cinema system shine

The Fifth Element Special Edition

Pathé | Cert PG

LUC BESSON'S IMAGINATIVE sci-fi masterpiece has been polished for this double-disc set that boasts a DTS soundtrack and more extras than you can shake a stick at.

Bruce Willis dons his action vest – this time a Jean-Paul Gaultier rubber one – in another bid to save the universe. Survival depends on the safety of the sometime gaffer-taped, always alluring Milla Jovovich, with Gary Oldman in bonkers baddie mode and comic relief from Chris Tucker.

The Fifth Element is an aesthetic eye opener that'll test the colour abilities of any home cinema system – in particular the vibrant aerial chase through a futuristic New York: sort of a psychedelic Bladerunner.

And as well as sumptuous visuals, that remastered DTS soundtrack is full of spectacular explosions and an awesome opera scene that's one of our top testers. Tres bien all round.

BULLETPROOF MONK TELLS of the unlikely association between martial artist Chow Yun-Fat and American Pie's Seann William "Stifler" Scott in this no-brain, kung-fu flick based on a little-known comic book.

There's plenty of fist-flying action – with every movement accompanied by the usual over-exaggerated swishing effects – to test your system, but unless you're a hormonally charged adolescent the story just doesn't, er, kick it. Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon it certainly ain't...

THE HOUSE OF Mouse must be short of ideas with Disney releasing another animated sequel that falls short of the first. Man-cub Mowgli is reunited with his feral foster family – cue more monkey musical extravaganzas and moral messages.

Enhanced animation techniques gift the sequel with an even richer palette of colours than the original and the sound is THX-mastered, too, although jungle music has taken a different direction since the original... So, a decent tester, but not a bare necessity.

Drooling over a tasty Italian

Gorgeous looks and a magical sound make this amp one of the best we've heard – we think we've found a £2495 bargain

Pathos Logos

★★★★★ £2495

FOR

Stunning appearance and build; gorgeous midrange performance; refinement with plenty of punch

AGAINST

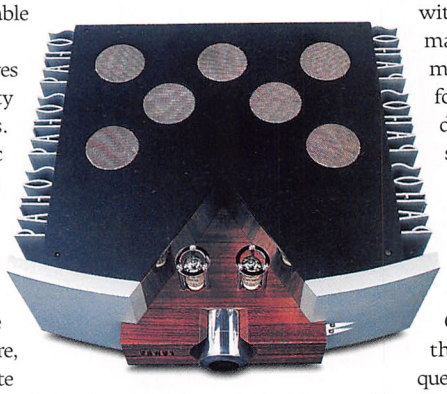
Low bass is slightly rich, but that's our only gripe

VERDICT

The Logos looks magnificent and sounds even better. Build quality is superb, too. A brilliant piece of engineering

ACCORDING TO THE Collins English dictionary, the word 'logos' has two meanings: 'the divine Word' (its Christian meaning) or 'the source of order in the universe'. Either way it's a lofty name for an amp, even if it does have an enviable spread of ability.

One look at the Logos proves that aesthetics are a priority for Italian company Pathos. This amp is as much a sonic sculpture as it is a listening tool, but thankfully the quest for style hasn't spoilt usability. The digital volume display is easy to see from a distance and the control layout is intuitive. Sure, the attractive wooden remote handset would benefit from some labelling, but it doesn't take long to remember what the four buttons do.



Pathos has created a special-looking amplifier

And the finish is simply beautiful: Pathos clearly takes a lot of pride in its products. Take a close look at the casework, central wooden insert on the front panel or the remote and even the most critical would have little to complain about. This kind of quality compares well with components that sell at two or even three times the price.

Don't let the minimalist controls fool you. The Logos isn't the stripped-down device it appears. A remote control, six line-level inputs, including two balanced and a tape loop won't have the typical AV amp quaking in its case, but these features should be enough to cater for most high-end hi-fi set-ups.

System matching shouldn't be a problem, either. The Logos outputs a healthy 110 watts per channel into 8 ohms, which doubles as impedance halves. The result is an amp that works well with a wide range of speakers, including our reference trio of ATC SCM 12s, PMC's IB2s and Wilson Benesch's Discoverys. In each case the character of the speakers takes centre stage, suggesting the Logos doesn't stamp its own personality on the signal: this is only possible if an amplifier has an even tonal balance.

This quality shines through with the soundtrack of The General's Daughter, where the Pathos delivers the scale and authority of the main theme with ease. Nothing in the presentation jars: it combines excitement and refinement, resolution and punch. The result is a musical chameleon that works well across the board. Want bone-crunching dynamics? Play a suitable recording and that's exactly what you'll get, without the edgy quality that many rivals produce. The midrange verges on magical for the price, while low-level dynamics are also impressive: Nina Simone has seldom sounded so sultry.

But the good news doesn't stop there – this cultured Italian has a tough side, too. Give 50 Cent's In Da Club a spin and there's plenty of low-frequency punch on offer, and the kind of timing that only a few rivals, notably from Cyrus and Naim, can match. Our only complaint is minor: very low bass is a touch too rich to offer the class-leading articulation so apparent in the rest of the frequency range. But with most speakers this merely adds weight; you'll need boxes that dig as deep as PMC's IB2s or ATC's SCM 50s to show up this minute flaw.

Even then the Pathos's broad spread of talents makes it a front runner at this price. It's not hard to find glamorous-looking hi-fi, but this amp proves that great sound and stunning looks are possible. The Logos is a high-end bargain.★

HI-FI SYSTEMS

CAN AN ALL-IN-ONE SET-UP BEAT MY HI-FI SEPARATES?

SYSTEM···› Technics SL-PG200a CD player, Toshiba SA-300 tuner amp, Akai SW-42 speakers

PROBLEM···› I was considering buying a new amp and speakers, but I was attracted to the all-in-one Denon D-M31 hi-fi system.

Do you reckon it would satisfy my requirements and perhaps even outperform my present set- up, bearing in mind that separates are the way to go for better quality?

I'm a musician, so I'm after a fairly good sound, but I'd be using the system in the kitchen where the positioning of speakers is limited.

Stewart Bradley
Galway, Ireland

IS THE TEAC A BETTER DEAL THAN THE DENON D-M31?

SYSTEM···› Panasonic SA-AK20 hi-fi system

PROBLEM···› I'm in the market for a CD/radio micro system for a small bedroom currently being used as our office, so I read your group test on micro systems (October issue) with interest. However, I was disappointed that you didn't include the latest Denon – the D-M31.

My local hi-fi store doesn't have the D-M31 in stock, but says the TEAC Legacy 600 is better and a bargain at £200. Is this true?

Christopher Casey
Plymouth, Devon

WE SAY···› Two questions, one answer, and in both cases, the Denon D-M31 is the way to go, having both style and the performance to embarrass many a separates-based hi-fi systems in the sub-£500 arena. There's no way you're going to buy a separates system for the price of the Denon, or be able to match it on sound quality and convenience. While the TEAC Legacy 600 is tempting at £200, we'd still go for the Denon.

The D-M31 is available as a CD-receiver alone (£230), or as a package with matching Mission-made SC-M51 speakers for £300. We've tried the system with both the SC-M51s and with some other combinations – including some very large and upmarket speakers with which it just shouldn't work – and every time it amazed us.

The Denon was one of the most obvious Product of the Year choices in this year's Awards, and we stick by our decision. Buy it and you won't be disappointed.

Denon's D-M31: the answer to everyone's prayers, or two at least!

HI-FI TUNERS

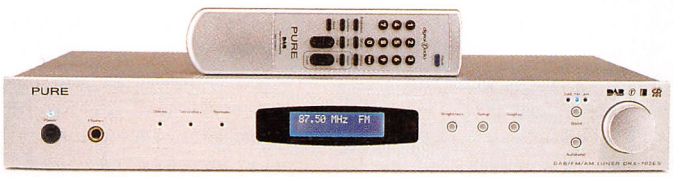
DO I NEED BOTH DIGITAL AND ANALOGUE TUNERS?

PROBLEM ···› I'm trying to build a good hi-fi separates system and need to add a tuner. Is it worth getting the Denon TU-260L MkII analogue tuner and Cambridge Audio DAB500 digital tuner for £280 or the Pure Digital DRX-702es for £330 which will give both analogue and digital reception?

Also, you don't do very many articles on MiniDisc separates and I was wondering about your view on the Sony MDS-JE980 recorder.
Nick Barrett
Tonbridge, Kent

WE SAY ···› We'd consider the Denon and Cambridge as an either/or unless there really are analogue- or digital-only stations you can't live without. After all, whether you buy the Denon/Cambridge combo or the Pure you're going to need to invest in two aerials to get the most from them, which could easily add another £150-200 to the budget. If you can afford that, and want the greatest convenience, we'd go for the Pure Digital tuner, which is an excellent analogue tuner as well as being one of the best digital radios around. We think the extra £50 over the price of the two boxes is money well spent on quality terms, as well as keeping the clutter down.

We haven't reviewed many MiniDisc components for a while as we feel the latest-generation CD-R/RW machines offer better sound for the money, but of its kind the MDS-JE980 is rather good, based on our limited auditioning of it, and MD has come a long way since its early iterations. If you want the editing facilities and the portability of the completed discs, it's a good buy.



Pure's excellent hybrid tuner should suit Nick's needs

HI-FI AMPLIFIERS

WILL BIWIRING OR BIAMPING BE BEST?

PROBLEM ···› I'm about to upgrade my system and am considering Cyrus' integrated and pre/power amps. Is it better to use a pre/power combo and biwire; or an integrated unit biamped with an extra power amp?
Mike Tadman
Chelmsford, Essex

WE SAY ···› Well Mike, if you're buying speakers that don't support biwiring, the preamp/power amp route is the one to go for, as this offers the purest signal path.

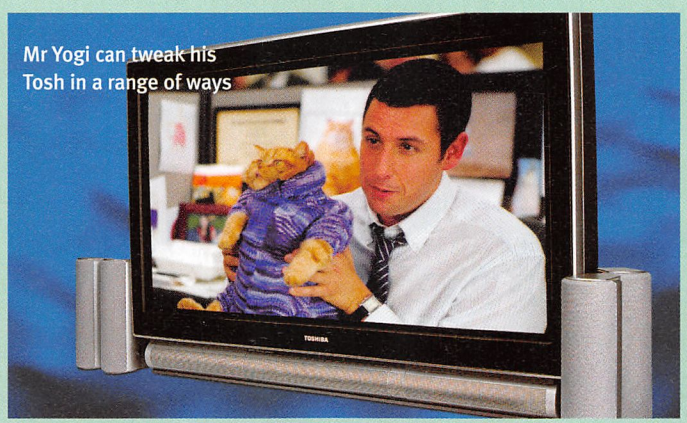
But if you're buying biwirable speakers, then in general terms such boxes sound better when biwired – and even better biamped, where you should expect gains in clarity, focus and punch.

We suggest opting for one of the new Cyrus integrated amps (the 6 or 8) plus the firm's SmartPower power amp to biamp the speakers. We'd use the SmartPower to drive the treble and the integrated to drive the bass, but experiment with doing things the other way round, as you may prefer the sound.

Seek out a helpful Cyrus stockist and try both the biamp and pre/power options, but bear in mind that you could always go for the former option and then upgrade to a pre and two powers later, using the integrated amp as a preamp.

Will a change of settings make more of my TV?

SYSTEM ···› Toshiba 36ZP18P TV
PROBLEM ···› I'm happy with my TV, but I want to know if there's a way I can squeeze more from it? Is there an order in which one should change these settings? Is there a recognised method to colour calibration, and is there a DVD to help?
Mr Yogi
via the website



Mr Yogi can tweak his Tosh in a range of ways

WE SAY ···› There are several useful resources out there. Best is the Digital Video Essentials set-up and calibration DVD, recently released in a Region Two version for the UK's PAL colour system. You can use the disc to configure other displays too, including plasmas and projectors, and there's a great 'talk-through' narrative to help you through each step. In our view, £15 well spent (check out sites like Play.com and Amazon if you can't find it on the shelves).

Alternatively, most THX-certified discs include a video (and audio) calibration section called the Optimode, and while not as comprehensive as DVE, it includes some effective video adjustment guidelines, all supported by useful instructions on how to do the job. Discs with Optimode include Treasure Planet, Star Wars I and II and Terminator II.

No luck? Then it's down to eyes and 'rules of thumb'. Virtually every TV is factory preset to perform in a brightly lit shop-floor environment, so the brightness, contrast and colour controls are normally boosted too high. Using the rule that the maximum figure for each of the three key elements of a picture is 100 percent, set the brightness to about 35-40 percent, contrast between 60-65 percent, and colour around 40-45 percent.

Work on that as a starting point; as a broad rule of thumb, it usually works. Try to play anything that juxtaposes bright red with skin tones – The Mummy Returns is a good disc to try. You need to tweak the colour so the reds look red, but the skin tones remain natural, rather than overly pink.

HI-FI STEREO AMPLIFIERS

WHAT'S THE BEST WAY TO UPGRADE MY AMPLIFIER?

PROBLEM ···› I've been wondering about stereo amplifier upgrade paths. I currently have an Arcam A65+ with which I'm very happy, but when I can afford it I'll probably look at upgrading the amp – what's the wisest way to spend my money?

Assuming I have £500 to spend, should I add a £500 power amplifier to the Arcam, or instead retire it and buy a new £500 amp (or maybe even a £600+ one if I can trade the A65+ in)?

Mark Stradling
London

WE SAY ···› Well Mark, the obvious question is why you'd want to upgrade your kit when you're very happy with the amplifier you've got – in the absence of information about the rest of your hi-fi system it's a bit tricky to advise on whether such an upgrade would be the best way to spend your £500.

Marantz's Award-winning integrated amplifier could suit Mark's system

The A65+ isn't one of the stars of the Arcam range, and while one route would be to find a P75 power amplifier (£530) and use this to biamp your speakers – assuming they're of a biwirable design – we really wouldn't suggest using the A65+ as a preamplifer with another power amplifier, as we don't think this will bring major improvements to your system's sound.

A switch to Arcam's new A80 integrated amplifier (£600) may be one way to go, but we'd suggest some auditioning of that amp against your current one before you buy.

Other integrated amplifier choices in this kind of price range would include the Marantz PM7200 (£330) – a Best Buy in the 2003 What Hi-fi? Sound and Vision Awards – and more expensive models such as the Roksan Kandy MkIII (£550) or even the Cyrus 6 (£600), although all of these will give a more forthright sound than the rather relaxed Arcam. You could even consider one of TAG McLaren's entry-level models: we've seen the 60i (£549) and 60iRV (£895) at some very attractive prices recently.

HI-FI BUYING ABROAD

WILL UK HI-FI KIT WORK FINE ACROSS EUROPE?

PROBLEM ···› I want to buy a new system, comprising the Roksan Kandy Mk III CD player and amp with Wharfedale Pacific Evolution 30 speakers. I live in the Netherlands, where this system will cost me about €3475 (£2370). In the UK it adds up to £1750 (€2570), so I want to buy the system in your fine country.

Does the UK have the same electric current as the Netherlands (220-230V-50Hz) and is the plug the same? If not do you know a acceptable solution?

Wim Erdtsieck
The Netherlands

WE SAY ···› Well, that's one in the eye for the 'rip-off Britain' brigade, Wim. And the good news is that the UK voltage and frequency is the same as in your country, as indeed it is across Europe, give or take a few local variations in the 230-250V range, and all hi-fi equipment should handle that with no problems.

Even better, the Roksans use IEC mains input plugs on their rear panels, so while we in Britain use plugs with three square pins and yours have round pins, all you need to do is buy two new round-pin-to-female-IEC cables and you're in business. We reckon the £620 you're saving should more than cover that – a cable only costs a few pounds, or about £50 or so for an entry-level audiophile mains cable. A local hi-fi retailer or electrical shop should be able to sort you out.

The only thing to check is whether the products you buy will be serviced by your local Roksan and Wharfedale distributor in the rare event you have problems with any component. Roksan's distributor in The Netherlands is Monitor Audio Netherland B.V., tel (+31) 356 295 491, but Wharfedale doesn't list one, so a call to the company in the UK on +44 (0)1480 447700 should clarify the situation.

Help me build a loud, proud system

PROBLEM ···› I have a budget of around £500 to buy an amplifier, CD player and some decent speakers, but I need some help in choosing a system that will be loud, proud and good for Asian tracks, bhangra, rap, hip hop and R'n'B.

I am toying between the Marantz PM6010 & PM7200, and I want to know which is the better of the two. The PM7200 is a big beast but also quite a good one from all the reviews I have read. If it were your money and you were going to buy one which one would you choose?

I have already chosen the Marantz CD5400 CD player and Wharfedale 8.3 speakers. I also looked at NAD equipment, which sounded a bit too cathedral-like, and Rotels which I haven't heard, but would prefer to stick to the Marantz components for their sheer good looks and build quality.

Harminder Singh Lall
via email

WE SAY ···› Ain't gonna happen, Harminder! The Wharfedales are £200, or about £150 if you do some serious shopping around, while we've seen the Marantz player for about £130, although it's more commonly around £150.

That's already soaked up £300-£350 of your £500 budget, and there's no way you're going to get a PM7200 for £150-£200. The best price we could find for it was £230, which we have to admit amazed us a bit as it's more likely you're going to pay £300 or more if you buy from a high street dealer.

We'd suggest that the PM6010 is the way to go if you want to stick to Marantz, or alternatively the NAD C521BEE CD player used with Rotel's RA-01 amplifier.

Together they'll cost you around £400 or so, so it's back to a bit of bargain-hunting and budget reassessment, not forgetting that you'll need to spend at least £25 on some interconnects – see this month's test (p98) for an idea on those – and at least the same on some decent speaker cable. The Wharfedales definitely take it on bang for the buck, and will suit your needs perfectly – good hunting when it comes to finding amps and CD players to get your room jumping within your budget!

NAD's Best Buy budget CD player – the C521BEE – is a real bargain

AV SPEAKERS

WHAT'S THE BEST WAY OF ADDING A SIXTH SPEAKER?

SYSTEM ···› Marantz SR4300 receiver, Yamaha speakers

PROBLEM ···› I'm looking to put a sixth speaker into my current setup to make the most of the 6.1 capability of my Marantz SR4300 receiver. Should I stick to the Yamaha range for the extra speaker or could I get another make for this purpose?

Vernon
via the website

WE SAY Shame you didn't tell us which make of Yamaha speakers you own, Vernon, but unless you're especially disappointed with the sound they currently make, we'd suggest you stay with them.

Multichannel sound tends to be more convincing and 'three-dimensional' when the sounds you hear are tonally consistent as they travel around the room, which is why we commonly recommend buying a complete package, rather than mixing and matching brands to create a speaker system.

That's also why many home cinema purists believe that the very best systems use identical speakers throughout, both at the front and the rear of the room. That's identical in terms of both make and design, whether stand-mounters or floorstanders. So stick with Yamaha.

If you opt for a different make of speaker, even if on paper it appears to be a superior design, the chances are it won't sound tonally similar to those you're getting from the rest of your set-up, and in an instant, your surround sound system will sound less convincing.

But don't let us put you off – the benefits of extended surround, even with standard 5.1 discs, are really worth exploring.

HI-FI SYSTEM UPGRADE

WHICH SYSTEM WOULD SUIT MY CLASSIC TASTES?

SYSTEM ···› NAD C520 CD player, Arcam A60 amp; Rogers LS1 speakers

PROBLEM ···› I'm about to spend some of the kids' inheritance on a new system, and what I have in mind is the Cyrus 6, Roksan Kandy MkIII and Wharfedale Pacific Evolution 30s. As my preference is for classical music, (with occasional forays into heavy rock, blues and country), the main consideration will be detail and sound quality rather than bells and whistles. Would this be a good choice?

Stan Jenkinson
via email

WE SAY ···› Well, you have a half-decent system, though we expect the balance is on the warm and lush side of neutral. So you need to be careful when buying a modern replacement that you don't get something overly bright and fast, at least by comparison with what you have now. And we have a sneaking suspicion that's how a system using the Cyrus player, Roksan amp and Wharfedale speakers might sound, a situation exacerbated by the fact that all these components have a very hard edge 'straight from the box' and take some running-in to settle down.

Stick with the Wharfedales – they're very fine speakers indeed, but we'd suggest you consider some player/amp alternatives. Instead of the Cyrus we'd suggest the cheaper Arcam CD73T, NAD C542 and Rotel RCD-02 players, along with older favourites such as the Marantz CD6000KI, which is available at bargain prices, and even 'last generation' Arcams such as the CD92T.

Meanwhile we'd suggest you have a listen to amps like the Marantz PM7200, which has a smooth, controlled yet powerful delivery ideally suited to classical music, the Audio Analogue Puccini, which is another sweet-sounding model, and Exposure's still very good 2010.

We're confident these will suit you better, and while you're at it you should also listen to Tannoy's explicit and involving Revolution R3 speakers and Monitor Audio's fine Silver S6s, which will be especially good in larger rooms.

More questions than answers, we know, but if you're condemning the kids to a life of poverty, it's worth the time and effort to get the kit right.

Forget the kids, what Stan needs is an Arcam CD73T as part of his system upgrade

What should drive my DJ decks?

PROBLEM ···› I've decided to ditch my old hi-fi (as it's rubbish) and purchase a brand spanking new one. I have conducted extensive research through the magazine and I have come up with the following pieces of equipment that would seem to fit my requirements: Arcam A85 amplifier and FMJ CD32T CD player, to be used with PMC FB1 speakers.

My musical tastes are dance oriented and I'll be connecting a Technics SL1210s and a preamp through the system as I DJ as well, but I do listen to chill out and would like a system that sounds great with both.

What does this combination sound like? Can you recommend a system of comparable price? Is this amp good and powerful enough for the CD player and speakers?

Philip Almasari
London

WE SAY ···› We don't have any problems with your system, Philip, as we reckon the A85 and FB1s will work together very well indeed – both for everyday listening and as an outlet for those DJ decks.

The PMCs benefit from use with an amplifier having plenty of clout, and the Arcam will certainly fit this bill, having enough power for dance music while at the same time sufficient control when it comes to chill-out tunes.

We'd suggest you look into biamping the speakers by adding a matching Arcam P85 power amplifier to the system, as the PMCs respond particularly well to this approach, but beyond that we reckon you're definitely on the right track.

Philip's Technics decks will benefit from the power and control of the Arcam/PMC pairing

AV/HI-FI SPEAKER SET-UPS

WHICH SPEAKER KITS SUIT BOTH MUSIC AND MOVIES?

SYSTEM ···› Denon AVR-3802 receiver, Denon DVD2800 MkII DVD player

PROBLEM ···› What speakers would work well with my electronics? I've only got a small room, and the package I buy must play both DVDs and CDs well. I like the Wharfedale Evo 30s and Monitor Audio Silver 8s, but I'm not sure if I should go for the KEF eggs.

JJ
via the website

WE SAY ···› Not Jermaine Jenas are you? Any chance of an autograph? Er... right, on with the business. You've got a great receiver – one that probably deserves a better speaker system than the KEF KHT2005, even in its new 'series II' form. You need to be thinking in terms of a package costing from £1000 up to £2000, because your receiver will comfortably cope.

If you've got a small room, we'll have to discount the Evo 30s, and also any package based on Monitor Audio's Silver 8s, because both designs will overpower you with their bass; they need room to sound their best. Instead, we'd be tempted by a system that used smaller main speakers, married to a good active subwoofer: that way, you can accurately control the level and character of the bass you put into the room, and adjust it to avoid any sonic undesirables like 'boom'.

That leads us to three suggestions. First, the ATC Concept One package, minus ATC's own subwoofer (which disappointed us when we reviewed it a few months ago). It costs £2000, subwoofer included, so the speakers alone should cost around £1300. Team that with the B&W ASW675 subwoofer (£650) for a blistering £2000 package that will suit both music and movies.

Too big? Consider M&K's ultra compact K-5 package instead, which costs £1715. It's very sophisticated, very compact and yet still able with both movies and music, although we should point out that the latter can sound a little too dry for some tastes. Too much? Our last suggestion: two pairs of Mission 780 stand-mounters with a Mission 78C centre channel. £950 the lot, and very musical too. Throw in a REL Q-150E MkII active subwoofer (£500), and presto: a high-quality compact home cinema set-up for under £1500.

Mission's 780s standmounters work well as satellites

HI-FI SYSTEM BUILDER

Our simple guide to hooking up all your hi-fi kit

CD player

HOT OPTION Arcam CD73T £400 ★★★★★

Arcam has upgraded its CD72T and come up with this brilliant box of tricks. Exquisite refinement and dynamics make the '73T a worthy Product of the Year.

Amplifier

HOT OPTION Roksan Kandy MkIII £550 ★★★★★

Awesome power and subtlety combine to make the MkIII a magnificent all-round amp. Its timing is spot-on, detail resolution superb and casework top notch.

Things to look for when buying a CD player

Check the player can handle CD-R/W discs if you have a standalone CD recorder or PC with a CD-R drive.

A remote control is usually standard these days, but check it has programming so you can set the tracks to play in the order you want, and A/B repeat, which allows you to loop a section of music.

You'll need a digital output to record onto MiniDisc or CD-RW. There are two types: electrical (coaxial) and optical: the former offers the best sound quality.

A headphone socket is handy for listening at night, but make sure it has a volume control.

Display off lets you kill the track/time readout, which can cause interference. Some players sound better with it off.

CD multiplayers can take more than one disc, which makes them great for parties.

Variable output allows you to adjust the volume without using the amplifier – useful if your amp doesn't have its own remote control.

Things to look for when buying an amplifier

A/B speaker switching enables you to run a second pair of speakers into another room in the house.

Line inputs work with CD players, tape decks, tuners – but not turntables. A tape loop allows a recorder to be connected.

Phono inputs are required for connecting a turntable. Moving coil (MC) phono cartridges produce an even smaller signal than moving magnet (MM) ones, so make sure your amp's phono stage is suitable for your turntable.

More power isn't just about extra volume – it usually buys you more dynamic ability, too. It takes a huge increase in amplifier output to make the maximum level twice as loud. A 30-100w output is usually fine.

Tone controls can degrade the sound. If you must have them, look for a source-direct button to bypass them.

Preout sockets are volume-controlled phono outputs – handy for adding power amplifiers if you want to upgrade your system at a later date, or for biamping.

CABLE CORNER

The basic rule is to spend about 10 percent of the value of your system on cables and interconnects.

Phono (RCA)

Phono leads are the normal connection used between a source (CD player/cassette deck/tuner) and an amp. Free wires with red and white plugs are often supplied with a player, but it pays to buy better interconnects to improve the sound quality.

Coaxial

There are two types of digital cable for linking a CD player to a MiniDisc or CD-R recorder, or a DVD player to an AV amp. The coaxial (electrical) type is our preferred option. If necessary, you can purchase an optical-to-coaxial socket converter box from Digimate (Tel: 0118 984 4545). It's around £55.

Optical

The second type of digital connection uses pulses of light rather than electricity to transfer data. Some recorders only accept the optical connector, which is characterised by a special slot-in connector socket called a Toslink, shown above. It's normally protected by a pull-out dustcap.

DIN

German DIN standard multipin connectors (three to eight pins) are usually used for connecting pre and power amps; they're rarely found elsewhere these days. Naim still uses a locking version on its components, and cable companies can provide DIN-to-phono cables for older kit.

XLR

Three-pin type which locks on to the socket. Used for balanced connections.

BNC

Push and twist connector which is normally used for digital connections.

Speakers

HOT OPTION Dynaudio Audience 52 £624 ★★★★★
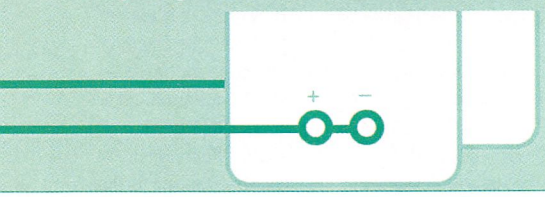
These real-wood-finished standmount speakers have the muscle to party all night long but also the skill to maintain your attention at low volume levels.



Things to look for when buying speakers

Decide on size first. Do you want small standmount speakers or big floorstanders? Huge speakers in a small room (under 4x4m) sound awful, while small speakers will struggle to fill a big room with sound.
Match your amp to the speakers. First, look at the speakers' power handling. This is quoted as a range – eg 20-100w – so make sure your amp's power rating fits in that range. Also look at sensitivity: speakers with a high sensitivity are, in general, easier for an amplifier to drive than those with a low one. Most modern speakers have a sensitivity of between 87 and 92dB/w/m, which should be fine.
A low impedance draws a high current flow from the amplifier, while a high impedance draws less. Most speakers have an impedance of 6-8 ohms (see Buying Guide), but some dip to 4 ohms.
Look for good binding posts – twin sets of sockets allow biwiring or biamping to boost performance. Not all speakers have twin binding posts, so check before you buy.

What to put your system on

Speaker stands

Ensure your 'bookshelf' or standmounting speakers sound their very best by investing in a pair of sturdy speaker stands. These work by keeping the speakers static, so all the energy of the drivers is used to shift air, not move the cabinets. There are models to suit all pockets, from as little as £30. See Buying Guide (p245) for the stands we've tested.

Isolation platforms

Used beneath CD players, amplifiers and record players, isolation platforms will shield kit from external vibrations that can affect the sound quality. Squash balls, cut in half and placed under your equipment, are a cost-effective alternative. Or you can try Vibrapods from www.stoneaudio.com

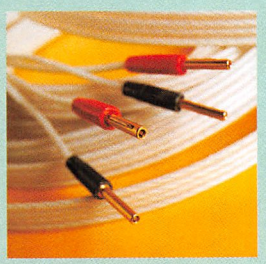
Equipment supports

Placing your kit on a hi-fi rack will bring improvements in soundstaging, bass extension and treble clarity. They come in all shapes and sizes and cost from around £50. Check out the Accessories section of our Buying Guide (p245) for ratings on a wide range of models.

SPEAKER CABLE

Single wire

Speaker cables come in all shapes and sizes, ranging in price from £1.99/metre up to £100+/metre. If your speakers have a single set of binding posts, then running a single strand of cable from the outputs on the amp to each speaker will suffice.



Biwire

If you want to biwire, your speakers will each need twin sets of terminals. You'll then need to run two sets of cables from the amp to each speaker, or buy a biwire cable with four plugs at the speaker end. Check our Buying Guide for a list of biwire cables.

How to biwire your speakers

Biwirable speakers have separate sets of inputs for treble and mid/bass, and a split crossover (or filter) to prevent the bass swamping the delicate treble signals. Run two sets of speaker cable from the left-channel terminals on the amp to the separate inputs on the back of the speaker, and the same on the right channel (see diagram above).

The next step up is to biamplify your speakers, for which you need two amps, one to drive the treble frequencies and the other the mid/bass frequencies: the usual configuration is an integrated amp with a matching power amp, or a preamp with two stereo power amps. It's important that the gain of the two amps is the same, or you'll get a tonal imbalance. Generally this method gives you a cleaner, more dynamic sound.

Our top three hi-fi systems

Want separates but worried about mixing and matching? Fear not – our team has assembled three spectacularly good Award-winning set-ups at price points to suit a variety of budgets

BUDGET £650

We've mixed and matched components to bring you this month's recommended budget system

You'll get an amazing sound from this £650 trio of Best Buy winners

NAD C521BEE
★★★★★ £200
Awards 2003
This revamped version of the Award-winning C521i is a 2003 Best Buy. It has a superb tonal balance for £200 and its dynamics and detail resolution are even more impressive than its predecessor's. Another great achievement by the NAD team.

AMPLIFIER
Rotel RA-01
★★★★★ £250
Awards 2003
The RA-01 is a fantastic bargain – it's identical to the £350 RA-02 but doesn't have a remote control. It has terrific bite and insight, and build quality is first-rate. Combined with the new NAD C521BEE it makes a formidable hi-fi separates package.

SPEAKERS
Monitor Audio Bronze B2
★★★★★ £200
Awards 2003
These stylish-looking bargain standmounters do everything right. They produce a wonderfully integrated sound with superbly balanced high frequencies and a great midrange. If you're after budget speakers look no further.

MIDRANGE £1329

Next step up the ladder? Here's one of the best midprice set-ups money can buy

CD PLAYER
Arcam CD73T
★★★★★ £400
Awards 2003
In our opinion the CD73T is the best all-round CD player of the year. It looks almost identical to the exceptional CD72T but offers an even more refined presentation. Add detail, sweeping dynamics and eye-watering reflexes and you've got a truly spectacular product.

AMPLIFIER
Roksan Kandy MkIII
★★★★★ £550
Awards 2003
This Best Buy beauty combines power and guile to stunning effect. The Kandy MkIII is muscular enough to get the most out of exciting music, but also has the ability to pull out the details and present them with clarity and precision. Timing and rhythm are also spot on.

SPEAKERS
★★★★★ £379
Awards 2003
There's not much left to say about the Quad 11Ls. They won our speaker Product of the Year Award in 2002 and walked it this year, too. Awesome looks combine with brilliant performance, all for an amazingly low price. No rival comes close to offering such value.

The Roksan powerhouse combines perfectly with the Arcam and Quads

HIGH-END £3399

And if money's no object, throw caution to the wind and try this stunning combo

The Cyrus/AVI/ATC combo will keep you happy for many years to come

CD PLAYER
Cyrus CD8
★★★★★ £1000
Awards 2003
It looks the same as its predecessor – the CD7 – but its performance has been boosted in several ways. Beneath the silver case are improved digital-to-analogue converters and a better power supply. The result is a brilliantly detailed, powerful sound.

POWER AMPLIFIER
AVI Laboratory Series
★★★★★ £1399
Awards 2003
The AVI never lies: it's one of the most honest amps we've come across. It digs up layers of fine detail and delivers them in a superbly natural way. Many ultra-detailed amps sound clinical, but not the Laboratory series. Class-leading communication.

ATC SCM12
★★★★★ £1000
Awards 2003
If you want jaw-dropping sound quality you've got to listen to the SCM12s. They won't increase the beauty of your listening room, but who cares when the sound is so sublime? Tonal balance and transparency are second to none at this price.

Hi-fi recording which format?

	Cassette	MiniDisc	MP3	CD-Recordable
VALUE	★★★★★	★★★★★	★★★★★	★★★★★
SOUND QUALITY	★★☆☆☆	★★★★☆	★★★☆☆	★★★★★
DURABILITY	★★☆☆☆	★★★★★	★★★★★	★★★★★
AVERAGE PRICE	50p (90-minute tape)	80p-90p (74 minutes)	Free, or 50p-£1/track	CD-R (80p); CD-RW (£2)
PROS	Cheap; plenty of prerecorded tapes available; most cars have cassette players; small and light.	Digital (no hiss); easy to edit; light and robust; your recordings won't deteriorate over time.	Plenty of music available to download from the net; no tapes or discs; easy to rip your CDs to digital format.	Recordings virtually identical to the original; blank CD-R discs are getting cheaper, especially if you buy in bulk.
CONS	Can suffer from background hiss; tape tends to wear out with use; can't edit your recordings.	Can sound compressed; blank discs are slightly more expensive than cassette; few prerecorded discs.	Heavy use of compression means sound quality can be impaired; you may have to pay for music downloads.	CD-RW discs won't play in many older CD players; mistakes are permanently stored on write-once discs.
WHY BUY IT?	If you want a cheap and easy way of making your own compilations, cassette is ideal.	Perfect if you like to edit your own recordings – you can move tracks, delete them or splice them.	More and more devices are now MP3-capable, from full-size hi-fi kit to tiny portables and even mobile phones.	CD recordings offer the best sound quality, and the format is well established worldwide.
RECOMMENDED HARDWARE	YAMAHA KX-580SE £250 ★★★★★ Quality copies and good sound from this 2002 Award winner.	PIONEER MJ-D508 £200 ★★★★☆ Just right for recording pop and dance music for portable playback.	APPLE iPOD FROM £249 ★★★★★ Latest version is slimmer and sexier than ever. Available for PC and Mac.	SONY RCD-W3 £250 ★★★★★ A real cracker – the price is right and it's a breeze to use.

Radio analogue or digital?

	Digital	Analogue
DOES IT COVER THE WHOLE COUNTRY?	No, although the number of stations is increasing all the time. See the maps opposite.	Yes, pretty much, although FM reception can be poor in some areas and is prone to interference.
WHAT'S THE QUALITY LIKE?	Good, but it depends on the bit-rate at which programmes are broadcast.	If you have a strong signal, FM stereo is very good, but MW/LW sound less good.
HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?	Portable units such as the Evoke-1 (above) are available for £99. A digital hi-fi tuner costs from £130.	You can pick up a portable radio from as little as £20. Hi-fi tuners start at around £100.
SO WHICH WAY SHOULD I GO?	Digital radio offers easy tuning, hiss-free reception and lots of new stations, so it's well worth buying if you live in the coverage area.	High-quality FM broadcasts are arguably better than digital ones, but a combi digital/analogue radio gives you the best of both worlds.

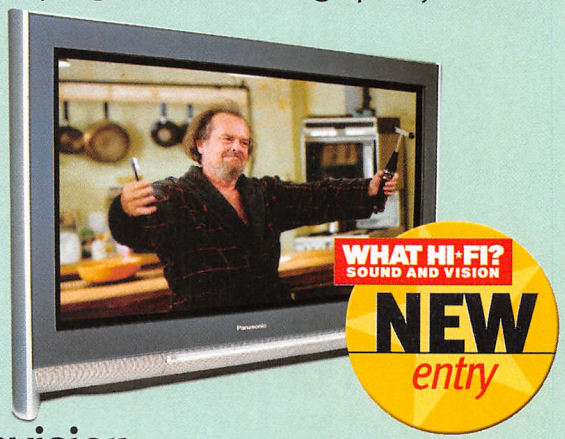
HOME CINEMA SYSTEM BUILDER

Our simple guide to hooking up all your AV kit



Television

HOT OPTION Panasonic TX-36PD30 £1700 ★★★★★

This stylish progressive-scan capable television raises the standard of picture quality. Designed with movie watching in mind, it produces amazing images.

DVD player

HOT OPTION Denon DVD-2900 £850 ★★★★★

A corker of a universal player. For £850 you get a fully loaded PAL prog-scan enabled machine that offers a great picture and decent music playback, too.

How to set up your TV

Position your set away from lights or move standing lamps and other light sources to avoid/minimise intrusive light reflection that can detract from the picture. Newer flatscreen sets are less prone to reflections than the older curved-screen type.

Dim the lights in your viewing room, or even better, turn them off altogether.

Reduce the brightness on your TV to roughly 35 percent.

Set contrast to about 65 percent to leave whites bright but not 'flaring', and give consistent blacks.

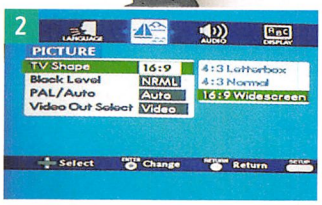
Turn sharpness controls off – they artificially 'intensify' areas of screen detail, but do so at some cost to true fine-detail resolution.

Turn off Artificial Intelligence, Digital Noise Reduction or any other digital picture-enhancing gizmos – they can cause 'smearing' or digital noise, or jerking.

Buy a decent Scart cable (see pic 1) These cost from £20-£40 and will deliver a better picture and sound than any freebie.

The ideal settings

Brightness
Contrast
Sharpness	OFF
AI	OFF
Scart input	RGB
Aspect ratios	16:9 or Wide



Use on-screen menus (see pic 2) to set the right aspect ratios on the TV (Wide) and DVD player (16:9). This'll access the anamorphic coding (or 'widescreen enhancement') on the disc for a correctly shaped, more detailed picture.

Play a DVD with lots of reds/oranges in it. Total Recall, Dances with Wolves and Red Planet work well, for example. Reduce the colour until red looks red, but fleshtones are natural not pink. If reds are overblown, you'll see flaring round the edges of things.

If you have a surround-sound set, use the built-in test tone to set all the speakers to the correct level. Avoid the temptation to set the rear speakers to too high a level.

How to set up your DVD

Use a Scart cable (see pic 3) to connect your DVD player to the TV. Make sure you use the Scart socket on the back of the TV which accepts an RGB signal, and connect the cable to the matching Scart on the back of the DVD player. A Scart carries both pictures and stereo sound.

Set the DVD player to RGB. The best picture comes via the RGB (red, green, blue) signal via the Scart cable that you've just connected. Use the on-screen menus to do this: press the set-up button and select RGB on the screen (see pic 4).

Set the correct screen size. You need to tell your player whether you're using a widescreen (16:9) or normal (4:3) TV. Assuming you're using a widescreen set, select the AV channel on the telly, and then press the set-up button on the DVD player's remote. Now select the widescreen mode (or 4:3 if you're watching a normal TV) from the menu screen.

Digital surround sound. In order to hear the best multichannel sound from your DVD player, you need to tell it to send a digital 'bitstream' from the digital output, using the on-screen menus . This will send Dolby Digital and DTS audio from the digital output into the AV amplifier.

Connect the digital output of the DVD player to the digital input of your home cinema amplifier using a digital interconnect. Be sure to use a proper digital interconnect: an ordinary hi-fi phono interconnect just won't do.

Mute the TV. Remember, the Scart socket will carry audio as well as video signals into your TV, so your telly will continue to make a sound through its built-in speakers. You don't want this, so mute the television using the mute button on the television's remote control.

Digital Out	Bitstream
DTS	On

Home cinema amplifier

HOT OPTION Pioneer VSX-A5i £1200 ★★★★★

We thought the VSX-D2011 was spectacularly good but its replacement, the VSX-A5i, is marginally better. Awesome sound and definitive flexibility.

Speakers

HOT OPTION Acoustic Energy Aegis Evo 3B £950 ★★★★★

Winner of the surround-sound speaker crown for the second time in a row, this amazing package is excellent in stereo and fantastic fun with movies.

Front speakers

For the best home cinema results, try to keep all three speakers at the same height, and the same distance away from your listening position. If possible, choose models from the same manufacturer, as this will help to ensure tonal consistency. If the front speakers are placed near the TV, make sure they're magnetically shielded so they don't interfere with the picture.

Centre speakers

A good centre speaker produces a clearer, more involving movie-watching experience. If you can, place your centre speaker under rather than on top of your TV. If you have to put it on the TV, isolate the centre speaker by using some Blu-Tac underneath it.

Rear speakers

A home cinema speaker package works as a set of five, and each element is as significant as the other. Don't spend the bulk of your budget on the front speakers and then skimp on the rear ones.

Subwoofers

If you're using small front speakers, the loss of bass can be compensated for with a dedicated subwoofer. This handles the low frequencies and delivers the weight and depth of film soundtracks. Home cinema amps and receivers have a dedicated bass channel output (which delivers the LFE, or low-frequency effect channel – the .1 in 5.1) and this is fed directly to the subwoofer.

How to set up your amplifier

Take the digital cable from your DVD player and connect the other end into a digital input on your home cinema amplifier (see pic 5). Make sure you use the socket marked DVD, as this will be suitable for Dolby Digital and DTS signals.

Now connect the surround speakers to the amp, feeding the speaker cable from each speaker to the appropriate speaker socket on the back of the amp (see above). The left front speaker should be wired to the left front terminal, the right front speaker to the right front terminal and so on.

On the back of each speaker make sure that you wire the left socket to the left terminal, and the right to the right; this is called 'in-phase' and ensures the best sound reproduction.

Add a subwoofer (if required). The last speaker to wire in is the subwoofer, using another standard phono interconnect cable (see pic 6). Take the cable from the subwoofer output on your home cinema amplifier, to the single input on the back of the subwoofer.

The last thing to do once all the wiring is complete is to press the Dolby Digital/DTS button on the fascia of your home cinema amp (see pic 7). This will tell it to look for those incoming signals and automatically select the appropriate surround-sound mode when playing a DVD.

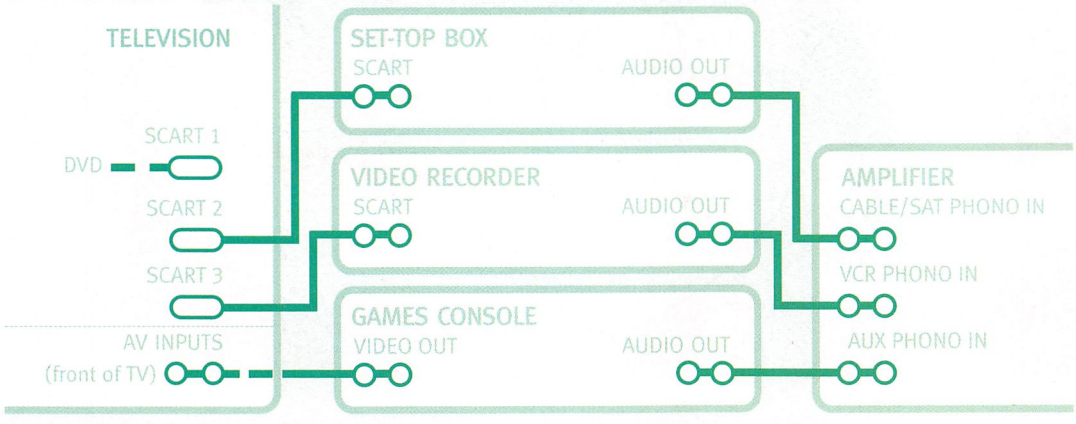
Expanding your AV system

Scart cables, which carry signals from an AV source to your TV, vary from the basic leads supplied free with a TV, VCR or DVD, to better aftermarket (branded) versions that improve sound and picture quality. Most DVD players have RGB Scart connections for the optimum picture quality, although some offer component video, which is even better, and S-Video, which is OK.



Where should I put all those speakers?

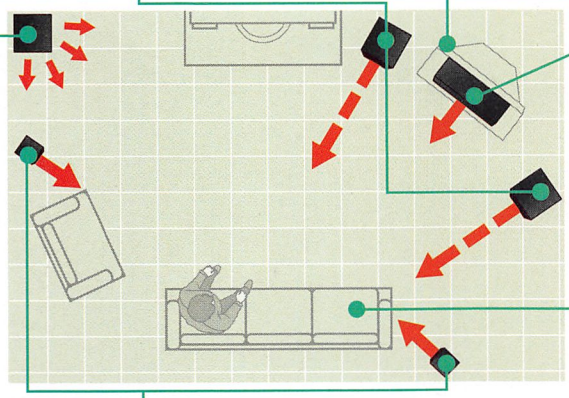
Home cinema speakers are happiest in a square room, but here's how to get the best from them whatever your room's shape

FRONT SPEAKERS Keep your front speakers equidistant from the TV and angled towards the sofa.

TELEVISION Ensure the screen doesn't face any windows or lights to minimise reflections

CENTRE SPEAKER Ideally place it under the TV, but if it must be on top, secure it with Blu-Tack to the cabinet

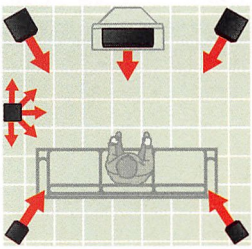
SUBWOOFER Bass is non-directional, so the subwoofer can be hidden away out of sight, either in a corner of the room or behind a chair or sofa



SEATING The seating arrangement here gives you two choices for rear speakers – in the corner behind the chairs (but that'll give a very narrow and unrealistic surround field), or as shown here, which is better but makes the left-hand sofa seat the best place for sound

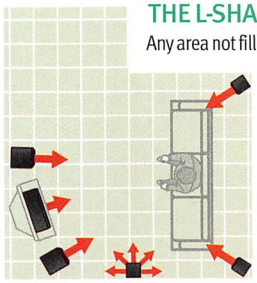
REAR SPEAKERS Tricky this, as the sofa is against a wall. Place one speaker either side of the seating

THE IDEAL SQUARE-SHAPED SCENARIO



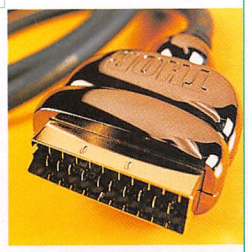
If the room is large, the set-up is quite straightforward, and you might want to add a subwoofer. Small square rooms are harder, because anything big will dominate the room and sound awful. Wall-mounted speakers will save space, and avoid using too powerful an amplifier

THE L-SHAPED ROOM



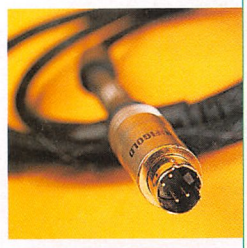
Any area not filled with kit will suck out much of the bass. Put the TV at the corner of the L, facing down the longer of the two axes. Place your main stereo speakers close to it, or alternatively opt for a subwoofer/satellite speaker system, as it can spread the bass without bad reflections

CABLE CORNER



Scart

Scart cables, which carry signals from an AV source to your TV, are the normal method of connection for DVD players, VCRs and digital set-top boxes.

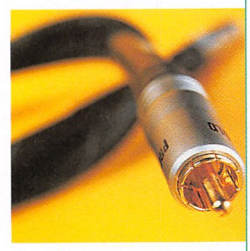


S-Video

Not all DVD players have Scart connections. S-Video, which splits the signal into chrominance (colour) and luminance (brightness), is one alternative.

Component

Some DVD players offer component video connections, which offer even better picture quality than Scart, but you'll need a TV, projector or plasma with component inputs.

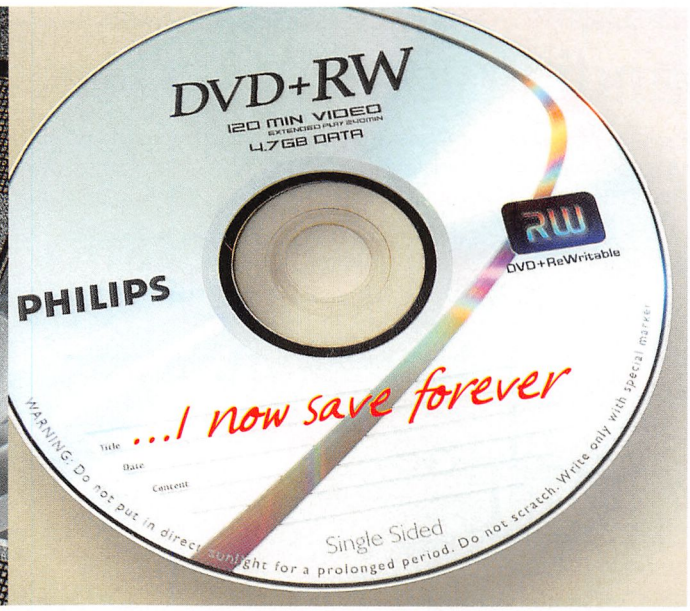


Coaxial

To feed the Dolby Digital or DTS sound signal from your DVD player into your home cinema amp, you'll need a digital cable. Most AV amps accept the coaxial type shown here.

PHILIPS

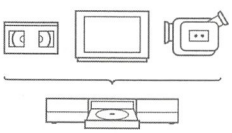
Let's make things better.

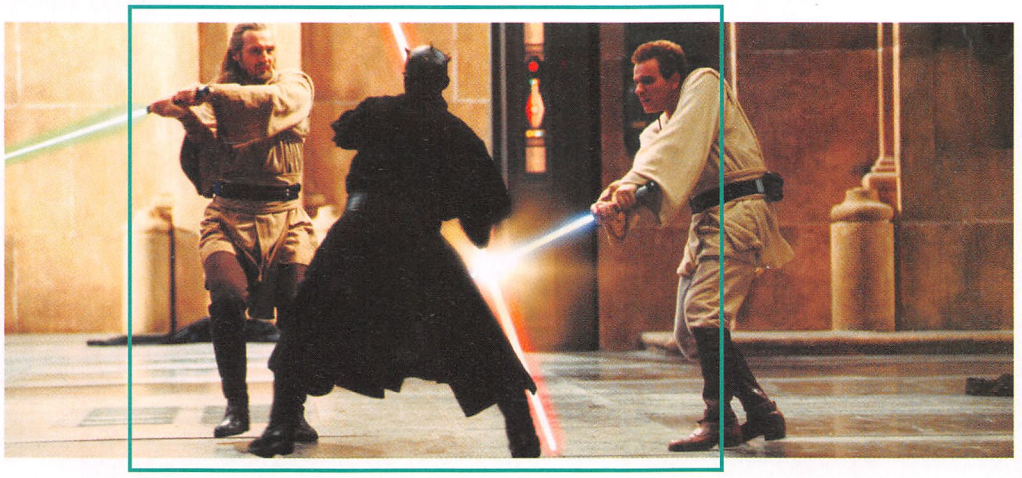


There's never been a better time to record on DVD. That's because Philips now offers a range of affordable, compatible DVD Recorders. They're sleek. They're stylish. And they make recording on DVD easier than ever. So what are you waiting for?

Remember more at www.philips.com/dvdrecorder

Philips DVDR 75





See what you're missing

So why do you need a widescreen TV? Simple. Normal TVs use the 1.33:1 (or 4:3) ratio, but Hollywood uses much wider film shapes, Letterbox (1.85:1), and Cinemascope (2.35:1). TV broadcasters often 'recut' films to make them fit a 4:3 TV, a process called 'pan and scan', and this means much of the original wide-aspect film image as shown at the cinema is lost (see above). Widescreen TVs use a compromise ratio of 1.78:1 (16:9), which gets far closer to the movie experience.

NORMAL 4:3

If you watch a 4:3 TV broadcast on a widescreen set you'll get black bars down each side. This is fine if the programme was originally shot in 4:3, but if it's a film cropped to fit the size of a normal TV you'll lose part of the image.

ANAMORPHIC WIDESCREEN

Most DVDs offer specialist widescreen coding called 'anamorphic enhancement' that squeezes the sides of the image inwards very slightly, while increasing quality. This lets Letterbox films (1.85:1) fill a 1.78:1 screen.

CINEMASCOPE

Watch a film in the widest Cinemascope (2.35:1) aspect ratio on a widescreen TV and you'll still get black bars at the top and bottom of the screen. This is quite normal: it just means you're seeing the image as the director intended.

Surround formats explained in full

DOLBY PRO-LOGIC/ PRO-LOGIC II

The original form of surround sound, which has left and right stereo channels, a centre dialogue channel, and mono rear channels for surround effects. Pro-Logic II is Dolby's latest version of the system, and sounds far better.

DOLBY DIGITAL 5.1 & DTS

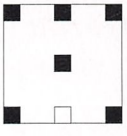
DOLBY DIGITAL SURROUND EX & DTS ES MATRIX 6.1



A development of 5.1 surround audio that includes a 'matrixed' centre-rear audio signal to provide additional surround envelopment. Needs a decoder, with amplification, and one or two additional centre-rear speakers.

How to improve your speaker settings

Once you've connected everything, you need to adjust the speaker settings to suit the configuration of your system and the size of your room, in the following order:

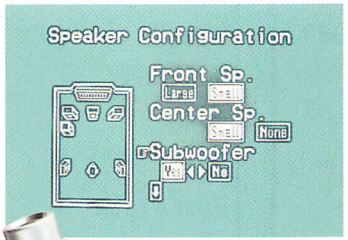
1 SPEAKER SIZE

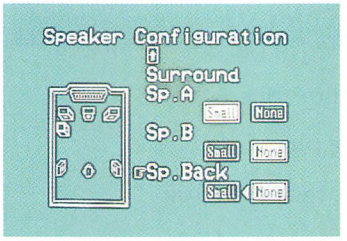
In the set-up menu on your surround amp, select the correct settings for the size of speakers you are using. Set the on-screen menu to 'small' for standmount speakers, and select Yes or No for the subwoofer option depending on whether you have one or not. For floorstanders, set the menu to 'large'.

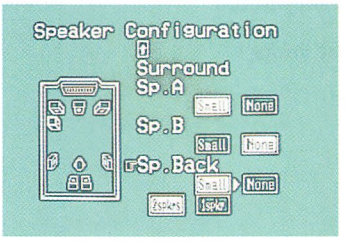
2 DELAY TIMES

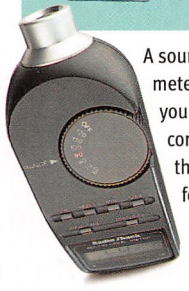
Set the delay times for each speaker to ensure the sound from all the speakers reaches you simultaneously – important for accurate effects. There are two ways of doing this: some home cinema amps and receivers allow you simply to measure the distance from your listening position (in metres) and then just key the information in via the onscreen menu. The amp will then set the delay times automatically.

If setting the delay times manually, use this formula: measure the distance in centimetres from each speaker to your listening position. Then calculate the difference (in cm) between the distances of the speakers furthest away from you, and those nearest to you. Usually, this means the difference in the distances from your seat to your front and your rear speakers. For every 30cm of this difference, add 1 millisecond of delay.









A sound-pressure-level meter (left) will help you set up speakers correctly. And follow the onscreen menus for setting speaker delays

Example: Front speakers 3.0 metres away
Rear speakers 2.1 metres away
Difference 0.9 metres = 3x30cm = 3 milliseconds of delay

3 SOUND LEVELS

Next you need to set each speaker to the correct sound level. Activate the test tone on your surround amp/receiver and using a sound pressure level meter (a very basic one is available in kit from Maplin for £5) set the main volume control to a normal listening level. Set the controls on the sound pressure meter to 75dB, 'C' weighting and 'slow' response.

Then, sitting in your listening position and with the sound meter pointing upwards (not towards the speakers), take a reading from the test tone generated from each speaker in turn, and adjust the volume level up or down until they all register 75dB on the display. Alternatively, you can set the levels by using your ears, but using a sound meter will be more accurate.

Awards 2003
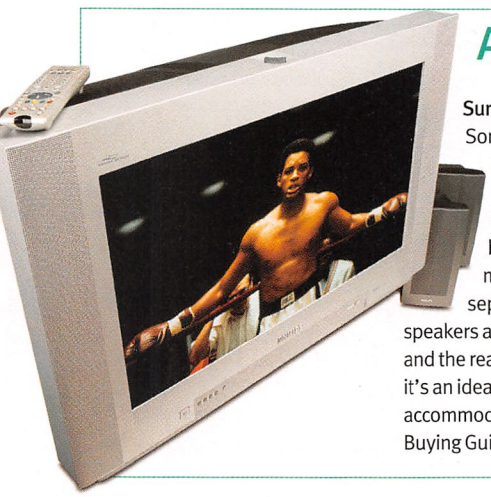
As close to the ideal compromise between superb multichannel music and movies as you can get. And it's easy on the eye, too.

A big screen needs a big sound – this set-up has both

ALTERNATIVE SOLUTIONS



Surround-sound TV
Some televisions come with built-in Dolby Digital surround sound and extra speakers, for a simple one-box solution. They can't match the performance of a separates set-up, but the front speakers are usually built into the set and the rears tend to be quite small, so it's an ideal solution for those who can't accommodate lots of extra boxes. Our Buying Guide lists models tested.

Hi-fi kit
You can use your existing stereo hi-fi system to drive the front left and right channels, and then add a surround sound processor (such as Yamaha's £300 DSP-E800) and extra speakers for the centre and rear channels. This will preserve the sound quality of your stereo hi-fi when playing CDs, and means you don't have to throw away all your existing hi-fi equipment.

PlayStation 2
You may not know it, but a PlayStation 2 will play DVDs too, so if you already own one you can hook it into a surround system and use it for watching movies.

AMPLIFIER Boosts signals to drive speakers. Can be one-box (integrated) or have separate pre and power sections.
ANALOGUE LPs/cassette tapes store audio in non-digital form directly related to the signal.
ANAMORPHIC Anamorphically enhanced DVD discs have been coded to offer improved picture quality on widescreen TV sets and banish most, if not all, of the letterbox effect, too.

B

BASS Low frequencies, often hard to reproduce. A review that says bass is slow means it goes 'whoompa-whoompa' and can dominate the music. The ideal is good bass extension allied to speed and rhythm.
BASS REFLEX A speaker design using air-flow from a port in the cabinet to help bass reproduction.

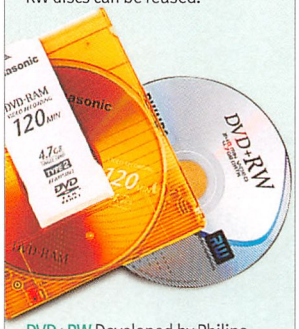
BIAMPING Each drive unit of a speaker is driven by a separate amp channel, so a pair of two-way speakers needs two stereo amps and two runs of cable to each speaker. See biwiring.
BINDING POST Speaker terminal having a threaded collar for gripping bare wires and sometimes a socket to take banana plugs, too.
BIT A single piece of digital information, basically an 'on/off' signal. Digital-to-analogue converters turn strings of bits into audio signals.
BITSTREAM A method of turning digital CD data into analogue signals. Bitstream digital-to-analogue converters process single bits of digital data much faster than multibit DACs, which work on chunks of digital data.
BIWIRING Some of the benefits of biamping but at lower cost. You need suitable speakers (with two sets of inputs and a split crossover), then send twin runs of cable from the amp (again if suitable) to each speaker.
BRIDGING Increasing power by connecting a stereo power amp for use in mono, then adding a second bridged stereo amp for the other channel. Power typically triples, but the amps must be designed to be bridged.

C

CARTRIDGE The device that actually plays the record. It converts the wobbles in the record's groove into electrical signals for your amp. See moving magnet and moving coil.
CD-R CD-Recordable. Uses a special blank disc in a recording CD player. Once recorded it can't be erased, but plays in standard CD players when 'fixed up'.
CD-RW Rewritable discs that can be erased and recorded on again and again. Work on all CD-R recorders but not all conventional CD players or in-car units.
CLASS A Amp in which positive and negative half cycles are amplified together. Runs hot, because the transistors in the power amp are on all the time, but has high-quality sound.
CLASS B Positive and negative halves of the signal dealt with by different parts of the circuit, the output devices switching continually. Amp runs cooler, though the sound is not as pure.
COLOURATION This is a shift away from the natural rendition of music. Colouration is undesirable 'boomy' bass, a 'nasal' midband or a splashy treble.
COMPRESSION Used by radio stations to reduce level differences between loud and soft parts of music. Helps in-car and transistor sound, but can be awful heard through a hi-fi tuner.
CROSSOVER Circuit inside loudspeakers which splits the incoming signal, sending the high frequencies to the tweeter and the low ones to the woofer.
CRT Cathode Ray Tube. The technology behind conventional televisions and large, high-end video projectors. Three colour tubes – one red, one green and one blue – are 'converged' to create an image on the screen.

D

DAB Digital Audio Broadcasting: digital radio on both BBC and independent stations. Offers hiss-free sound.
DAC Digital-to-analogue converter, turning on/off pulses into analogue sound. CD players have DACs built in. Separate DACs can upgrade a CD player or other digital player/recorder, or can be used with dedicated CD transports.
DATA REDUCTION Lowers the amount of data needed to store music. Sony's MiniDisc uses a system called ATRAC (Adaptive Transform Acoustic Coding), removing signals its designers think you can't hear.
DDD On CD cases – music recorded and mastered digitally and stored digitally on CD.
DECIBEL (dB) Measures sound pressure. A change of 1dB is just about audible, while +10dB sounds like the level has been doubled.
DIGITAL OUTPUT Allows the digital signal to be recorded or processed by an offboard DAC. Electrical or optical (fibre-optic) outputs allow this.
DISTORTION Signals that are unwanted or signal changes added by the equipment itself.
DOLBY B, C + S Noise-reduction systems to boost quiet signals when recording and reduce them on playback, cutting hiss.
DOLBY DIGITAL A home cinema sound system from Dolby, using five discrete channels of digital sound plus a separate channel for a subwoofer. Formerly known as AC-3.
DOLBY DIGITAL SURROUND EX Development of Dolby Digital 5.1 surround audio that includes a 'matrixed' centre-rear signal for greater surround envelopment. Needs suitable decoder, with amplification, and one or two additional centre-rear speakers. See also THX Surround EX.
DOLBY HX PRO Not noise reduction, but a way to record more high-frequency information without distortion.
DOLBY SURROUND Encodes sound for rear effects channels into the stereo tracks. Needs to be replayed through a decoder to produce surround sound, though.
DOLBY PRO-LOGIC Uses an extra centre speaker at the front for dialogue, and mono rear channels for surround effects.
DTS Discrete 5.1 channel home cinema digital sound system.
DTS ES MATRIX 6.1 Variation on the Dolby Digital Surround EX theme; similar results.
DTS ES DISCRETE 6.1 The only 'true' 6.1 system, with an entirely discrete digital channel providing centre-rear channel effects.
DUAL MONO Some amps are designed to keep left and right signals separate to minimise interference between them.
DVD-AUDIO New audio format that offers multichannel surround-sound music and high-quality 24-bit/96KHz stereo.
DVD-VIDEO Video format on CD-sized disc – huge capacity for movies, with widescreen and multichannel surround sound.
DVD-R/W Recordable DVD format supported by Pioneer. DVD-R recordings can't be erased, but RW discs can be reused.



DVD+RW Developed by Philips, this alternative rewritable format can record up to four hours of DVD-Video on a 4.7GB disc.
DVD-RAM Panasonic's take on recordable DVD, which includes a 'time slip' function allowing you to watch the start of a programme while still recording the rest of it.
DYNAMIC RANGE The range, in decibels, between the largest and smallest audio signals reproduced by hi-fi.

E

ELECTROSTATIC Speakers that use the force of high voltages to push and pull a thin, light diaphragm, which produces the sound.

F

FREQUENCY High-pitched sounds have a high frequency, low-pitched ones a low frequency. Audible sounds range from 16Hz to 20kHz.

H

HDCD High Definition Compatible Digital – a coding system for compact disc that aims to get better sound. Needs a decoder to be heard.
HERTZ (Hz) Unit of frequency. One Hz means a signal has one cycle per second.
HORN LOADING Improves a drive unit's efficiency and output, using a structure within the speaker that's shaped like a horn. Works in a very similar way to the trumpet on an old-fashioned gramophone.

I

IMPEDANCE Electrical property. A low impedance draws a high current flow from the source, while a high impedance draws a little. Speakers with a low impedance are more difficult for an amplifier to drive.

L

LINE LEVEL Describes inputs to amplifiers that don't need amplifying before the amplifier can use them.
LCD Liquid Crystal Display. Found in both compact projectors and, increasingly, flatscreen televisions.

IN DEPTH | LCD SCREENS

LIQUID CRYSTAL DISPLAY screens are the supermodels of the TV world: they're slim and attractive but underneath all that desirable bodywork there are pitfalls you should be aware of. There's no doubt that LCD technology is improving rapidly but the majority of designs are still guilty of producing a grainy, soft picture. The problem is down to the way LCD screens work. They are made using layers of polarized glass, between which liquid crystals are pushed. An electrical charge is then applied to the liquid crystals and a backlight shines through these layers to produce an image. This method of light reproduction, which is 'transmissive' rather than 'emissive', is why many LCD sets suffer from poor contrast and image persistence. However, it's not all bad: LCD sets are getting better extremely quickly and the technology offers many other benefits: they consume 30 percent less power, don't suffer from any image flicker and the picture is never distorted. Most important, they are extremely light and so very easy to mount on walls and suspend from ceilings.

M

MIDBAND The frequency range where most of the instruments and voices are heard. It must be of a high quality if singers, guitars, trumpets etc are to sound natural.
MINIDISC Sony's 64mm magneto-optical disc format. Re-recordable and easy to edit.
MONOBLOC An independent mono power amplifier – so two monoblocs are required to run in a stereo system.
MOVING COIL Cartridge design in which a stylus is connected to coils that move in relation to fixed magnets, therefore creating electrical signals. Has lower output than moving-magnet cartridge design.
MOVING MAGNET Cartridge design in which a very small magnet connected to the stylus moves relative to a fixed coil in the body, therefore generating the signal.
MP3 MPEG 1, layer 3. The compression system used for downloading music files from the internet to a PC or MP3 recording device. It reduces file sizes by a factor of 12 to enable much faster downloads.

N

NICAM CD-quality digital stereo sound transmitted alongside the picture during terrestrial TV broadcasts. Your TV needs to be Nicam to receive a stereo signal.

O

OHM Unit of resistance to current. Impedance of a speaker is measured in ohms – the lower the figure the harder it is to drive.

P

PHONO STAGE Cartridges output signals at much lower levels than CD players. Many amps have the extra amplification built-in, but increasing numbers don't, and require an add-on phono amp.
PLASMA Currently the dominant type of large, flat TV. Plasmas use neon/xenon gas sandwiched between two thin plates of glass. Electrical impulses are passed through the gas at specific points as required. This causes the gas to react, which creates a 'pixel'. There are more than a million pixels in a plasma TV.
PMPO Stands for peak music power, used on gear like mini systems and ghetto-blasters to make them look more powerful.
POWER AMPLIFIER Supplies audio signals from the source component to the loudspeakers.
POWER HANDLING The highest safe power for speakers. But it's easier to damage speakers with an amp of too low power driven hard, than with too much power.
PREAMPLIFIER The control part of an amp. Built into integrated amps, but can be separate and used with a power amp or active loudspeakers.
PRO-LOGIC see Dolby.
PROGRESSIVE SCAN Technology that creates DVD pictures in one hit. Gives clearer, flicker-free images than the conventional system, which uses interlaced, rapidly refreshed horizontal lines. Now available for both US and UK DVDs.

R

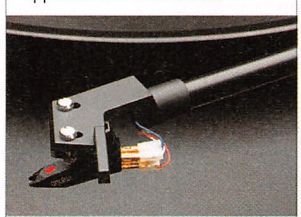
RDS Radio Data System: data piggybacked on FM radio allowing RDS tuners to display the names of stations, and perform a wide range of station-seek and switching functions.

S

SAMPLING RATE How fast a digital recorder or player samples a signal. CD and MiniDisc use a rate of 44.1KHz – ie 44,100 samples per second – while DAT recorders offer a choice of 48KHz or 44.1KHz, and Digital Audio Broadcasting works on 32KHz.
SIGNAL-TO-NOISE RATIO The difference between the level of the audio signal and the level of unwanted noise present in that signal. The larger the figure, which is measured in dB, the lower the noise in the signal.
SIX-CHANNEL INPUT Many DVD players now have built-in Dolby Digital decoders. To take advantage of these they need to be connected to a home cinema amp with a six-channel input.
SUBWOOFER A separate woofer box to produce the deep lows.
SUPER AUDIO CD (SACD) Developed by Sony and Philips, SACD uses one-bit Direct Stream Digital (DSD) technology. Most discs are dual layer, with a CD layer that will play on a normal CD player and an SACD layer for better performance when replayed on an SACD machine.

T

TAPE LOOP Two sockets on an amp letting the signal out for tape-deck recording; another pair to let the signal back in for replay.
THX Developed by LucasFilm: a set of standards for Dolby Pro-Logic gear that should ensure a certain quality of home cinema sound. Needs kit made to exacting specifications.
THX SURROUND EX Decoding system for Dolby Digital Surround EX software. Mode can also be applied to DTS-ES software.



TONEARM The device on a turntable that holds the cartridge in place.

TOROIDAL TRANSFORMER Transformers bring mains voltages down to the levels required. Toroidal transformers (doughnut-shaped) get better stability and less flux leakage (magnetic radiation that can interfere with other circuits).
TRANSIENTS Short and sudden events in music such as a cymbal crash or the crack of a stick on a snare drum. Transients are difficult to reproduce.
TREBLE High frequencies. When we say treble is splashy, it means that cymbals, for example, sound like they're going 'tizzshsh', rather than having a sting and a crispness to them.
TRIAMPING/TRIWIRING Like biamping and biwiring, but for three-way speakers. Needs three runs of cable in the case of triwiring and three stereo amps if you want to triamp the speakers.
TWEETER The small speaker driver that handles treble frequencies.

VALVE Amplifying device: electrodes in a glass vacuum enclosure. Produces a warm, seductive sound.

W

WATT Unit of power. More watts mean more power, but how loud a system sounds also depends on speaker sensitivity and room size. See PMPO.
WAVELENGTH The length of a soundwave. For example, sound at 50Hz in air has a wavelength of around 6.9 metres.
WIDESCREEN More and more TV programmes, and nearly all DVD discs, are shown in widescreen format. This can vary from 14:9 (a compromise ratio used by TV broadcasters) to 16:9, which is the ratio used on widescreen TV sets and most DVDs. Many films shown at the cinema are in 21:9, so you'll still get black bars on a widescreen television. Ordinary 'square' TVs are 4:3.
WOOFER The large drive unit in a speaker that produces the bass frequencies.

Hot newcomer

Arcam CD73T £400

A brilliant performer. This Arcam keeps the spectacular dynamism of its predecessor – the similar looking CD72T – but offers a good deal more refinement. Excellent timing, brilliant detail resolution and a simple upgrade path provide the icing on the cake.

Philips 28W9618 £1200

This 28in surround-sound widescreen set comes with integrated front left, right and centre speakers, plus two wireless rears. The sound's great but the picture's breathtaking: there's fluid movement across the screen and superb contrast leads to brilliant three-dimensionality.

Hot newcomer

Merlin Chopin £85

A great addition to any midpriced system: it allows a punchy, clean presentation with impressive detail in the higher frequencies. And like others in the Merlin range, this interconnect has a radio frequency interference filter.

Yamaha DPX-100 £8000

Despite its behemoth size, this projector is surprisingly easy to install due to its motorised lens modes. And once set up, you won't be able to stop using it: it gives a rich, full image that's full of colour and deep blacks.

Hi-fi best buys

Here's the kit that's currently top of our favourites list in three price categories. Every month we'll update the list as new rivals enter the market and take on the top contenders in our group tests

	BUDGET	MIDRANGE	HIGH-END
CD players Full product listings p151	NAD C521BEE £200 Even better value than the C521i: zinging delivery, firm bass, top build.	 Arcam CD73T £400 The revised CD72T has jaw-dropping dynamism, refinement and timing.	Copland CDA822 £1598 It may look mundane, but the Copland sounds exquisite – a brilliant player.
Recorders Full product listings p153	Yamaha KX-580SE £250 Best Buy cassette deck in the Awards 2002. Great for replay and recording.	Sony RCD-W3 £250 Great performance from a machine that's easy to use. A real bargain.	Yamaha CDR-HD1300E £600 Combines CD and hard-disk playback/ recording – easy to use and sounds great.
Turntables Full product listings p155	Pro-ject 1 Xpression £210 Exceptional all-round performance – remarkable sound for the price.	Audio Note TT1 £725 Affordable, well-built and sounds excellent. Product of the Year 2003.	 Michell Gyrodec SE £1058 The Gyrodec has been around for ages, but few rivals get near its style or sound.
Tuners Full product listings p157	Denon TU-260LMkII £130 An excellent-value analogue tuner, and a Best Buy in the Awards 2003.	Pure DRX-702ES £330 A top-quality digital and FM/AM radio at a sensible price. A great choice.	TAG McLaren T32R £2290 State-of-the-art digital radio offering DAB, FM, MW and LW tuners.
Integrated amps/receivers Full product listings p159	Rotel RA-01 £250 Based on the Award-winning RA-02, but £100 less, this amp is a cracker.	Roksan Kandy MkIII £550 Best Buy Award. The latest update of the sweet-sounding Kandy is a treat.	AVI Laboratory Series £1500 This is one of the best amps below £2000. Digs deeper than competitors.
Preamps Full product listings p161	Creek OBH-12 £199 A purist preamp, designed for use in simple set-ups, but it works a treat.	Cyrus Pre X £1000 Flexible and well-equipped with great detail resolution and speed.	Krell KRC-3 £3490 The preamp we use in our hi-fi reference system with the FPB400CX power amp.

Power amplifiers Full product listings p164	Cyrus SmartPower £550 Best Buy in 2001. The perfect partner for Cyrus's Pre aCA7.5 preamp.	 Quad 909 £900 A detailed, powerful amplifier with an exceptional depth of talent.	Krell FPB400CX £11,997 Replacement for the FPB300C, and sounds even better than the original.
Speakers Full product listings p166	Monitor Audio Bronze B2 £200 Class-leading detail and exceptional integration. Top value for money.	Quad 11L £379 Product of the Year 2003. Sensational sound and finish for the money.	PMC OB1 £2450 Awesome bass combined with a sweet, precise treble and full, rich midband.
	MINI	MICRO	STYLE
Systems Full product listings p199	Sharp XL-HP700H £180 Great system with CD, radio and tape. Fun and full sound at a great price.	Denon D-M31 £300 The replacement for our 2002 Product of the Year is great with CD and radio.	Linn Classik £1280 Great looks, build and sonic talent from this one-box CD player/tuner combo.

Other recommended kit...

SACD players

Sony SCD-XA333ES £1300
Multichannel SACD capability gives enhanced sound quality, but it's good with conventional CDs, too.

Philips 963SA £400
Good with standard discs but better with SACD – lots of drive and depth.

Phono amps

Pro-ject Phono Box £40
Exceptional – brings out the very best in sub-£300 turntables.

Speaker cables

QED Silver Anniversary £5/m
Our Product of the Year 2003 offers an amazing sonic performance.

QED XT400 £20/m (single-wire)
Best Buy 2003. Exceptional detail resolution and even tonal balance.

Personals and portables

Apple iPod £300
Product of the Year 2003. This utterly gorgeous digital jukebox is simple to use and produces a controlled, detailed sound. You'll find it hard to resist!

Sony MZ-N10 £280
Best Buy 2003. Superb MiniDisc recorder that can handle MP3 and WMA music files. A brilliant, easy way to enjoy MiniDiscs and MP3s on the move.

Headphones

Sennheiser PX100 £30
Best Buy 2003. Practical and lightweight folding headphones with a detailed sound. A real bargain.

Grado SR60 £90
An exceptional sub-£100 headphone option.

Speaker stands

Partington Super Dreadnought £140
Product of the Year 2003. Partington uses an industrial-style design to great effect yet again. This stand will give your system a real sonic boost.

Partington's awesome Super Dreadnought; Atlas's superb Equator

Interconnects

Atlas Equator £40
Best Buy 2003. Highly impressive, offering fabulous insight.

Merlin Chopin £85
Allows a punchy, crisp sound. Comes with a radio-interference filter.

For a great pair of cans with an amazing sound, look no further than Grado's SR60 – yours for £90

KEY | Sampling rate converter Both CD-R/RW and MiniDisc decks record at the same sampling frequency as CD, ie 44.1KHz. Here we indicate if there's a sampling rate converter for use with other digital sources, such as digital radio tuners. Format What kind of recorder is it? Currently the mainstream choice is between MiniDisc (MD), CD-Recordable (CD-R) and CD-Rewritable (CD-RW). Expect to see more machines also offering Hard Disc recording (HD), or a HD/CD-RW mix in the near future. Inputs/outputs A digital input allows sources such as CD to be recorded, output delivers digital data to a D/A converter or digital recorder. Line inputs are for analogue sources. O = optical, C = coaxial: L=line

Yamaha KX-580SE	250	★★★★★	Aug 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Quality copies and good sound.	1	2	B/C/S/HXPro	Auto	Yes

KEY | Decks How many decks does the machine have? There are some single-deck recorders, but twin-decks are very popular. Heads The minimum for any recorder is two: one to erase the tape, the other to record, but three-head decks allow recordings to be monitored as they are made. Dolby What kind of noise reduction is there? Dolby B and the more advanced Dolby C are usual, while Dolby S gives enhanced hiss reduction and better sound. Calibration/Fine Bias The calibration system (usually automated) found on some decks dials in the deck to the tape in use. Fine bias allows the treble to be adjusted.

KEY | Speeds 33⅓rpm for LPs, 45rpm for singles. A few offer 78rpm but very old discs are best played with a dedicated cartridge. Operation Automatic and semi-automatic turntables lift the arm on reaching the end of a record, but sound quality suffers. The best-sounding turntables are manual. Arm Is there one, or is it just a motor unit? Cartridge Is one provided as part of the package? Drive How is the platter driven? Belt drive offers the best isolation from motor noise.

KEY | Type Modern hi-fi tuners offer stereo reception either on FM analogue (A) or digital radio, also known as DAB (D). Some even offer both modes of reception. Bands D = digital radio/DAb, FM = rM stereo, MW = medium wave, LW = long wave. Presets How many memory positions are available to store favourite stations? Less important with digital radio, due to the way the broadcasts are received and accessed. RDS The Radio Data System, transmitted with FM analogue broadcasts, allows a range of extra facilities including Radiotext, station-naming and automatic retuning.

Arcam DiVA A65 Plus	370	★★★★½	Jul 03	Still a fine buy, even if it doesn't dominate the budget market as it once did.	A	40	4	m	1	2	Yes	Yes	Yes
Ariston AX-910	80	★★★★½	Jul 98	As a rocker this amp is undefeated under £100. It mixes real guts with subtlety.	A	30	4	Opt	1	1	Yes	No	No
Audio Analogue Puccini	495	★★★★½	Sep 99	Classy amp, with warm, generous sound and for some its Latin refinement will be alluring.	A	40	5	m/c	1	1	No	No	No
Cambridge Audio A1 Mk3 SE	120	★★★★½	Jul 99	Built to a high standard and well-balanced, but you can buy better for not much more.	A	30	4	Opt	1	1	Yes	No	No
Cambridge Audio A5	120	★★★★★	Jul 01	Best Buy in Awards 2001. Rich and powerful, combining weight and insight	A	60	5	No	1	1	No	Yes	No
Cambridge Audio A500	200	★★★★½	Jul 03	So nearly a bargain, but it can sound harsh and overbright - not quite a true all-rounder.	A	65	4	m	1	2	Yes	No	Yes
Denon PMA-255UK	140	★★★★½	Feb 02	An exciting amp for your money, but care is needed with system-matching.	A	30	4	No	1	1	Yes	Yes	No
Denon DRA-455	200	★★★★★	Aug 01	Good value and best of all, it sounds great. Even the phono stage sounds acceptable.	R	52	2	m	1	2	Yes	Yes	Yes
Denon PMA-355UK	230	★★★½☆	Dec 02	Had a good run but this UK-tuned version has met its match with the latest sub £300 amps	A	50	3	m	2	2	Yes	Yes	Yes
Harman-Kardon HK670	300	★★★★½	Apr 03	Good, powerful and well-thought-out amp, but it faces tough competition.	A	75	5	m	2	2	Yes	Yes	Yes

Unison Research S.8	3100	★★★★☆	Jul 00	Fabulous with vocals - this amp puts refinement ahead of sonic fireworks.	A	24	4	No	1	2	No	No	Yes

KEY | Type Is it a standard integrated amplifier (A), or does it have a built-in tuner, making it a receiver (R)? Power The maximum output per channel, quoted in Watts. More power doesn't make a better amp, but it can help! Line level inputs For CD players, tuners and the like. Phono stage Allows a turntable to be connected. Come in moving coil (c) or moving magnet (m) flavours, or are even switchable between the two. Opt = Optional. Tape loops In/out sockets for recording/playback. Speakers How many pairs can it drive? Tone controls Well, you might need them one day... Headphone Has it got a headphone socket?

KEY | Type M = Mono, S = Stereo. Power The maximum output per channel, quoted in Watts. More power doesn't make a better amp, but it can help! Speakers How many pairs can it drive? Bridgeable Some stereo power amplifiers can be converted into more powerful mono amps, to which you can add a second 'bridged' amp for a more powerful performance. Typically the power increase is around 3x, so a 60W per channel stereo amplifier becomes a 180W mono model. Only amps specifically designed for bridging can be used like this – check with a dealer if in doubt .

Product NEWS

PIONEER TAKES PLASMA TO ANOTHER LEVEL WITH HIGH DEFINITION PROCESSING

The PDP-434HDE is the new PureVision plasma television from Pioneer.

Featuring Pioneer's new Pure Drive processing which Pioneer claim, 'provides high-definition images from any source' and the home gallery feature, which allows you to insert a memory card and view JPEG stills.

Other key features include the Pure Colour Filter II and Super Clear Drive, for better colour reproduction and to make blacks look darker, plus MPEG noise reduction.

Connections include HDMI and DVI sockets.

The advanced PDP-R04E multimedia receiver extends the connectivity and viewing options to include analogue TV programme reception, digital noise reduction, subwoofer output, headphone socket and newly developed Teletext.

"Well, with the exception of the alderwood-veneer finish, these floorstanders look identical to the standard model, although there's a new tweeter and crossover design. One of the advantages of the three-way configuration is that each driver deals with only a narrow section of the frequency range, and the designers optimise each unit to perform its respective task. Mission's engineers have excelled in this area: these elegant floorstanders sound beautifully balanced and few rivals under £1000 can match their wonderful levels of clarity. The 'special edition' tag is overused but these talented floorstanders are bona fide sonic stars."

LCD PROJECTOR £1099.95

"...And the image? It's surprisingly good: in fact, the best we've seen from an LCD in this price category. There's genuine depth of field and contrast to the image, due in part to the Sanyo's decent black level... Things improve still more if you connect a progressive-scan source. With Goldmember in the DVD tray, the Sanyo relays the complex colours of Austin Powers' pad with ease, and handles the movements of the helicopter gunship in the opening scene superbly.

Add a choice of silver/blue or silver/grey and that modest price tag, and you're looking at an affordable projector that - for once - actually delivers on its promise. At £1500, there's no doubt that the Sanyo is something of a steal."

"Here we have what is - by some margin - the least-expensive combination in this test, although you wouldn't guess the price to look at the duo. Not only does the Rotel two-box look all the money, it's well equipped, delivers plenty of power... But there's no sign whatsoever of the bargain price in the performance - whether with music in stereo, surround soundtracks or SACDs, the Rotel sounds powerful, refined and exciting... Arcam has been at the forefront of designing home cinema since 1996 and has established an international reputation for audio excellence. This this highly specified combination has been described as "Arcam's best ever product to date."

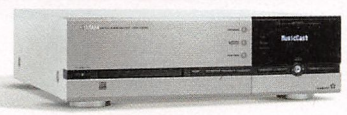
The ultra-flexible AV8 Pre-amp Processor is among the first processors to have THX Ultra II certification for music and movie post processing. According to Arcam, the partnering P7 Power Amplifier is a 'true audiophile powerhouse' delivering over a kilowatt of power from seven channels each THX-Ultra rated at 150 watts.

The AV8/P7 combination has been awarded 'Editor's Choice' by Hi-Fi Choice magazine - being described as "A fantastic achievement - an AV processor par excellence." - while What Hi-Fi? Sound and Vision (★★★★★ May 2003) concludes, "Simply, the Arcam is stunning."

MUSIC ALL AROUND THE HOME

Introducing YAMAHA'S Innovative MusicCAST Wireless System

MCX-1000 'DIGITAL SERVER' ▸



Are you interested in having music in every room in your house without the wires normally associated with a multi-room system? Then you will be delighted with Yamaha's MusicCAST - a client/server system that can distribute multisource audio wirelessly around your home.

Featuring an 80GB hard-disk, the MusicCAST can store up to 1000 hours of music in MP3 format or 100 hours of CD quality PCM stereo. Copying music to the hard-disk takes around 3 minutes per CD. Once recorded music can be played back in PCM quality from the central server and one client unit in another room, and in MP3 quality to an additional six clients. The whole system can send different music to each of the clients and allows you to create playlists for different rooms.

WHO ARE SEVENOAKS?

Founded in 1972, Sevenoaks Sound & Vision is one of the largest and most successful hi-fi and home cinema retailers in the country.

Each Sevenoaks Sound & Vision outlet stocks a wide range of quality products, covering all categories of specialist home entertainment, from Hi-Fi separates and systems to DVD players, widescreen plasma televisions and projection systems, all at highly competitive prices.

Friendly staff are available in all stores to advise, demonstrate and guide you through the home entertainment jungle.

NEW OUTLETS

We are pleased to announce the Weybridge store is now open and the store in Staines is due to open 18th October. We will also be opening in Ealing (North London) - Subject to legal completion.

CUSTOM INSTALLATION

Sevenoaks Sound & Vision's Custom Installation Service enables the integration of a home cinema or hi-fi system into your home as neatly and seamlessly as possible. All electronics can be hidden away, speakers discreetly mounted either in the wall or ceiling and the complete system operated via remote control.

Our installation experts are fully trained to the highest standards in all areas and provide a prompt, reliable and professional service. Whether you're looking for a multi-room system, a dedicated home cinema installation with a retractable screen and built-in speakers or an integrated control or lighting system, Sevenoaks Sound & Vision has a diverse range of products available to cater for all your requirements.

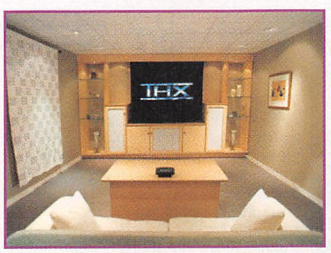
SEVENOAKS WEBSITE

The Sevenoaks Sound & Vision website has news and information on the Sevenoaks group and its outlets.

There are regularly updated special offer and stock clearance lists with hundreds of products available and detailed pages to help you locate your nearest outlet. To find out more, click on www.sevenoakssoundandvision.co.uk

DEMONSTRATION FACILITIES

Our comfortable demonstration rooms are among the finest in the country, many complying with full THX specifications.



STOCK CLEARANCE

With 49 outlets nationwide, the Sevenoaks Sound & Vision group stock and display a wide range of products. As models and product ranges are changed or superseded, the preceding models are made available at a reduced price, for clearance. Visit our Website for an up-to-date list of the clearance stock.

PRICING POLICY

Whilst we do not claim always to be the cheapest, we try to ensure our prices are highly competitive. Take into account the expert advice, unrivalled product selection, demonstration facilities and excellent pre, during and after sales service and the lower price might not look such good value.

In the event you can find the same products and excellent service at a lower price, please bring it to our store managers' attention. We will always endeavour to offer you the best deal.

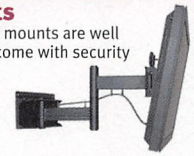
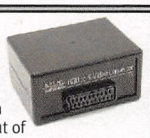
Plasma screen wall mounts



These high quality Plasma screen wall mounts are well constructed, safe, easy to install and come with security bolts. Static wall mount pattern [BT782] £99.99 Tilting wall mount pattern [BT783] £149.99 Swing arm style (pictured) [BT781] £449.99. Just add a mounting plate for your model Plasma (most models from £119.99) to solve the fixing problem! Call for more details or check www.keene.co.uk

RGB to S-Video convertor



RGB is a great for sending video, with picture resolution as good as S- and much better than composite video. Trouble is, not everything can accept an RGB signal. Problem solved! This box converts the RGB scart output of Sky Digital/ITV Digital boxes, and DVD players, into S-video. Ideal for making high resolution connections to AV amps, S-VHS/D-VHS recorders and plasma screens. Order [RGB2S] £59.99

Sound level meter with digital display

How well set up is your home cinema? How low does your subwoofer go? Find out for sure, with the accuracy you need, using this digital sound level meter. Great value, it features built in mic, 7 selectable frequency ranges, weighting selector, adjustable sensitivity from 50 to 126dB, FAST & SLOW response settings, tripod adaptor for stand mounting, and more. Phono output for connection to external equipment. 21-bar graphical display. Power: PP3 type 9V battery (not included). [SLM2055] £39.99

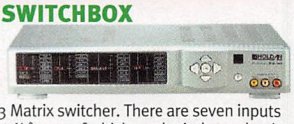
RGB to component video transcoder

Another Keene original, the RGB2C will convert an RGB input to a Y Pb Pr component output, or, at the push of a switch, component input to RGB output. Caters for sync on green or composite sync input, and provides sync on green or composite sync output. LED indicators provide useful information on the type of signals present and the process being performed. Designed to fit in-line with the signal path, has SCART input and output connectors for easy installation. Supplied complete with UK mains adaptor and scart to 3 phono adaptor. What Video and TV "Best Buy" [RGB2C] £89.99
Also available c/w choice of 2m output cable (phono, 15pin HD or BNC) £114.99

Network MP3 player

Enjoy listening to MP3 music on your computer? Ever thought it would be nice to be able to listen to it elsewhere but don't want a computer in every room? SLIMP3 is an MP3 player that streams your music from your computer to your home stereo over your network giving lightning-fast access to any song in your collection, from any room with no limit to the size of your music library. It really is incredibly easy it is to set up and use, just install the server software (Mac, Windows or Linux) and plug the player into your CAT5 network. The player will auto configure itself and you'll be playing music within minutes. It has a very user-friendly interface that allows you to quickly browse through your music collection or enjoy internet radio (broadband required). Supports m3u playlists and can display ID3 tags on a two line scrolling display. Absolutely brilliant! [SLIMP3] £209.00

HSR1000 SCART SWITCHBOX



An advanced scart switchbox with some interesting features, the HSR1000 is effectively a Home Cinema friendly 7x3 Matrix switcher. There are seven inputs in total (six scart plus front AV), any of which can be independently routed to one of four outputs (three AV, one audio only). For example you could have your DVD player routed to a TV, your satellite routed to a VCR, your Freeview box routed to your Video sender and another input routed to your Hi-Fi! Four of the input scarts support RGB, one is composite only and one is composite or s-video. Also supports digital audio (SPDIF) on three of the inputs. Switching is auto or manual (via the front panel or with the IR remote incl). All in all, pretty amazing! [HSR1000] £95.00

UK standard delivery (Royal Mail 2nd Class post) £2.50 per order. 1st Class post £4.50 per order, next working day delivery (UK mainland only, remote areas may take longer) £8.00 per order. Overseas and export deliveries by airmail charged at cost.

LOW COST AV/DV CONVERTOR

A low cost tool for capturing analogue footage with a DV card, providing seamless conversion between composite, s- video and DV. Convert either way, eg capture VHS footage using your DV card, or feed your DV camcorder into an analogue device. Based upon the tried and tested innards of the DataVideo DAC2 with just the RGB terminals stripped off, this is a great addition to any DV editing set-up. Includes UK mains adaptor, FireWire cable 6-pin/4-pin, 3 phono/3 phono cable, s-video cable. [DAC100] £195.00

Scart Commander 4:1 scart switchbox

A high quality AV switcher from Keene, designed to allow connection of multiple sources to one display, all via scart connections. With 4 video, 2 audio, 2 data and 2 control channels it can handle component, composite, s-, and RGB video, even digital audio (with the correctly configured cable). Input selection manual (by IR remote, included, or push button) or automatically via signal detect. Use a single Scart Commander for four inputs to one output switching, or two units in a master/slave arrangement to provide 7:1 switching. Visual LED indication of selected output. Programmable default on power up settings. Separate mains adaptor for improved mains isolation. Solid metal case for enhanced screening. What Video 'Best Buy' March 2003
Order [KSC] £149.99 Twin pack (7:1 switching) [KSCT] £249.99

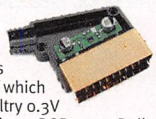
Keene SyncBlaster RGB cables



Use SyncBlaster cables to connect RGB scart equipment directly to projectors, plasma screens and LCD screens*, most of which struggle to work on the paltry 0.3V sync provided from an ordinary RGB scart. Built in to the scart connecting plug of SyncBlaster cables is a fully functional sync separator and amplifier which can draw its power directly from the scart socket (pin 8) so for most applications there's no power supply to worry about either!

	Length	Code	Price
SyncBlaster scart to 15 pin HD (SVGA) plug	1.5m	SGB12	£69.99

Not suitable for use with monitors designed solely for computer use (screen must support a horizontal scan rate of 15.625kHz. Most projectors, plasma and LCD panels do, most CRT monitors don't)*

RF THROUGH MODULATORS

Wideband RF Through Modulator
Display AV signals on a TV. When installed in-line with aerial in and out connections, the AV signal can be put on to any UHF TV channel from 21–69. Ideal for use with CCTV security cameras, VCRs without RF output etc. PAL I/G switchable with test signal. Order [KRFTW] £49.99
RF Through Modulator tunable channels 30–40, [KRFT] £34.99

Mini wireless spy cameras

Complete kit including colour camera (pictured) and receiver just £79.99 [KC802]. Other models available, please give us a call or check www.keene.co.uk

PSC200 professional progressive scan convertor

TV, DVD, tapes, and other interlaced sources look good on CRT displays, but often not so good when viewed on larger, higher resolution displays in applications such as home theatre, HDTV upscaling, projector presentations, etc., because the display's built in scaling circuitry may be basic and optimised for computer video input only. In such cases, an external progressive scan converter will bring the source one step closer to the optimum picture quality. The PSC200 is an advanced progressive scan converter that accepts composite, S- or YCbCr component video input from any PAL/NTSC video source and scales it up to 1280x1024 (SXGA) and 720p (HDTV) resolutions, providing RGB or YCbCr component video output. Supplied complete with UK mains power adaptor, leads, remote control and full instructions. [PSC200] £325.00
If your source device gives out an RGB signal, you need an RGB to component video convertor to provide a correct input signal for the BriteView. Save nearly £30 on our bundle deal of the PSC200 plus the Keene RGB2C convertor [PSCKIT] just £385.00

STERLING CABLES Gold

PROGRESSIVE SCAN TV CONVERTOR

Turn any LCD monitor into a TV

Really useful, this silver coloured video switchbox can line double (output to SVGA) and has a built in terrestrial (analogue) TV tuner. Turn your video projector, CRT, LCD or plasma display into a true multimedia centre – use the PV105 to link it to a DVD player, VCR, camcorder, games console or satellite receiver, or to watch TV on it. No PC required. Incorporates a line doubler to increase brightness and reduce flicker with 480p line resolution output at 31.5kHz on a VGA or LCD monitor. Inputs: RF (satellite or cable), S-video, composite video, VGA (15 pin D type connector), stereo audio. Outputs supported: VGA (640x480), SVGA (800x600) and XGA (1024x768) via 15 pin D type connector. IR remote, UK mains adaptor included [PV105] £109.00
NEW Plus model with all features as above plus Nicam stereo, Teletext and channel re-order [PROVP] £149.00

Remote controls

We are main stockists for Marantz and Philips Pronto remotes – call or visit www.keene.co.uk for details.

Intelligent mains panel

Simply plug your PC into the master socket and then use the five remaining sockets for your monitor, printer, modem etc. in fact anything you would normally switch on and off at the same time as your computer. When the mains panel detects the PC has been switched off (or gone to sleep) it automatically switches off all the other outlets. When the PC is switched on again (or wakes from sleep) the peripherals are powered again. A brilliant device that saves time and money! Can also be used with AV amplifiers to give one click power control for CD player, DVD player, Tuner, Sub-woofer, games console, etc. [IMPCA] £24.99

It's back by popular demand. For one day only we're clearing a huge selection of open box products at rock bottom prices.

We've learnt a lot from the first sale, so this time you'll have an even larger selection of products with bigger discounts. Umbrellas will be handed out if the weather decides to be unkind, hot refreshments will be served and we will be doing our utmost to make your wait as short and enjoyable as possible! We look forward to seeing you there!

(OPEN BOX = ex-display, mail order returns or ex-service products, thoroughly tested and re-sold with a FULL AS-NEW GUARANTEE.)

If you're not too fussed about the odd mark or missing accessory, these items represent incredible value for money and are priced accordingly to clear! So don't miss out on these never to be repeated offers!

WE'LL BEAT ANY COMPETITOR'S PRICE 'TIL IT HURTS!

We'll match any price and give you:

- Product up to £375 ..... £10
- Product from £375 to £1000 ... £25
- Product from £1000 to £3000 ..... £50
- Product over £3000 ..... £100

It is impossible to be 100% certain that we've the lowest in-store prices on absolutely everything we sell even though we have people permanently watching the competition.

We are certain, however, that if you 'phone around and it does exist at any competitor's store or on the web*, call us last and we'll cheerfully beat any lower price by up to £100 any time up to 7 days after purchase!

All we ask is that the hi-fi separates you're interested in are brand new and in stock at any local authorised dealer.

FREE VOUCHERS, GIFTS, CDs, CABLES & STANDS?

If anyone else is offering money off vouchers/discounts and free gifts/goods as part of the deal simply bring us their advert/voucher, we will not only honour this, but also beat their price likewise, by up to £100!!

AND GIVE YOU UP TO £100

WE ARE AUTHORISED DEALERS FOR EVERY PRODUCT WE SELL

and will even match any unauthorised dealers' price and offer full back-up on the product.

IMPORTANT NOTICE! Please note, our Price Beat is valid against all competitors' prices including on the web.

YOU'RE ALWAYS PROTECTED WITH RICHER SOUNDS' "1-2" SATISFACTION GUARANTEE

1 - Lowest Price Guarantee
If, at any time within 7 days of your purchase from us, you find the identical item in stock and advertised at a lower price, we will fully protect you. Just bring in the ad, along with your receipt, and, once verified, we'll gladly refund the difference and give you up to £100! (see page 1 for further details).

2 - Satisfaction Guarantee
If you're not satisfied, neither are we. If, for any reason, you're not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it in its original condition within 14 days for an exchange. It's that simple. Just bring it back to any Richer Sounds store, along with your receipt, manual and all original packaging.

WE WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD!

YOU CAN FIND US HERE!

RING OUR CALL CENTRE FOR A GUIDE TO STOCK AVAILABILITY

Due to variations in store sizes and our massive sales, inevitably stores occasionally run out of key lines. If you experience ANY problems getting hold of a particular item at your local branch, please call our General Stock Enquiry Line on:

0870 366 1296 (NATIONAL RATE)

who will try their best to locate the stock for you.

FOR ANY OTHER INFORMATION PLEASE CALL OUR CUSTOMER SERVICE CALL CENTRE ON:

0870 900 1000 OR FAX 0870 900 1881 (NATIONAL RATE)

OR EMAIL: customerservices@richersounds.com

Calls will be answered in person 10-6pm Mon-Fri, 10-5pm Sats, Bank Holidays 12-4pm. Manager: Mark

CORPORATE PURCHASERS

We offer a bulk purchase service for businesses (or other organisations) who are looking to buy our products. We currently supply Oddbins, Carphone Warehouse, Tie Rack and many other corporate accounts from schools to hospitals. We can include delivery and we are happy to arrange account facilities where requested (subject to status). Please call Ricky for further details on:

020 7407 9090 or email: corporatesales@richersounds.com

WE ACCEPT:

Credit Cards (at no extra charge) - (American Express, Style Card, Visa, Mastercard), Switch, Solo and Electron, Bonus bonds and Master bonds, Cheques up to £2000 (at no extra charge) Part Exchange and even Cash. (Euro + Sterling)

PLEASE NOTE We quite frequently hear of our competitors (who are naturally frustrated at our prices) telling customers that the only reason we are so cheap is that our goods are either seconds, returns, stolen, secondhand etc... This is utter nonsense and simply sour grapes on their part - they must be desperate! If it were true it would be both illegal and hardly good customer relations, something we assure you we take very seriously.
A few of the products we sell are exclusive to us but this is only for proven product where we are able to purchase huge quantities, often direct from the factory, cutting out other retailers and the distributors' profit margin, thereby saving you typically 33%.
All stock is BRAND NEW IN SEALED CARTONS and full guaranteed for one year unless clearly stated otherwise. We are unable to guarantee that multi-region machines will play all future disc releases. Further upgrade may be required.

TSP* = Typical Selling Price
TSPs are based on information supplied by: WHAT HI-FI?, Manufacturer, Hi-Fi Choice, Home Cinema Choice, T3, What Video, What DVD, Home Entertainment, Total DVD, WHAT HI-FI? 'Stereo on the go' supplement & DVD Buyer. Further information available on request.

GRADED products refer to ex-display, mail order returns or ex-service products, thoroughly tested and re-sold with a full as new guarantee. Due to the varying sizes of our stores, not all goods may be stocked in all branches. Please call first if making a special journey. All stores have a clearance corner full of ex-demo / service and secondhand bargains and browsers are definitely welcome.

OSP denotes the original selling price.

IF WE HAVEN'T GOT IT - WE'RE SORRY Some of these offers are end-of-line clearouts and therefore by definition finite in supply the answer is don't delay!

"NAD amps are solidly engineered. This is a 60w per channel amp with a pretty hefty output stage, making it capable of 135w a side into 4ohms and 240w into 2ohms. The result is a sound that's extremely big, rich and effortless, but at the same time manages to maintain high levels of detail and information. The NAD amp offers a good combination of specification, doing more in every respect than you'd expect from its £340 price. We like it." What Hi-Fi? Sound&Vision Sep 02

"There's loads of technology packed into the 783s' elegant form. It's a three way design with the low frequency driver side-firing near the base of the speaker. But it's musical performance that counts, and in this respect the 783s hit the spot: they will take all that the amp can throw at them, the result being chest-thumping bass with impressive power. When WHAT HI*FI? Sound and Vision held a Superbest in October 2001 with the KEF Reference Model One-Two against some of the best from B&W, Castle, Dynaudio, Epos, Linn, Mission and ProAc this is what they said:- "There are no bad speakers in this test. Indeed they all prove their worth over lower-priced designs in the £500-£600 bracket. Its only the quality of the competition here that stops them rating higher. The KEF One-Two's are consistently strong right across the board, from build and finish to sonic performance: as all-round performers they merit number one position in this test. These KEF's are deeply impressive; there's nothing to criticise."

"The 105SEs may be one of the most affordable designs in this group but they certainly don't look it; their sturdy cabinets are clothed in a classy real wood veneer and finished to a very high standard. Wired and fired, the AEs prove accomplished performers with an easygoing nature that makes for excellent long-term listenability." What Hi-Fi? Sound&Vision Aug 99

"WHEN WE FIRST tested these speakers back in December they were £900, but now they've been around a while the price has halved. And that means they're fantastic value at £450. The A1's midrange is natural, while a fine grasp of dynamics and solid punch add to their all-round appeal. The sort of balance that works well with all types of music. What Hi-Fi? TAG McLarenAphrodite/Calliope	5290	★★★★★	Sep 00	Style aplenty and performance to match. No other system is built to these standards.	50	1	0	-	Yes	0	Yes	Yes

KEY | Power The power per channel the manufacturer quotes. Bear in mind these figures can tend to be rather 'creative' CD 1 means it's a single-disc player, larger numbers show how many discs can be loaded. DVD Some systems now use a DVD player instead of a CD player, and this trend may grow. MiniDisc/CD-R Does the system have a digital recorder built in? If so, M=MiniDisc, C=CD-R or H=Hard disk built in. Speakers Are they included in the price as shown? Opt means speakers are optional.

"Bargain hunters often head to Ilford for PRC's TVs, DVD Players and Digital Cameras. At a Camcorder bar, you can play with the model before you buy it. Prices often beat the cheapest on the web!" - EVENING STANDARD

"PRC Direct provides a lesson in simplicity and peace of mind that many sites would do well to try and imitate. Put quite simply, this is an ideal place for safe camcorder shopping online."

- WHAT CAMCORDER JANUARY 2003

what the press have to say...

"Bargain hunters often head to Ilford for PRC's TVs, DVD Players and Digital Cameras. At a Camcorder bar, you can play with the model before you buy it. Prices often beat the cheapest on the web!"

- LONDON EVENING STANDARD

"PRC Direct provides a lesson in simplicity and peace of mind that many sites would do well to try and imitate. Put quite simply, this is an ideal place for safe camcorder shopping online."

- WHAT CAMCORDER MAGAZINE JANUARY 2003

Wharfedale DVD-750	180	★★★★★	Oct 00	The player that set the budget DVD ball rolling - terrifically capable for the money.	V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Yamaha DVD-S830	400	★★★★☆	Aug 03	Tested as a system with the RX440RDS but this DVD/Audio player isn't quite a star.	A/V	Yes	Yes	1	Yes	C/O

£401 and over

Arcam DiVA DV88 Plus	1000	★★★★☆	Apr 03	Fine choice if you want a one-box solution for movies and CDs.	V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Arcam DiVA DV89	1300	★★★☆☆	Sep 03	Very nice, but rather expensive, too. Fine DVD-A and CD performance.	A/V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Arcam FMJ DV27A	1900	★★★☆☆	Sep 03	Fine video performance and great CD and DVD-A replay but others do it cheaper.	A/V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Cyrus DVD7+	1000	★★★☆☆	Mar 03	One of the most musical DVD players around - but not the best for DVD use.	V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Cyrus DVD8	1200	★★★★☆	Feb 03	Excellent if music is your first love, but not so outstanding with movies.	V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Denon DVD-1600	500	★★★☆☆	May 02	Solid but not competitive; offers reasonable video performance but it's plodding with CD.	A/V	No	No	2	Yes	Opt
Denon DVD-2800Mk2	750	★★★★★	Apr 03	Superb picture and impressive movie sound and by DVD standards, a fine CD machine.	V	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O
Denon DVD-2900	850	★★★★★	Sep 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Cracking universal player, exceptional in many ways.	A/V/S	No	Yes	1	Yes	C/O

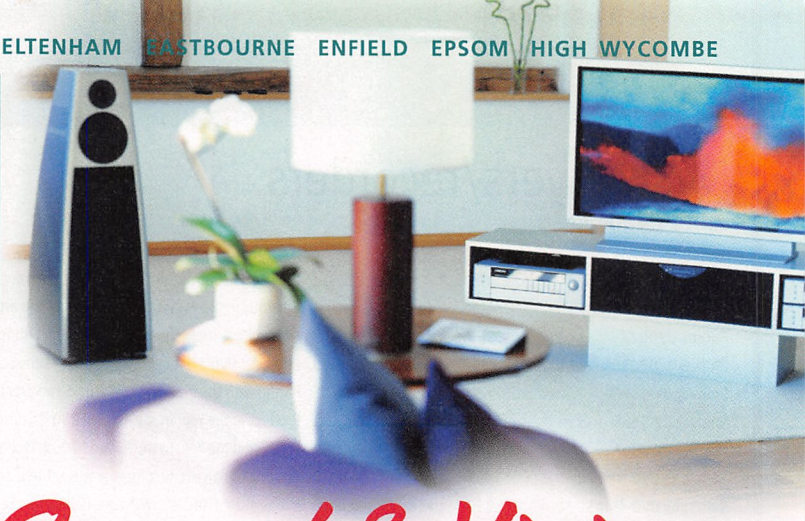
"I am sorry for being a finnicky little pest and taking up so much of your time but it is really appreciated."
Mr Maybury, Tunbridge Wells



Great Value Sound & Vision

NEWS

The stunning new B&W 700 series is now avaliable at the BRENTWOOD, CAMBERLEY, EASTBOURNE, HIGH WYCOMBE and READING stores.

B&W 705

The long awaited Rotel 10 Series DVD-A player the RDV-1060 has finally arrived. Described as, "a an organic player in a field of GM crops" by Hi-Fi News (October 2003) this player is stocked at our CAMBERLEY, BRENTWOOD, BRIGHTON, EASTBOURNE, HIGH WYCOMBE, READING, SWINDON and TUNBRIDGE WELLS stores.

RDV-1060

Rotel's new flagship RSP-1098 processor is also now avaliable and is stocked at the CAMBERLEY, BRENTWOOD, BRIGHTON, EASTBOURNE, HIGH WYCOMBE, READING, SWINDON and TUNBRIDGE WELLS branches.

Our CAMBERLEY store joins PORTSMOUTH, BASINGSTOKE and HIGH WYCOMBE as stockists of Monitor Audio

37 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE
Started in 1966, Audio T is one of the oldest and most respected hi-fi dealers in the world.

THREE YEAR GUARANTEES
We offer a 3 year guarantee on all new hi-fi separates and most systems.

DEMONSTRATION ROOMS
All our shops have comfortable demonstration rooms for Hi-Fi and Home Cinema.

EXCHANGES
If you are not satisfied you can change goods within 10 days (for something of equal or greater value), provided they are returned in perfect condition with all packing and instructions.

UPGRADES
You can also upgrade to something better for up to 30 days, again at no cost penalty, subject to the rules above (excluding special orders).

PART EXCHANGE
We can often take your old, working, equipment off your hands.

MAIL ORDER
We are happy to mail order most products that we sell, only excluding those that require special installation and setting up.

INTEREST FREE OPTION
Available on all sales over £250 (Subject to status. Written details on request).

HOME LOANS
We can arrange for home loans of equipment (subject to status) and home dems (subject to distance).

CUSTOM INSTALLATION
As members of CEDIA we carry out complete installations, from pre-wiring rooms (or homes) to fine tuning the last component.

EVENING DEMONSTRATIONS
All branches are open on Thursday until 8pm.

WEB SITE
You can visit us online at www.audio-t.co.uk where you'll find hundreds of second hand, ex-demonstration or special offer products always listed.

Price Promise

WE KNOW YOU WON'T FIND BETTER SERVICE. WE KNOW YOU WON'T FIND BETTER SOUND. BUT IF YOU FIND A BETTER DEAL FROM ANOTHER AUTHORISED SHOP, LET US KNOW AND AS LONG AS WE CAN VERIFY IT WE'LL BE HAPPY TO MATCH IT.

Arcam DiVA AVR200	800	★★☆☆☆	Jun 03	Sounds good in stereo but it can't compete with more powerful, feature-packed rivals.	70x5	2/D/S	5	4	Yes
Denon AVR-1603	300	★★★★☆	Feb 03	Excellent-value - lots of features and weighty delivery. Loves belting out blockbusters.	70x5	2/D/S	2	4	Yes
Denon AVR-1803	450	★★★★☆	Mar 03	Highly competent in every area and a good spec, too. Just not quite the best in its class.	80x6	2/S/X	5	5	Yes
✪ Denon AVR-2803	650	★★★★★	Awd 03	Product of the Year in the Awards 2003. Terrific upgrade over budget designs.	90x7	2/S/X/E	5	7	Yes
Harman-Kardon AVR 3550	525	★★★☆☆	Mar 03	Fine sound, especially in stereo, but rivals offer a great deal more capability.	65x5	2/D/S	4	4	Yes
Harman-Kardon AVR 4550	800	★★★★☆	Aug 03	The combination of this receiver with the Harman-Kardon DVD25 makes a solid all-rounder.	50x7	2/X/S	5	5	Yes
Marantz SR4400	350	★★★★☆	Oct 03	Fine-sounding and solid in every regard. We'd certainly give it an extended audition.	80x6	2/X/E	4	4	Yes
Marantz SR5400	450	★★★☆☆	Oct 03	Great sound and solid specifications but it doesn't offer much over its junior brother.	80x6	2/X/E	4	5	Yes
NAD T752	600	★★★★☆	Oct 03	Another competent performer from NAD but the competition offers more.	80x5	D/2/E	6	6	Yes
Panasonic SA-XR45	400	★★★★☆	Aug 03	Very impressive with the DVD-S75 - one of the best style-orientated solutions we've seen.	100x6	2/X/E	4	3	Yes
Pioneer VSX-C301-S	250	★★★★★	Oct 03	Paired with the DV-464-S DVD player this slimline system is more than substantial.	50x5	2/D/S	4	4	No
✪ Pioneer VSX-D812	330	★★★★★	Oct 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Astonishing levels of ability in multichannel use.	100x6	2/X/E	4	4	Yes
Pioneer VSX-501	400	★★★★★	Awd 03	Slick-looking, stylish receiver that also delivers a good performance.	75x6	2/X/E	4	4	Yes
Pioneer VSX-D912	500	★★★★☆	Awd 03	Fine receiver but not worth nearly £200 more than the more basic VSX-D812.	100x6	2/X/E	5	4	Yes
Pioneer VSX-AX3	800	★★★★★	Oct 03	Another class-leader - belting all-round performance and fine specification.	100x7	2/X/E	5	5	Yes
Sherwood RVD-6095RDS	249	★★★★★	Awd 99	Spadefuls of home cinema bangs for your buck. Tested as RVD-6090RDS without DTS.	65x5	D/S	2	3	No
Sherwood R-956R	500	★★★☆☆	Jul 01	Competent receiver and offers a lot for your money, but it's a disappointing performer.	140x5	X/E	6	6	Yes
Sony STR-DB790	300	★★★★☆	Oct 03	Brilliant, but not perfect - great surround precision, but it's not as gutsy as we'd like.	100x6	2/X/E	5	5	Yes
Sony STR-DB1080	500	★★★★★	Mar 03	Hugely appealing - very flexible, equipped to an excellent standard and sounds brilliant.	100x6	D/E/X	4	5	Yes
Sony STR-VA333ES	800	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Awesome on paper, but you'd be wiser to spend an extra £200 on the STR-VA555ES.	100x7	2/X/E	6	5	Yes
TEAC AG-5D	280	★★☆☆☆	Oct 03	Effective enough design with exciting, forceful sound, but it is not 6.1 capable.	125x5	D/E/2	3	3	Yes
TEAC AG-10D	350	★★★☆☆	Oct 03	Competent by class standards, but not quite in the front rank.	125x6	2/X/E	4	3	Yes
Yamaha RX-V440RDS	300	★★★★★	Oct 03	Terrific all-round ability - its muscular sound is involving and exciting to listen to.	65x6	2/X/E	2	4	Yes
✪ Yamaha DSP-AX640SE	400	★★★★★	Sep 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Outstanding home cinema ability at this price.	85x6	2/X/E	5	7	Yes
Yamaha RX-V640RDS	470	★★★★★	Aug 03	Improves on its little brother with better facilities and more power but it's £170 more.	90x6	2/X/E	5	5	Yes

£801 and over

Denon AVR-3803 7.1	899	★★★★☆	Jun 03	Impressive movie machine and more than good enough for occasional music.	150x7	2/S/X/E	7	9	Yes
Denon AVC-A11SR	1800	★★★★★	Mar 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Stunner - does everything most of us could ever need.	125x7	D/S/T	8	8	Yes
Denon AVC-A1SR	3000	★★★★☆	Sep 02	Formidable, combining muscle, refinement and high build quality to stunning effect.	170x5	2/X/E/T	11	8	Yes
Harman-Kardon AVR 5550	900	★★★★☆	May 03	Big, solid and flexible with powerful sound with movies - but it could be more musical.	70x7	2/E/X	4	10	Yes
Harman-Kardon AVR 5500	900	★★★★☆	Jun 03	Flexible and has reasonable power but it's a little too restrained in stereo for us.	70x5	2/D/S	6	6	Yes
✪ Harman-Kardon AVR 8500	1800	★★★★★	Feb 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Fantastic performer and has massive specifications.	100x5	2/D/E/X	8	5	Yes
Marantz SR9200	1999	★★★☆☆	Sep 02	Fine musical performance for a product of this type but it's disappointing with movies.	160x5	2/S/T/X	10	6	Yes
Marantz PS-17	2000	★★★★★	May 03	The PS-17 with two SM-17s power amps makes an exciting movie and music package.	60/-/-	2/E/X	6	5	Yes
Onkyo TX-NR900	1499	★★★★★	Aug 03	Outstandingly flexible - has PC connectivity and impressive home cinema performance.	150x7	2/X/E	8	6	Yes
Parasound Halo C1 and A51	8500	★★★★☆	Aug 03	The C1 processor and A51amp are worthy of a place at the table of home cinema elite.	Pre/250x5	X/E/2	8	6	Yes
✪ Pioneer VSX-AX5i	1200	★★★★★	Sep 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. New i.link connection ensures even better audio.	100x7	2/X/E	6	6	Yes
✪ Pioneer VSA-AX10	2700	★★★★★	Sep 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Simply the most complete integrated AV amp available.	170x7	2/T/X/E	8	7	Yes
Primare SPA20	2000	★★★★☆	Sep 03	Lacks the frills of some rivals but here at last is an AV amp that delivers with music.	100x5	2/X/E	2	6	Yes
Rotel RSX-1055	1195	★★★★☆	Jun 03	Excellent receiver but it is too expensive considering it is only 5.1 as standard.	75x5	X/E	5	5	Yes
Rotel RSX-1065	1795	★★★★★	Mar 02	We love the way it looks, we respect the features it carries, and boy, does it sound good.	100x5	2/E/X	5	5	Yes
Sherwood AVP-9080/AM-9080	1000	★★★★☆	May 99	A processor and multichannel power amp give you a lot of box for your money.	120x5	D/S	6	5	No
Sony STR-VA555ES	1000	★★★★★	Jun 02	Product of the Year in the Awards 2002. Outstanding build, features and specification.	100x5	2/X/E	6	5	Yes
Yamaha RX-V1300RDS	900	★★★★☆	Jun 03	Solid value for money with refined yet powerful sound, but it is not without competitors.	100x6	2/X/E	7	8	Yes
Yamaha DSP-AZ1	2000	★★★★☆	Sep 02	Plenty of power and dynamics but can sound hard-edged and aggressive.	130x6	2/X/E	11	11	Yes

KEY | Power Most surround amplifiers have ample power, so remember, more watts don't always mean better sound. Figures are shown in the order Left/Right, Centre, Surround, Rears (if provided). Modes P=Pro-Logic, 2=Prologic II, D=Pro-Logic & Dolby Digital, S=DTS, T=THX, X=Pro-Logic, Dolby Digital & Dolby Digital EX, E=DTS & DTS ES. Digital inputs The number of digital inputs for use with DVD players, CD players, etc. Video inputs Can be Component, S-Video, Composite Video, Scart. Six-Channel Inputs Vital for DVD-Audio/SACD multichannel

Velodyne VX-10	250	★★★★☆	Jul 03	Inexpensive way to get serious bass punch with movies. Less impressive as an all-rounder.	A100	-	-	-	38.30.43	Gy
Velodyne CHT-12	525	★★★★☆	May 02	One for the bigger space - great for movies, but a little OTT with music.	A175	-	-	-	45.38.53	Bk
Velodyne SPL-800	925	★★★★☆	Oct 02	If you want a tiny subwoofer with massive muscle, look no further.	A600	-	-	-	27.26.30	2
VIBE Alpha One	300	★★☆☆☆	Jun 02	Compact and generates lots of welly, but it's too raucous and bloated for our tastes.	A200	-	-	-	30.32.36	2
Wharfedale PowerCube PC-10A	200	★★★☆☆	Oct 02	Crunching movie action for not much money but it is marred by input hum.	A100	-	-	-	39.34.34	2
Yamaha YST-SW215	180	★★☆☆☆	Oct 03	The price makes it tempting, but performance is well below par.	A150	-	-	-	29.36.32	Bk
Yamaha YST-SW315	270	★★★☆☆	Sep 03	Decent enough subwoofer, though it is not quite good enough to excite.	A270	-	-	-	24.59.45	Bk

KEY | Power rating For active subwoofers, refers to the power output of the internal amplifier. For passive subs, refers to recommended maximum power handling. Sensitivity (passive speakers) The higher the figure, the louder the speaker will sound at a given amplifier setting. Impedance (passive speakers) Measured in ohms, shows how hard the speaker is for an amplifier to drive. Biwirable Can they be biwired (see Glossary)? Size Will it fit? Height x width x depth, measured in cms.

B&W DM600 package	1000	★★★★★	Jul 02	Beautiful and sounds great - if you have the space, these speakers have the quality.	150/120/100	90/88/88	8/8/8	3
B&W DM 603 S3 System	1850	★★★★☆	Aug 03	Requires a lot of space to be heard at its best but the sub amazes.	150x7/A500	90x7	8/8/8	2
Bose Acoustimass 6 Mk 2	550	★★★☆☆	Feb 03	Has cuteness on its side and it works adequately at very modest volume settings.	50x5	-/-/-	8/8/8	2
Bose Acoustimass 10 Mk III	700	★★★☆☆	Sep 03	Fair-sounding package and it's very, very small indeed, subwoofer apart.	100x5	-	4-8	2
Bose Acoustimass 15 Series II	1050	★★★★☆	Feb 03	Delivers thrills without filling the room with boxes - unusual but seamless soundfield.	100x5	-/-/-	4-8	2
Boston Digital Theater 6000	499	★★★★☆	Aug 99	Incredibly compact speakers and active sub with digital surround decoder.	A100	-	-	Bk
Boston Acoustics Micro 9000	1000	★★★★☆	May 01	Highly competitive, beautifully made and performs well in multichannel use.	125/125/100/A75	89/90/86	8/8/8	Bk
Boston Acous. VR940/910/VRS	1200	★★★☆☆	Jul 02	Intriguing, but not complete enough - it does some things well, but it lacks panache.	125/150/100	89/89/85	8/8/8	Bk
Canton Movie 10-MX II	349	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Eminently affordable, very stylish and certainly fun to listen to.	70/80/70/A100	85/87/85	4/4/4	3
Canton Movie CD 1	479	★★★★★	Awd 03	Tiny movie surround kit at a great price - an outstanding option.	150x5	86/85/86	4/4/4	4
Canton Karat	2866	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Highly impressive - a lot of speaker for your money and a decent level of ability, too.	80x5/A100	85/86/85	4/4/4	Al
Dynaudio Audience 62/42C/42	1347	★★★★★	Jul 02	Fantastic - partner with decent kit and you won't feel short-changed by the sound.	150x5	86/85/86	4/4/4	4
Elac Cinema One 5.1	399	★★★★★	Dec 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Stylish, affordable and it works.	120x5/A55	84/84/84	6/6/6	2
Elac Cinema XL	499	★★★☆☆	Mar 03	Good-looking but its average performance is eclipsed by the Elac Cinema One.	120/150/120/A55	85/87/85	6/6/6	Sl
Elac Cinema 3 ESP	999	★★★☆☆	Feb 03	Sleek and beautifully made, but fail to deliver the performance their price demands.	50x5/A80	86/86/86	4/4/4	Al
Eltax Liberty (with bipolar rears)	750	★★★★☆	Apr 03	Affordable route to big-sounding surround sound, and stereo music sounds good too.	A175/130/130	-/87/87	-/8/8	2
Energy Take 5	400	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Still effective, but no longer class-leading.	100x5	88/88/88	8/8/8	Bk
Energy Take 5.2/S8.2	599	★★★☆☆	Feb 03	Good-looking, but it lacks all-out welly and never quite stops sounding small.	100x5/A100	89/89/89	4/4/4	Bk
Focal-JM Lab Sib & Cub	859	★★★★☆	Feb 03	Cute satellite speakers and a sub - good, but some way off being a class-leader.	75x5/A75	90/90/90	6/6/6	2
Gale HT30.1	300	★★★☆☆	Oct 03	Bood price but the powerful enough subwoofer sounds muffled instead of tight.	80x5/A65	85/87/85	8/8/8	2
Heybrook HB3 package	980	★★★★☆	Jul 02	Strong value, a superb option for some - best with aggressive-sounding receivers.	90/75/70/A150	90/90/89	6/6/6	2
Infinity Oreus sub/sat package	700	★★★★★	Mar 03	Breathtaking design that successfully combines great sound with bags of appeal.	100x5/A100	85/85/85	6/6/6	Sl
Jamo A330 PDD.3	399	★★★☆☆	Aug 01	Largely competent with decent sound at low volume levels, but rivals do it better.	75x5/A100	90/90/90	6/6/6	15
Jamo A410PDD	649	★★★★☆	Jun 02	Attractive package with very slim satellites and a sub - seriously room-friendly.	50x5/A100	88/88/88	6/6/6	3
Jamo D830PDD	3195	★★★★☆	Sep 00	Most of the virtues of top-quality home cinema, and it sounds great with music too.	120/110/150	90/91/90	4/4/6	Ch
Jamo D7PEX	4499	★★★★☆	Feb 03	Seven-speakers and two-subs - good value sofa-shaking sound even at this price.	200x3/100/A400	89/89/87	4/4/4	Gry
KEF Coda 90/80/70	730	★★★★☆	Nov 02	Good, solid buy and a very contemporary look into the bargain.	125/100/70	91/91/91	8/8/8	2
✪ KEF KHT 2005.2	800	★★★★★	Sep 03	Product of the Year in the Awards 2003. Effortlessly desirable and easy to install.	100x5/A250	88/88/88	8/8/8	2
KEF Q1/Q9C/PSW2000	1000	★★★★☆	Jul 02	High-quality and very capable, but for outright welly it can't match heftier rivals.	120x5/A250	91/91/91	8/8/8	3
✪ KEF Q7 AV	2300	★★★★★	Aug 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Highly competent with everything you want to play.	175/120x5/A250	91x7	8x7	3
KEF TDM 23F/23C/34DS/45B	2700	★★★★★	Feb 99	Bags of bass and drive means they get close to real cinema sound.	200/200/150	90/90/88	4/4/4	Bk
Klegg M6-5.01	399	★★★☆☆	Jun 02	Tiny egg-shaped speakers that will win fans, but its sonic performance lags behind.	30x5/A50	89/89/89	6/6/6	3
✪ M&K K-5 package	1715	★★★★★	Oct 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. For those looking for great sound from small cabinets.	200x3/A75	-/-/-	8/8/8	3
M&K 750THX	2715	★★★★★	Jun 99	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Absolutely stunning home cinema performance.	200x5	90/90/NA	4/4/8	Bk
✪ M&K 850/CS35/V-850	3900	★★★★★	Jul 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Highly innovative - works well in a tight space.	200x5/A125	91/91/90	4/4/4	3
Mirage Omnisats SE/OM200	1695	★★★★☆	Feb 03	We like the Omnisat concept - there's real benefits for home cinema applications.	150x5/A200	89/89/89	8/8/8	4

Five Stars for Value

Does the best price always mean the best deal? Ask our top twenty UK specialist hi-fi dealers.

"I thought I had this buying hi-fi business sorted out. I bought all the hi-fi magazines and read them thoroughly, because I reckoned their experts knew exactly what they were talking about - at least a lot more than I did! It was reassuring to see the same product names cropping up regularly and I figured the writers' experience and guidance would steer me straight to the system of my dreams. The trouble is I've ended up more confused than when I started".

One reviewer said a product I fancied was absolutely brilliant but another said it was nothing special at all. How can that be? Surely one CD player is pretty much the same as another? And how can a loudspeaker that's one magazine's top recommendation not get so much as a mention in any of the others? I don't mind admitting it, I'm completely lost."

Plan B - I'm going for a deal

"So, I've decided to adopt plan B. I'm sure there can't be any really dramatic differences between all this gear and it's all bound to work together properly, so I'm going to check the price lists and the adverts and shop around for the best deal. I know getting the right hi-fi is important hey, I'm as mad about music as anyone but if I can get close to the mark and save a few quid, I'm sure I'll end up with a good system and be happy. I know there are specialist shops out there that do demonstrations and reckon they've got all the solutions but, to be honest, I'm a bit scared of going to one. I'd really welcome some advice and guidance but I don't know all the technical jargon and I'd feel daft sitting there trying to 'hear the differences' if I couldn't. Anyway, a friend told me that these shops only sell the really expensive gear and that they're not interested if you don't have loads of money to spend."

And so another hi-fi buyer starts his journey down the road to dissatisfaction, endless upgrades and a permanent overdraft.

There is only one way to buy a hi-fi system that will prove satisfying, reliable and deliver true value for money, and that's through a specialist hi-fi dealer. Let's face it, you wouldn't think about buying a car if you couldn't take it for a test drive. You wouldn't buy a house solely on the strength of seeing the estate agent's details and a photograph. Even if you're spending far less, say buying a jacket or a pair of shoes, you want to try them on to make sure they fit you.

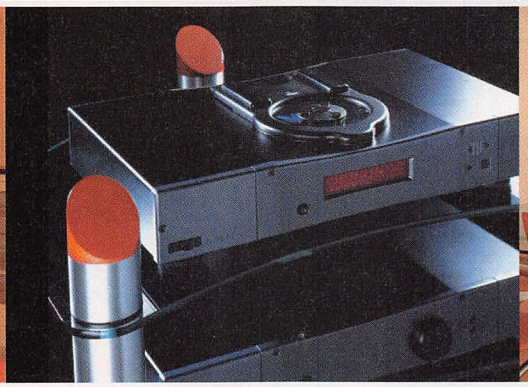
Buying a hi-fi system is no different. It doesn't matter what the specifications say or what the 'experts' think: if it doesn't measure up to what you want from a system, then it's not the right choice. Knowing that you've bought a room full of five-star favourites or best-buys is no consolation when you can't bear to listen to them for more than five minutes. Even that ten per cent discount on the price won't make them sound any better.

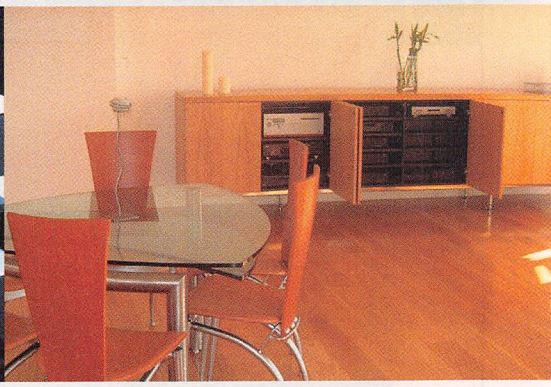
Buying or being sold to?

Mind you, most of us are easily suckered when it comes to buying hi-fi. Given the choice of venturing into the unknown territory of a specialist dealer's shop and exerting some influence over what we buy, or taking what looks like the easy route having adverts and magazine reviews push us along a path sweetened with discounts and special offers - we opt for the latter. We don't buy a system, we allow ourselves to be sold one. We side-line our own ideas about quality and personal satisfaction and buy someone else's opinion of what's good for us and good value for our money.

Take control!

Now there's a group of long-established, independent specialist dealers who are





> "You wouldn't think about buying a car if you couldn't take it for a test drive. You wouldn't buy a house solely on the strength of seeing the estate agent's details."

totally committed to putting the customer back in the driving seat. They're encouraging the buyer to take control with a little help and guidance provided where required. They know how difficult it can be to establish the true quality and worth of hi-fi and home cinema systems. They know that without experiencing the performance of the systems they offer, you can't possibly assess the value of them. That's why their idea of 'selling' is to play the systems for you and allow you to be the judge.

Listening to your choice of music in a peaceful, well organised demonstration room, you may be surprised and, almost certainly, relieved to discover how easy it is to hear the differences between components and between systems. With the dealer's help and advice you will be able to make a clear and informed decision about what to buy. It comes down to trusting your own judgement rather than the opinion of a reviewer you've never met ... and who won't refund your money if you're not satisfied or be at the end of a phone to sort out any problems you might encounter.

The story doesn't end there. These shops won't abandon you once you've put your hand into your pocket. They won't leave you to set up the system you've selected as best you can. They'll install it in your home, make sure it sounds great, and make sure that you're entirely happy with the way it works.

Why bother?

There is, of course, one question that hasn't been answered: why should you and these dealers go to all this trouble? Well, from your point of view maybe it's because a good deal is about a great deal more than just price. unless you've got money to burn, you'll be living with your new system for years - years during which most of those five star products will probably stop shining quite so brightly. As far as the dealers are concerned, maybe they believe that taking care of their customers properly is a nicer way of doing business than just handing over boxes.

Listed below are 20 of the best hi-fi shops in the country. They all have lots of stars. You'll find them on the shop floor: they're the people waiting to guide customers towards hi-fi that will give them years of musical enjoyment and total satisfaction.

van den Hul D352 Hybrid	18	★★★★☆	Oct 99	Plenty of punch and attack without harshness. Just lacks that special sparkle.	21mm	Cp	MS	Yes

KEY | Diameter This figure is given in millimetres. Where a cable is of a 'flat' construction, rather than circular in cross-section, we indicate its depth. So '10' means the cable is 1cm in diameter, while 'f4' means a 4mm deep flat cable. Materials Almost all cables have cores made of metal, and copper of varying degrees of purity is the most common material employed. We indicate this as:Cp = copper, Sl = silver, CF = carbon fibre, O = other. Type S = solid core, MS = multistranded. Directional Some manufacturers indicate a direction on cables. Arrows indicate the output to input orientation.

LAT International IC-100 MkII	116	★★★★☆	Mar 98	Can deliver to your amp the sort of bass subwoofers love - fast, extended and exciting.	1.0m	P	Cp/Sl	S	Yes
LAT International IC-200 MkII	175	★★★☆☆	Oct 97	Fine levels of detail, resolution and bass but there's a fierce streak in its treble.	1.0m	P	Cp/Sl	S	Yes
✪ Merlin Chopin	85	★★★★★	Oct 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Superb - punchy, clean and rhythm-driven presentation.	1.0	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Nordost Black Knight	68	★★★★★	Apr 97	Clean sounding with enhanced clarity, extended bandwidth and dynamic resolution.	1.0m	P/D/X	Cp	S	Yes
Nordost Solar Wind	95	★★★★★	Mar 98	Technically interesting and fine-sounding - this is one exciting cable.	1.0 m	P/D/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Nordost Blue Heaven	165	★★★★☆	Oct 99	Exciting and full of attack and drive but up-front sound won't suit everyone.	1.0m	P/D/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Nordost Cinemaflex Bassl(mono)	290	★★★★☆	Oct 02	If you have a very, very good subwoofer in your set-up buy this great sounding cable.	5.0	P/X	Cp/SL	MS	Yes
Nordost Red Dawn	330	★★★★☆	May 98	At this price it's one for high-end set-ups, but an exhilarating listen.	1.0m	P/D/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Precious Metals CopperTech Alpha	25	★★★★★	Sep 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Great value - performance that usually costs lots more.	1.0m	P	Al	S	No
Precious Metals Silver Signal 52	100	★★★★★	Oct 97	Highly listenable, the focus on instruments within the wide open soundstage is fabulous.	1.0m	P/B/D	Sl/Cp	MS	No
Precious Metals Silver Signal 100	140	★★★★☆	Oct 03	Pleasant and airy delivery - may help round off any harsh edges your system may have.	1.0m	P/B/D	Sl/Al	MS	No

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Height	Materials	Colour	Fillable
Alphason AG50-c	99	★★★☆☆	Aug 03	Chrome exterior is easy on the eye but sadly it's easy to find fault in the performance.	50	Metal	2	Yes
Apollo A1	40	★★★★☆	Feb 99	Effective, if a little crude, being reasonably weighty and very rigid.	40-90	Metal	4	Yes
Apollo A2/5	55	★★★☆☆	Aug 98	Simple and affordable, they do a decent enough job in an entry-level system.	50	Metal	4	Yes
Apollo Olympus	80	★★★★★	Dec 96	Good looking; rock steady platform lets speakers enjoy sharper focus and tighter bass.	16-24	Metal	4	Yes
Apollo AZ range	95	★★★★☆	Aug 96	Make music strong, vibrant. Bass weight and timing excellent. Best in larger rooms.	38-61	Metal	4	Yes
Atacama Nexus 6	60	★★★★★	Dec 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. For build, price and sonic balance these are a steal.	60	Metal	3	Yes
Atacama SE6	90	★★★★☆	Aug 03	Well-designed and looks smart - doesn't boost sonic performance quite as well as the best.	60	Metal	3	Yes
Atacama R724	250	★★★★☆	Jan 02	Fine choice for top-notch speakers - they maximise punch and bass response, big time.	60	Metal	3	Yes
IF Design Tenchi Classic	166	★★★★☆	Sep 02	Beautifully built these stands are all about precision. Worthy of serious consideration.	65	Wd	5	No

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Weight	Type	Jack
AKG K-55	25	★★★☆☆	Aug 99	Good imaging and detail although at times we wished for more excitement.	210	Closed	3.5/6.3
AKG K-66	30	★★★☆☆	Apr 00	Don't suit long listening sessions but they work a treat for a dip into the classics.	210	Closed	3.5/6.3
AKG K105 UHF	60	★★★★★	Nov 00	By far the best-sounding cordless designs we have heard and the system works a treat.	220	S/Open	3.5/6.3
AKG K141 Monitor	80	★★★☆☆	Jul 02	Retro design and surprisingly comfortable, but they lack dynamic range.	225	S/Open	3.5/6.3
AKG K240 Monitor	100	★★★★☆	Sep 91	Smooth and enjoyable but low end coloration slightly softens and slurs deep bass.	240	S/Open	3.5/6.3
AKG K401	100	★★★☆☆	Feb 98	Reasonably dynamic and expressive headphones. They're certainly worth an audition.	230	Open	3.5/6.3
AKG K501	130	★★★☆☆	Jul 98	If you're a fan of bass-driven tracks the K501s are worth a listen.	230	Open	3.5/6.3
AKG Hearo 777 Quadra	220	★★★☆☆	Dec 02	Wireless phones that can simulates eight speakers in the cans. Not great with stereo.	320	S/Open	3.5/6.3
AKG K1000	550	★★★☆☆	Jul 93	Pleasing sense of space that doesn't give that in the head sound. Need a quality amp.	270	Open	XLR
Audio Technica ATH-910 Pro	84	★★☆☆☆	Feb 98	Average at best, they lack drive and punch and rock is distinctly undramatic.	205	Closed	6.3
Audio Technica ATH-M40FS	105	★★★★☆	Jun 97	'Studio' headphones with an excellent balance across a wide range of music.	250	Closed	6.3
Beyer DT 131	30	★★★★☆	Aug 99	Easygoing, lightweight and comfy and they pack a punch despite low volume.	130	Open	3.5/6.3
Beyer DT 231 Galactic	45	★★★★★	Aug 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Delivers music with confidence and dynamic agility.	130	Closed	3.5/6.3
Beyer DT 331	70	★★★☆☆	Jul 96	Sound surprisingly flat. Comfortable enough to prevent fatigue over longterm listening.	240	Open	3.5/6.3
Beyer DT 431	80	★★★★☆	Feb 95	Firmly in the top deck, but the sound is not gutsy enough to do justice to all music.	210	Open	3.5/6.3
Beyer DT 531	100	★★★★☆	Jul 02	Achieve a warm, realistic sound with most genres from complex metal to classical.	240	Open	3.5/6.3
Beyer DT 831	120	★★★☆☆	Jul 98	Handle busy mixes with ease but trade timing for detail.	295	Closed	3.5/6.3
Beyer DT 990	200	★★★★☆	Oct 03	Partner with a suitable headphone amp and you're guaranteed a pleasant, long-term listen.	NA	Open	3.5/6.3
Ergo Model 2	149	★★★★☆	Feb 98	Not cheap and look daffy but they sound great and are fabulous for acoustic music.	365	Open	6.3

Grado SR60	90	★★★★★	Jan 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Remarkably airy, open sound.	200	Open	3.5/6.3
Grado SR80	110	★★★★★	Feb 98	Truly wonderful headphones, they may not look it but these headphones are special.	200	Open	3.5/6.3
Grado SR125	160	★★★★☆	Nov 99	Deserve high praise for their sound - only their lack of comfort counts against them.	140	Open	6.3
Grado SR225	210	★★★★☆	Jul 98	Look basic but they amaze with their power and presence. These Grados are hard to beat.	200	Open	6.3
Grado RS1	750	★★★★★	Apr 98	Earth-movingly good, these wooden 'phones draw you right into the heart of music.	255	Open	6.3
Koss PortaPro KP-PP1	45	★★★☆☆	Feb 95	Designed for portability, they make a good upgrade from those supplied with personals.	59	Open	3.5/6.3
Koss StudioPro KP-R200	80	★★★☆☆	Jul 02	Comfortable but sound quality is below par - there are cheaper phones that sound better.	215	Open	3.5/6.3
Philips SBC-HP890	70	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Substantial, with vast velvet padded ear-shells, but they sound rather average.	330	Closed	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser MX500 (in-ear)	20	★★★★★	Jan 01	Much better bass, imaging and tonal purity over freebie in-ears. Funky little carry case.	N/A	in-ear	3.5
Sennheiser HD 433	20	★★★☆☆	Aug 97	OK for the price but no more, being all bass and treble with nothing much inbetween.	115	Open	3.5/6.3
✪ Sennheiser PX100	30	★★★★★	Apr 03	Best Buy in the Awards 2003. Superb folding headphones.	60	Open	3.5
Sennheiser HD497	50	★★★★☆	Jul 02	Good value and sound quality is decent for 'phones that are are as svelte as these.	130	Open	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser HD-500	70	★★★★☆	Jan 99	Comfortable with sensible styling and the sound quality is well up to the mark.	210	Open	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser HD 270	80	★★★★☆	Nov 00	If you want to lock yourself away these circumaural phones are for you.	220	Closed	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser RS 45	80	★★☆☆☆	Oct 01	Wireless headphones - sound tinny and insubstantial, regardless of what you feed them.	160	Open	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser HD 570 Symphony	90	★★★★☆	Nov 99	Near-perfect performance at a very affordable price. Will sit comfortably on most heads.	210	Open	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser HDC 451	90	★★★★☆	Aug 99	Look the business and we love the technology used to reduce background noise.	110	Open	3.5/6.3
Sennheiser HD 250II	160	★★★★☆	Apr 92	Bring a sense of realism and natural rhythm to a sound that draws you in.	215	Closed	3.5/6.3

Sennheiser HD-600	250	★★★★★	Oct 97	Open, revealing, neutral and dynamic. Costly, but worth it for major headphone users.	260	Open	3.5/6.3
Sony MDR-CD780	75	★★★★☆	Jul 02	Deliver bags of detail with exuberance - try with your music before you buy.	300	Closed	3.5/6.3
Sony MDR-V700DJ	100	★★★☆☆	Nov 99	Ooze with hi-tech elegance but they fail to hack it on sound.	300	Closed	3.5/6.3
Vivanco SR210	30	★★★★☆	Jan 01	Respectable bass and they convey instruments with an airy feel.	N/A	Open	3.5/6.3
Vivanco FMH8080	100	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Wireless cans that offer sturdy sound and good bass but they are no better than average.	260	Closed	3.5/6.3

KEY | Weight Given in grammes. Remember the lightest headphones aren't always the least comfortable, and a slightly heavier pair might sit more firmly on your head. Type Open-back headphones tend to give a sound that's more airy, spacious and well, open! Closed-back designs offer better isolation from outside noise, and usually better bass, while semi-open headphones attempt to combine the best points of the two styles. Jack 6.3mm for separates, 3.5mm for personals and minis.

Ergo Series

A delicate membrane compresses and relaxes air masses.

Invisibly the room fills. You close your eyes.

Like a wall, a full orchestra is formed before you.

It transports you – to the Carnegie Hall, to La Scala, to another time, to another world. Experience the power of music.

CANTON®

pure music
